The case of Mrs. Edward Myers, of Rondout, New York, furnishes an apt illustration of woman's power of endurance. This lady had been treated for months in the usual way for Erysipelas of the hand, without benefit. Not until her hand had become a mass of putrified flesh, did she turn to Dr. Kennedy, proprietor of the "Favorite Remedy," for help. He at once informed her that it was impossible to save the hand—it must be amputated. She received this terrible intelligence quietly, declined to take ether, stipulating merely to hold her husband's hand during the operation, and underwent the painful process without moving a muscle or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy then gave "Favorite Remedy" freely to cleanse the blood and prevent the return of the disease, and Mrs. Myers now lives and rejoices in her great deliverence.

"Favorite Remedy" is fast becoming a trusted household friend in all cases of Female Weaknesses and diseases of the blood. One dollar a battle. Your druggist has it.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., author of the "Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves, from his own experience, that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of six cents or two postage stamps. We have also a sure cure for tape worm. Address

ALBERT VITTUM, Manager.
JOHN P. FERNALD, Editor.
CHAS. D. HOWARD & CO., Proprietors.

We trust that our readers will excuse all inaccuracies that may be found in our paper to-day. We had prepared a paper devoted to the dedicatory exercises of the Soldiers' Monument, and were not informed of the action of the Committee until Monday, since which time our entire paper has had to be reset, and the haste necessary to get out on time will account for any errors or omissions. We take this opportunity to thank all who have kindly assisted us in getting out this number.

The Monument Committee and the Grand Army.

It will be a matter of surprise to many, probably, that the contemplated exercises dedicating our Soldiers' Monument will not take place to-morrow. Still more is it to be regretted that there should be anything but harmony between the Citizens' Monument Committee and the members of the Grand Army Post of the town. Last week we commended the action of the Committee in deciding to dispense with the parade, and we still think it would have been indecorous, at least at this time, when the news of the burial of our lamented President has but just reached us, to have had the bustle and stir which would necessarily attend such a dedication. But we were not aware—we do not think the Monument Committee were aware—of the great disappointment which their action has caused the Grand Army. They had sent out invitations to the different Posts, inviting them to participate, and many of them had already gone to the expense of engaging music for the occasion. These invitations, of course, had to be revoked. Such was the state of affairs when the Post held a meeting Friday evening, and appointed a committee to wait on the Monument Committee, to see if a further postponement could be agreed upon. They waited upon them, were cordially received, and respectfully heard, and were promised a decision.

On Sunday the Monument Committee received from Rev. J. F. Lovering, whom they had engaged as orator for the occasion, a dispatch (given elsewhere) showing that the Commander of the Post, by their authority and consent we should judge, had sent a letter to him (also given elsewhere), which the Committee feel was interfering with their programme.

By request of one of the Selectmen a committee of the Post waited upon them yesterday afternoon. No conclusion was arrived at, as the Monument is yet in the hands of the contractors, and when finished and paid for will be the property of the town, subject to whatever action the citizens may see fit to take. We feel sorry that there has been any difference between the Committee and the Post, and sympathize with both. We know the members of the Committee too well to think they would act other than according to what seemed to them most advisable, and we can understand the natural disappointment of the Post in the matter, and we cannot help thinking that if outsiders had understood more of the case before pronouncing too strongly upon it, and some of our contemporaries were less generous in allowing immature youths to give opinions where they ought to be confined to facts, much unpleasant feeling might have been avoided.

A copy of a telegram, dated Worcester, Sept. 25, 1881, to the Secretary of the Monumental Committee, has been handed in to us for publication by the chairman, C. W. Osborn, Esq., viz:

Letter just received from Commander of Post 50. Cannot matters be composed? I do not wish to take part in any service that will put me in antagonism with the Grand Army of the Republic. J. F. LOVERING.

We understand that a letter was received from Mr. Lovering yesterday, written to the Monument Committee, in substance as follows: "I have received from the Commander of Post 50 a letter written, at his request, by some one representing Post 50;" ending: "I must be excused from taking part in your proposed dedication.." The following is a copy of the Post's letter to Mr. Lovering, the original of which is in our possession:

PEABODY, Mass., Sept. 24, '81.
Rev. J. F. LOVERING:

Dear Sir and Comrade,—An unpleasant state of affairs has come about in relation to the dedication of our Monument, and it is deemed advisable by the Post that a statement of the same should be made to you, in order that you may not be surprised at the non-appearance of the Post on Thursday next, in the event of your visit here. We have no desire to influence you unduly in your relations with our Monumental Committee, but feel that justice requires just a statement of affairs to you.

The Committee have done a great deal of work and secured us a Monument which is a credit to the town and highly approved by all. As was proper and acceptable they retained in their own hands the management of affairs relating to dedication. But for more than a year, in an informal way, they have been getting at the wishes of the Post and encouraging them to make liberal plans. They authorized and requested the Post to invite all the Posts in the county, which was done, and favorable replies have been received from several. On receipt of news of the President's death, the Committee informally consulted officers and other members of the Post, and it was decided and expected that a postponement of the services would be made. But the Committee decided to observe Thursday with a radically changed programme.

While none would acquiesce more cordially in a postponement at this time than the Post, its members feel that arrangements had reached a stage which did not justify so marked a change, and, as a consequence, the Post will not appear on that occasion, but will endeavor, at a later period, to carry out what they think a proper programme, a position in which they believe they are sustained by nearly all citizens. The members of the Monumental Committee are some of our best men, and personally there is nothing but good feeling toward them. But the feeling officially is very strong.—None would be more glad to receive you than the members of Post 50, and their thanks are sent you for past services to them, and to the Grand Army generally. But as the dedication has ceased to partake of the nature of a Soldier or Grand Army occasion, they thought you would be pleased to understand the situation.

Yours in F. C. and L.

By request of W. M. Ward, Com'er Union Post 50, G. A. R.

The Monument Committee on Saturday evening last decided unanimously to "hereby relinquish the duties entrusted to us by your Board of the dedication of the Soldiers' Monument of the town."

Owing to an uniutentional neglect on the part of the secretary of the Monument Committee Post 50 was not invited to be present to-morrow, and consequently took no action relative to appeariug.

The condition of affairs at present is as follows: The monument is now in the hands of the contractors (the Hallowell Granite Co.). When finished and their bill approved by the Monument Committee, the Selectmen will draw an order upon the Town Treasurer for the payment thereof. The monument will then become the property of the town, and the matter of dedication will depend upon whatever action the citizens will see fit to take.

A season-ticket passenger on the Boston & Maine railroad, by the goodness of his heart took a fine little job upon his hands. A person wanted some one to take a child to Boston to its mother, who would be at the depot to receive it. Our friend, who loves babies, was delighted with his charge; along the way, pointed to the little cherub every object that afforded pleasure, and watched attentively a half dozen boxes and bundles that came with the two-year-old piece of humanity, but was in a queer dilemma when no mother appeared in Boston to claim the child, nor was the little one old enough to tell in what part of the city she could be found.—He was in a hurry to attend to business, but that only made him sweat. He watched the people coming and going and watched the clock hands till a full hour had passed. Then he consulted the directory, and ran to attend infantile wants, but he was a married man and those didn't trouble him; and so another hour went by before the mother appeared to relieve him. He was a soldier during the Rebellion, but declares that all the battles he was in were nothing to the suspense of those two hours. He don't love babies as well as he did. He says he never was so perplexed but once, when he had to sit between two girls as a punishment in school.—Valley Visitor.

At noon, Sept. 22, Gen. Arthur, after having been previously sworn in at New York, took the official oath of office in the Marble Room of the Capitol in the presence of the members of tne Cabinet and several others who could be notified in season. It was administered by Chief Justice Waite clad in his full robes of office, after which President Arthur read from his manuscript the following address:

For the fourth time in the history of the republic its Chief Magistrate has been removed by death. All hearts are filled with grief and horror at the hideous crime which has darkened our land, and the memory of the murdered President, his protracted sufferings, his unyielding fortitude, the example and achievements of his life, and the pathos of his death, will forever illumine the pages of our history. For the fourth time the officer elected by the people and ordained by the constitution to fill the vacancy so created is called to assume the Executive chair. The wisdom of our fathers, foreseeing even the most dire possibilities, made sure that the government should never be imperilled because of the uncertainty of human life. Men may die, but the fabrics of our free institutions remain unshaken. No higher or more assuring proof could exist of the strength and permanence of popular government than the fact that though the chosen of the people be struck down, his constitutional successor is peacefully installed without shock or strain, exdept the sorrow which mourns the bereavement.

All the noble aspirations of my lamented predecessor, which found expression in his life, the measures devised and suggested during his brief administration to correct abuses and enforce economy, to advance prosperity and promote the general welfare, to ensure domestic security and maintain friendly and honorable relations with all the nations of the earth, will be garnered in the hearts of the people, and it will be my earnest endeavor to profit by his example and experience. Prosperity blesses our country. Our fiscal policy is fixed by law, is well grounded and generally approved. No threatening issue mars our foreign intercourse, and the wisdom, integrity and thrift of our people may be trusted to continue undisturbed. The present assured career of peace, tranquility and welfare, the gloom and anxiety which have enshrouded the country, must make repose especially welcome now. No demand for speedy legislation has been heard; no adequate occasion is apparent for an unusual session of Congress.

The constitution defines the functions and powers of the Executive as clearly as those of either of the other two departments of the government, and he must answer for the just exercise of the discretion it permits, and the performance of the duties it imposes. Summoned to these high duties and responsibilities and profoundly conscious of their magnitude and gravity, I assume the trust imposed by the Constitution, relying for aid on the Divine guidance and the virtue, patriotism and intelligence of the American people.

The story told by our neighbor about the adopted citizen that wanted to sing to the Selectmen was "awfully funny," and reminds us of an incident which happened more recently and which was certainly ludicrous, but the result was not quite so satisfactory. An Irishman with a desire to serve his party that was commendable and a young politician who had his own advancement and a fat office in view, were the principal actors. Now it would seem that Patrick (for short) had sadly neglected his early education, and the midnight oil had been burned and many an anxious hour had been spent by that young aspirant for office in trying to learn him to write. The Selectmen's room, opposite the town clerk's office at the town house, had even been used as a practice room. Finally the time for registration was about over, the town officers were very busy, and all was confusion. Now! now is the time for Patrick to strike for instructor and his party, and he marches boldly up, takes the pen in hand, and as he does so the young politician hovers near to see the effect of his teachings, and soon all is over. There is the paper, with the indistinct hieroglyphics. The Selectmen are in doubt; what does it say? Patrick is called up to read it to them, which he does very readily.—But hold on, will he please? Spell it for them. This was too much; Patrick was stuck. He turned upon his instructor, who had nothing to say; he had hoped to have squeezed him through at the last moment, but failed, and E. Moody Boynton was the loser of one vote at least in consequence.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Appropriate services were held at the several churches last Sunday. At the Congregationalist Church Rev. W. G. Sperry preached from Deut. 11:26: "Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse." The church was finely decorated, as described elsewhere.

At the Methodist Church Rev. Dr. Steele preached on "The World's Unanswered Prayer." The church displayed mourning on the gas-burners and the pulpit was heavily draped in mourning, as was also a large portrait of Gen. Garfield in front of the pulpit; a dish of flowers was placed on each side.

At the Baptist Church Rev. L. L. Wood preached from Psalms, 4:1 and 2: "Hear me when I call, O God of my righteousness; thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress; have mercy upon me, and hear my prayer. O ye sons of men, how long will ye turn my glory into shame? how long will ye love vanity, and seek after leasing?" The church was finely draped and looked very pretty. The display of flowers was very profuse. A portrait of Gen. Garfield was placed on a table in the rear of the pulpit, and the intervening spaces filled with ferns and flowers, while bouquets and cut flowers were in profusion about the pulpit.

At the Unitarian Church Rev. J. W. Hudson preached from II. Samuel, 1:19: "The beauty of Israel is slain upon thy high places: how are the mighty fallen!" The pulpit and organ were festooned with black and white cloth and two handsome bouquets of green and white flowers were on each side of the pulpit. The exercises were all of a memorial character. Mr. Hudson feelingly alluded to the great affliction which has fallen upon the Nation, causing profound grief all over the world, and drew an encouraging picture from the manner in which the American people had with one accord, North and South, dropped all political and sectional strife, and come together in one common grief to mourn the loss of a President of the whole people. Mr. Hudson prayed that the wisdom and ability necessary for his great task might not be found wanting in President Garfield's successor, and that the country might not suffer in the end for the great sorrow which has fallen upon her now.

A memorial service was held at the Rockville Congregational Church on Sunday last, Rev. Mr. Colwell taking for his text these words from 2d Samuel —"Know ye not that a prince and great man has fallen this day in Israel." He said the sad events of the last week had turned the attention, not only of every American but of the whole world, crowned heads as well as the humblest subject, to the contemplation of the character of a true man, who, from obscurity, had risen step by step to the highest place in the gift of the American people. He spoke at length upon his ability and integrity as a statesman, his strength of character as a ruler, his tenderness as son and husband, and, above all, the purity of his life. The front and sides of the pulpit were entirely concealed from view by the stars and stripes, heavily draped with the emblems of mourning, while in front, on a stand which was also covered from view by the draped flag, rested a portrait of the lamented president, covered with black and relieved by knots of white ribbon, and also an ivy wreath and bunch of wheat twined with ivy, and directly in front of this stands, resting on the floor, pots of native ferns.

The services at the Universalist Church last Sunday were especially arranged as a memorial of the President. The decorations were appropriate and in excellent taste. The pulpits and tables were covered with black cloth and a picture of the President was placed in front. The wall of the recess behind the desk was draped with white and black and the windows at the side festooned with flags. The floral tributes consisted of a crown, sheaf of wheat, a pyramid of flowers, an anchor and a lyre. On one side of the platform was a broken column entwined with green. A growing English ivy was arranged about the picture and a dove rested at the top. The organ was overhung with a flag draped with black. At the commencement of service Pleyel's hymn was rendered by the organist, and all of the music was of a suitable character. The words of Taylor's and Montgomery's hymns that were sung seemed peculiarly applicable to the life and character of the President and the circumstances of his death. Rev. Mr. Harmon, in his sermon, portrayed the life of the President and the elements of his character as illustrated by his affection for his family and the earnest devotion to the duties and requirements of every position in which he was placed. He compared the state of public sentiment at the present time with that at the time of President Lincoln's death, and spoke of the gradual improvement through the past 80 days in the public mind with regard to the cause of the crime and the duty of the Government in dealing with the perpetrator. That a desire for revenge had given place to a purpose to steadily maintain law and order and a realization that the continuance of free institutions depends upon upholding with dignity the authority of the Government. The relation of incidents of the last days of the President's life was quite affecting and the whole service impressive.

At the St. John's Church, although there were no decorations, the services were memorial in their character. Rev. James Conlon preached from Ecclus., 38:16: "My son, shed tears for the dead; and begin to lament as if thou hadst suffered some great harm, and according to judgment, cover his body, and neglect not his burial." The speaker dwelt upon the different lessons to be drawn from the assassination of our Chief Magistrate, the character of the man, the loss which the country sustains by his death, and the noble conduct of Mrs. Garfield during her great trial. The moment the bullet struck our innocent President, a deep and lasting disgrace was hurled upon us all, which it is our duty as citizens to wipe away. He depicted the life of Gen. Garfield as he rose from a poor boy to the highest office man can reach. Never before in the history of any country has such universal sympathy been shown to any one individual as during the past week has been tendered the memory of President Garfield.—Kings and emperors have died, but never before has the whole world been so united in its grief. Father Conlon said that, as Catholics, he and his whole congregation had a common feeling with their Protestant brothers. But as Irishmen and as Irish American citizens, it only increased the intense love they have for their country. For it is here that they obtain the freedom which is denied them in their native land.

The Episcopal chapel was very neatly decorated with mourning material. In the afternoon Rev. George Walker, the rector, delivered an impressive sermon in tribute to the martyred President, dwelling at length upon the heroic manner in which the sufferer endured all the pain of his long sickness, and also giving praise to his devoted wife, herself just up from a serious illness, for her faithfulness and love, a fit representative of true womanhood.

The Salem Oratorio Society will commence rehearsals about the middle of October. They will be held on Tuesday evenings, at Lyceum Hall. Handel's "Samson" will first be taken up and rendered at the first concert of the season. At the second concert Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," and Beethoven's "Mount of Olives" will be given. The latter has never been sung by the society. Honorary members will be entitled to three tickets to each of two concerts given by the society during the season, and admission with one other person to all the rehearsals. We trust that the society will be favored with a large number of honorary members.

A council of the American Legion of Honor was organized in Franklin Hall, last evening, D. D. Grand Commander David B. Kimball, of Salem presiding. This council started with nearly one hundred members and bids fair to be the best and is certainly today the cheapest of any of the mutual insurance orders. The election and installation of officers was deferred to next Friday evening and the charter is still open so that all desiring to become members at the next meeting should take immediate action as after the charter is closed greater expense is necessitated.

If the entrance to the Post Office is one of our public thoroughfares, it should be kept clear. Some of the persons who stop in the doorway to open letters or chat with a friend do not consider that they are obstucting a public passage way, and to such a word is sufficent. But the young swells who probably never get any but dunning letters, and who plant themselves squarely in a conspicuous place, near the entrance and stare every lady out of countenance, should be made to "git."

It has been suggested that the School Committee might make arrangements by which the teachers and pupils in our public schools could have a whole day to visit the Mechanic's fair in Boston. This could be done by having an extra session some Wednesday afternoon, and thus give the whole of Saturday for a visit to this grand exhibition of the progress made in our industries.

The Selectmen held a meeting yesterday afternoon to hear petitioners in regard to laying out Willow street as a town way. While the meeting was in progress two members of Post 50 waited upon them on matters pertaining to the dedication of the Soldier's Monument; but, after learning that the Selectmen had no power to act in the matter, retired.

Anecdotes.

AT MUNICH.

Fancy the horror of the wife of a distinguished English physician, lawyer, or clergyman, if you told her to take those well-educated young ladies, her daughters, for an afternoon to the gardens of Tivoli or Brunnthal, there to drink beer, or coffee, and industriously knit stockings until the husband and father shall join them, and all sup together in the open air; or else, to return about seven o'clock with their knitting needles safely packed away in little baskets on their arms, to prepare the supper at home!

Very frequently there is music in these gardens, and in the Englischer Garden in fine weather the band plays almost every afternoon, and I doubt whether the well-educated young English ladies aforesaid would be at all better able to appreciate the skill of the performers—or indeed half so well—as the quiet-looking Bavarians.

Who would suspect that quiet, stolid-looking man sitting opposite us, with an enormous glass of beer before him, to be an excellent musician and composer? Near him is a tall, sentimental-looking figure, a broad-brimmed black felt hat, curled up one side, after the fashion of the ancient cavaliers; he wears his hair long, in artistic style, disdains beer, and pours out his Rhine wine in a graceful, melancholy manner. He is a skillful house painter and decorator, but is otherwise unknown to fame.

To our left is a whole family of blooming girls with their portly mamma. They appear to have many acquaintances here, and not a few admirers; for the Herr Papa is one of the most influential burghers in the town, and whole chests of linen are known to be already prepared for the dowry of the girls. Students, with their gayly colored caps and sash ribbons, greet them most respectfully; young officers in light blue uniform, and fearfully ugly cloth head-gear, are full of solicitude as to the health of the Frau Mamma, and little Hans, of whom they hear, to their grief, that he fell out of a window the other day.

But while they are exercising their tongues in this way, an unpretending-looking young civilian is filled with just indignation at the neglect of the waiters, who allow the young ladies to sit so long without beer. He fixes his hat more firmly on his head, vanishes among the crowd, and quickly returns with a captured waiter, who listens to the unlimited order for beer, black bread, butter and salt, and soon provides entertainment for the whole party.

And now the young civilian reaps his reward, for he has managed to ensconce himself in a corner between Grethe and Minchen—to the utter defeat of the Army and the University—and is trying to make up his mind as to which of the two girls is the prettier, when his attention is drawn, by the smiles and nods of his fair neighbors, to a table near, where a pretty, well-dressed young wife is seated with her husband, and baby of two years old. Baby is thirsty, so mamma has calmly stood him on the table, and is holding the great glass beer-jug, with its pewter top, to the lips of her offspring, who appears strongly to approve of the beverage, and sucks away vigorously, to the great delight of papa.—Temple Bar.

ONE HONEST MAN.

The other day six men sat around a stove in a Detroit tobacco store. There had been a long period of silence, when one of them rubbed his leg and remarked:

"That old wound feels as if it was going to open again. I shall always remember the battle of Rich Mountain."

There was a slight stir around the stove, and a second man put his hand to his shoulder and observed:

"And I shall not soon forget Brandy Station. Feels to-day as if the lead was going to work out."

The interest was now considerably increased, and the third man knocked the ashes off his cigar and said:

"Yes, these were two hard fights, but you ought to have been with Nelson and Franklin. Lor', but wasn't I excited that day! When these two fingers went with a grape-shot I never felt the pain."

The fourth man growled out something about Second Bull Run and a sabre-cut on the head, and the fifth man felt his left side and said he should always remember the lay of the ground at the Yellow Tavern. The sixth man was silent. The other five looked at him and waited for him to speak, but it was a long time before he pointed to his empty sleeve and asked:

"Gentlemen, do you know where I got that?"

"Some mentioned one battle and some another, but he shook his head sadly and continued:

"Boys, let's be honest and own right up. I lost my arm by a buzz-saw, and now we will begin on the left and give every one a chance to clear his conscience. Now, then, show your wounds."

The five men leaned back in their chairs and smoked fast and chewed hard and looked at each other, and one wished he was in Texas, when a runaway horse flew by and gave them a chance to rush out and get clear of the one-armed man. It was a narrower escape than any of them had during the war.—Detroit Free Press.

THE SURGEON'S KNIFE.

WONDERFUL SURGICAL OPERATION—REMOVAL OF URINARY STONES FROM THE BLADDER—SUCCESSFUL.

Mr. Simeon Tietsell, of Saugerties, N. Y., has been treated for several years by various physicians for what they call Stricture of the Urethra, without benefit. He finally consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who found his trouble to be Urinary Calculi or Stones in the Bladder. The doctor at once removed the foreign bodies with the knife and then gave his great Blood Specific, "Favorite Remedy," to prevent their reformation. The entire treatment was eminently successful, and Mr. Tietsell's recovery was rapid and perfect.

While "Favorite Remedy" is a specific in all Kidney and Bladder diseases, it is equally valuable in cases of Billious Disorders, Constipation of the Bowels, and all the class of ills apparently inseparable from the constitutions of women. Try it. Your druggist has it, and its cost is only one dollar a bottle.—The lucky man is he who puts this advice in practice. Don't forget the name and address, Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. The Doctor would have it understood that, while he in engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession, but confines himself exclusively to office practice. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery. sep 7—1m Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Back ache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relitf. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism. Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache. Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I anvise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr, Sawtell, the well known grocer, Inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere Houte, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further poocf if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place anotner neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house ac Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal. E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS, MAYNARD, MASS., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends. A. MAYNARD.

☞ DON'T TRUST THEM. — When you feel badly, and have pains here and there in your body that you don't know how to account for, it is the most foolish policy in the world to take the advice of people who say: Oh! there's nothing the matter with you. Let yourself alone and you will come out all right." These folks know nothing about it, and may be trifling with your life. You may have Kidney or Liver trouble. Send right out to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's 'Favorite Remedy" and then you will be all right, or write to the Docto at Rondout, N. Y. sept7—3w

WHAT WE KNOW ABOUT IT.—"What do you know about St. Jacobs Oil?" said one of our oldest subscribers. This was a fair question, and we answer, that we are reliably informed that a gentleman of this city, who has suffered untold agony, and spent a mint of money to get relief from Rheumatism, in desperation bought some and tried it, and declares that it is the best remedy for Rheumatism he ever heard of.—*Cairo (Ill.) BRACE UP.—There is serious meaning in this. That wearied step, languid eye and feeling of general lassitude, come from "spring sickness." Be assured, a serious, and, perhaps, fatal disease is close in its wake. The system wants cleansing of winter impurities; the sluggish blood needs to be sent in swift and clear currents through the veins. "Favorite Remedy" will do this; it will give new vigor to the body, brightness to the eye, a glow to the countenance and elasticity to the step. One dollar a bottle. Every druggist has it. I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums, and give them credit for making cures — all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness, I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine. J. J. BABCOCK, M. D.

EVERY TIME.—A man, or even a piece of machinery that does its work right every time, is we think very correctly judged "valuable." And certainly none the less valuable is any article designed to relieve the ills of mankind, and which does so every time. Mess. Jones, Cook & Co., Bay State Brewery, Boston, Mass., write: We have used St. Jacobs Oil among our and men find that it helps them "every time." We therefore heartily recommend it as a pain-healing liniment.—Keokuk Constitution.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE.—The October number is more than usually attractive, and affords pleasant edifying reading. We have the first instalment of a peculiarly interesting serial, entitled, "Martha's Vineyard," by the late Frances Browne; and the first chapters of an admirable story, "May Cunningham's Trial," besides other short stories, sketches, essays, etc., by well-known writers. Rev. Dr. Deems contributes the third of the series of essays, "Only," and "The Home Pulpit" contains a sermon by Rev. John Stoughton, D. D., on the subject, "A New Commandment." The poems are meritorious. There is a large variety of miscellaneous matter, together with these popular features, "International Sunday-school Lessons," "Notes by the way." Address, FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

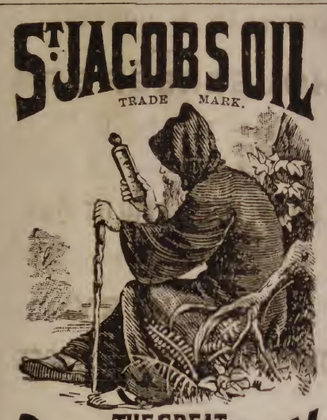
The value of the practical articles in St. Nicholas will be amply shown by a little story to be contributed to the October number, telling how a boy was saved from drowning by the timely remembrance of instructions given in a St. Nicholas article on swimming; and an editorial note will be appended, recounting two other escapes from drowning, which have been due to the same admirable article. The same number in which this story of escape is to be printed will contain a paper, entitled "How to be Taken Care of," which will give many hints and suggestions of use to ailing folk, both grown-up and small.

The charm of out-of-door life is making itself known to more people every year, and the books that treat of nature or life in the open air are consequently becoming more and more popular. To meet this growing taste, the Messrs. Harper have prepared a new edition of "Camp Life; or, the Tricks of Trapping and Trap Making," with illustrations by W. Hamilton Gibson, which they will soon publish.

Ballou's Monthly Illustrated Magazine; There is no doubt but that the October number of Ballou's Magazine will attract that careful attention which it deserves; for there is no publication in this country that merits such a patronage, owing to the freshness of its articles, the vigor and value of its stories, the excellence of its poetry, or the beauty of its illustrations. We know of no magazine that can equal it for variety. The contents of the October number are large and varied. Published by Thomas & Talbot 23 Hawley St., Boston, Mass., and is for sale by all news dealers.

THE SCORE for September is, as usual, full of bright and lively reading matter. The lack of musical news during the summer months has not had any effect on its columns. The article on "Heine in his relation to German Song, by Louis C. Elson, is an especially interesting one, and contains translations of some of the best verses of the poet. The paragraphic and editorial departments are very pleasant.

The SCORE is published by Messrs. John Perry & Co., 13 West St., Boston. It is for sale by all News dealers generally.



Richard Henry Stoddard and Edmund Clarence Stedman will furnish the distinctively literary features to the October SCRIBNER. The title of Mr. Stoddard's paper, "The Sonnet in English Poetry," is an index to its contents, while Mr. Stedman makes a valuable contribution to criticism in his second and closing paper on "Poetry in America," to be followed at short intervals in THE CENTURY MAGAZINE by his critiques of Lowell, Longfellow, Emerson, Whittier, etc., etc.

The success of Harper's "Franklin Square Song Collection" has been so great that the publishers now announce an edition in cloth binding. There is so much variety in the book that every taste may be satisfied, but one of its strongest claims to popularity is the number of old songs that are out of print or long forgotten which may be found between its covers.

"Primeval California" is the theme of two Californians for an illustrated paper to be published in the October Scribner. The writer is Mr. Charles Warren Stoddard, and the artist Mr. Julian Rix. The region described is among the red woods of Sonoma Co. Some of the best wood-cuts in this article are by young men who last year competed with "first work" for the Scribner prize for wood-engraving—which, by the way, is to be continued under The Century Magazine.

Mr. Alcott told the Concord Summer School of Philosophers that "Actuality is the Thingness of the Here." This information almost paralyzed them.—For years they had been laboring under the misapprehension that the Hereness of the Actuality is the Thing. But it is no such thing.

OPENING OYSTERS.—There is just as much difference in the manner in which two men open shell oysters as there is in the way they go to church or walk on the street. Who has not watched a thorough oyster opener at an eastern oyster market, and observed the tender manner in which he takes up the shell and looks at it, as though it was a friend of his. He inserts his instrument between the shells as delicately as a dentist will probe an aching tooth, and by a little turn of the wrist your oyster is uncovered and reclining upon the half shell plump and juicy, inviting you to fire him down your neck. How different it is when an amateur attempts to open oysters. He commences by getting red in the face, and knocking off an inch of the edge of the shell, and letting all the juice run out and drip down between his fingers: He knocks some skin off his thumb, and that bleeds, and your heart bleeds for the oyster. He inserts an iron that looks like a stove hook into the shell, then pries and grunts, the shell opens and the oyster sticks to both sides of it and splits. He saws off the mantle piece that holds the oyster to the shell, and hands you the half shell with something on it that looks like scrambled oyster. The drti from the shell gets on the oyster and it is about as much comfort trying to eat it as it is to eat a hickory nut that has been cracked by laying it down on the side and mashing it with a hatchet. The oyster opened by an amateur looks ragged and discouraged and the man who opens it looks about the same, while the oyster opened by a man who understands his business looks as though it enjoyed life, and the man who opens it looks like a thoroughbred who is not ashamed of his business, and knows he can do it as well as anybody. The world is full of men who do everything the way an amateur opens opsters. They try to do that for which they are not fitted, and it is hard to make them believe they are not doing what they attempt to do well, but they always act as though they wanted to apologize for something being wrong.—Peck's Sun.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION. There were 323 towns and 19 cities represent by 1038 delegates. The convention listened to two excellent speeches, and renominated by acclamation the following ticket:—

For Governor—John D. Long, of Hingham.

Lieutenant Governor—Byron Weston, of Dalton.

Attorney General—George Marston, of New Bedford.

Secretary of State—Henry B. Pierce, of Abington.

Treasurer and Receiver General—Daniel A. Gleason, of Medford.

Auditor—Charles R. Ladd, of Springfield.

The platform affirms the right to a free exercise of the suffrage; a gold standard for the currency; calls for a revision of the tariff by a competent national commission; a reform of the methods of appointments to the civil service by legal enactments; the establishment by law of better methods of ascertaining the results of presidential elections; the aid of the nation to the schools in States where illiteracy is prevalent; a policy which recognizes the rights of peaceful Indians; the suppression of polygamy, which has been too long tolerated; the State ticket is recommended; appropriate reference is made to the death of President Garfield; cordial, considerate and united support is pledged to President Arthur.

PEABODY.

Married in Peabody, on Thursday, Sept. 22, by Rev. W. G. Sperry, Mr. J. W. Farnsworth of Malden and Miss Josie Locke of this town. The happy couple repaired at once to their residence in Malden, where may they enjoy a lifetime of worldly blessings.

The Firemen's Relief Association of Milford, have voted $100 to be presented to David Nolan of the Volunteer Engine Company, who was injured while returning from the muster at that place. A subscription paper has also been started in each of the companies.

A social and pound party was given Mrs. Lizzie Reed, a widow, residing on Lynnfield street, So. Peabody, on Monday evening of last week. The lady was the recipient of many household goods, and as the whole thing was a surprise, the occasion was a very pleasant one.

Union Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, will hold a grand social dance at the Willows next Friday evening. A number of Peabody ladies belong to this lodge and if any of their friends would like tickets they can obtain them of Mr. W. F. Sawyer. A horse car will run to Peabody at the close.

Mr. Munroe's party of excursionists to the mountains will leave the stone depot in Salem next Saturday morning in the 9.08 train. The fare for the trip (300 miles) including a week's board at one of the principal hotels, will be only $10.25. Some twenty, so far, have signified their intention of going.

The committee from the Post, who waited upon the Selectmen by request of their Chairman, desires to say that their interview was pleasant and satisfactory. They found that the Selectmen had no power to act at present but received assurances that at the proper time they would be pleased to give what aid they could properly.

Another Sunday row took place on Union street, last Sunday, which resulted in one of the pugilistic combatants getting pretty badly used up. After they had pounded each other's heads and faces for some time, somebody cried "police," and the mill was broken up, much to the disappointment of a large crowd of lookers-on.

POLICE NOTES.—Sept. 21, Mary Duggen, assault, $5.65.

24, Patrick Sweeney, for being drunk, $5 and costs. Sent to Salem Jail.

27, Julia Wood, keeping liquor with intent to sell, $50 and costs, appealed.

David Gleason, mutual affray, $12.50.

John Gannon, being drunk, $6.10.

John Donovan of Danvers, for being drunk, $5.85.

Willtam Hurley, for drunkeness, $5.85.

Thomas H. Lillis, keeping liquor with intent to sell, held in the sum of $300 for his appearance at the high court.

Chief Peaslee broke up a card party near Gardner's woods, last Sunday.

The Second Annual Convention of the Mass. Firemen's Association will be held at Springfield, Tuesday, Oct. 11th. A large exhibit of apparatus and supplies will be one of the main features of the convention. Free return passes will be furnished over the Boston & Albany R. R. and the several hotels in Springfield will accommodate delegates at reduced rates. The President of the Association, which was organized May 10, 1881, is John S. Damrell of Boston.

Fruit of the tropic's burning clime,
Thy wondrous virtues, fadeless still,
Exert an influence sublime,
In ministering to human ill;
And many a pang along our way
Sanford's Ginger doth allay.--sep7-1m

A substantial contribution to the coming centennial celebration at Yorktown is Mr. H. P. Johnston's volume, "The Yorktown Campaign," which Harper & Brothers will publish in a few days. The book is copiously illustrated with maps and fine engravings from famous historical paintings by Trumbull, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gilbert Stuart, and others. It is no little compliment to Mr. Johnston's accuracy that he has been consulted in locating the camping grounds of the militia from the various States, which it is designed to make identical with the camping grounds of the troops from their respective States a century ago.

"I cannot sing the old songs," an amateur soprano shrieked the other night, and while she took breath for the next line, a young man who had looked in for a moment was heard to remark, casually but emphatically, "You just bet you can't." It broke up the concert on the spot.

A very little money will buy a nice Break fast, Dinner, Supper or Lunch, at the Holly Tree Ice Cream and Dining Rooms, 9 Central Street.

If you want a nice steak, go to the Holly Tree, 9 Central Street, and call for one of their PORTER House, or Tenderloin Steaks.

1. A serial story by Ellen W. Olney, running through six numbers, entitled, "Rose and the Doctor."
"One of the very best stories we have read for years." "Is proving a charming and powerful story." "They are as real people in whom we feel a human interest." "Ellen W. Olney's capital serial."
2. A series of six articles by Lieutenant Schwatka. U. S. A., commander of the recent Franklin search expedition, about his own and other experiences and adventures in the Arctic regions.
"No magazine articles have appeared which are of more interest to us than the series of Polar Travels by Lieutenant Schwatka." "Extremely interesting." "Especially srasonable at this time when popular interest is freshly awakened by the departure of vessels in search of the exploring steamer Jeannette, whose fate is unknown." "At this time, when the spirit of Arctic adventure is once more thoroughly aroused, these articles come with additional interest."
3. A serial story in six instalments, published anonymously, entitled, "Mildred's Caprice."
"Opens remarkably well." "The story is powerfully told." "The strong story of 'Mildred's Caprice.'" "That excellent serial of 'Mildred's Caprice.'"

VOL. 22. PEABODY, MASS., WEDNESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 5, 1881. NO. 41.

The Peabody Press.

D. W. Osborne's House.

Washington street is noted for its many fine residences, and an addition thereto has recently been made in the erection of a sightly and substantial dwelling by Mr. Dennison W. Osborne. It is a two story square house with bay windows in the front and also in the room on the north side of the house, and presents many outward attractions, which are still further enhanced by a visit to the interior.

As we enter the large hall in the center of the house, we enter on the left or the south side, the parlor, a square room 14x14 1-2 feet, neatly papered, with a mantel of Italian marble of a very choice pattern. From this room an entrance is made in the rear to the dining room, 12 1-2x14 1-2 feet, containing a large china closet, with mantel of Tennesee marble from Knoxville, Tenn. Crossing the hall, the entrance from the rear of the house, is the kitchen finished in pine, with hard pine floor, and shelacted and varnished. The walls are also painted a subdued color. Here are all the appliances for cooking, hot and cold water, sink and pantry.—In the rear hall is also a fine set marble bowl, for convenience before meals.—On the other side of the front hall is the largest and best room in the house, with large bay window, from which a view in nearly every direction can be obtained. It is to be used as a sitting room and is 14 1-2x17 feet, with mantel of a choice imported marble. In the rear of this room is a square room which could be used either as a library or sewing room. As we ascend the stairs, our attention is directed to the elegant black walnut post, on all four sides of which there is a very beautiful panel of French walnut, giving the whole a very ornate appearance. We ascend the stairs the railing and banisters being also of black walnut, and find a very large open hall fronting on a bay window. Here are five large chambers, the front one containing a mantel of white marble, and an open fireplace—all being provided with set bowls and hot and cold water, and set off with paper of a cheerful and bright design. There is also a bath room in the rear, at the head of the flight of stairs in that end of the house. There are four attic rooms unfinished, but all plastered, so that they can be used by Mr. Osborne at anytime. The rooms are heated by a Magee Wrought Iron Furnace, of the latest and most improved design, put in by D. A. & F. H. Caskin, who have also furnished all the tin work in the building.

The architect of the house was Wm. D. Dennis of Salem, and was built by Messrs. James R. Wingate and Archibald Israel, who have completed the work in a satisfactory manner. The mason work was done by Mr. Thomas Toomey of Danvers, the painting by Richard Skinner, Jr., of Salem, and the plumbing by Daniel B. Lord, Jr., of Peabody. We congratulate Mr. Osborne upon being the possessor of so fine a dwelling, and trust he may live long to enjoy it.

Many clergymen are culpably negligent in not making diligent inquiry as to the right of persons to be married who apply to them to perform the service. No right-minded person would wish to be an instrument in an illegal marriage, but in the general looseness which prevails in this country there is all the more occasion for careful inquiry, not merely of the parties wishing to be married, but from other sources.—The rascal has been recently arrested for taking numerous wives has, according to the latest enumeration, fifteen on his list, and he was not known to any one of these or to anyone of the many ministers who married him.—N. Y. Observer.

Peabody, Oct. 3, 1881.

Messrs. Editors.—In your report of the decorations in last week's Press you ascribe to me what does not belong to me. The credit of the beautiful design of a mourning window, in which all the objects, every flower and every spray, were intended to blend in reverent harmony and unity, in color and expression, as a sad memorial of a sad event was due alone to Mrs. Sweetser.

Yours truly

W. G. Dix.

Hotel Cheats.—The adventures of the wretched assassin Guiteau has directed attention to a class of people who live by cheating hotels and boarding-houses. A hotel clerk gives the Philadelphia Times some items on this subject of more innocent hotel beats.

"For instance," says he, "there are a great many people who travel who seem to have a craze for making collections of hotel towels. When they pay for their lodgings and board they take a towel alndg as a momento; sometimes take it because it is a towel, and a towel is a thing not to be dispensed with in this land of liberty. Then there are some who pack up such articles in mistake and become conscience stricken when they find what they have done and send back the pieces by mail. So it is with napkins and keys. Why, there is a regular interchange of these articles between hotels, and all the devices which have so far been conjured up do not stop the business."

Turning to the key-case the clerk displayed a small lock-opener attached to what looked like a small-sized brass circular-saw and with a smile that stole away around his shirt collar, said: "Do you think a man could lug that piece of machinery around in his garments and for a moment become oblivious to the fact?" Without giving the reporter an opportunity to speculate, the clerk continued: "Well, those sort of inventions no more stop the carting away of keys than a boot-jack will break up a cat concert. Day after day the mail brings them back to us, from some traveller, who, finding himself somewhat overloaded, makes an inventory of his hardware and returns his dead stock. The ladies, also, have their little weaknesses. When they pack up to leave they frequently include articles of hotel linen in their baggage, and some days after they are gone find their mistake and return the articles with a note so profuse in apologies that it would touch the heart of the Cardiff giant. Soap don't count. It disappears like the first dish of strawberries, and we never give heed of this loss. "Taking it all through," said the man at the register, "it don't amount to more than 5 or 8 per. cent. of the entire purchase." At this juncture a man in a cinder-colored duster, with a purple-tinted nose rushed in, threw a black bag on the counter and began to unpack his budget of conundrums. Then the interviewer picked out the straightest road to the street.

Ten minutes later the newsman was extracting similar information from another hotel man. This gentleman remarked that in some of the cheaper caravansaries the "forgetful guest" formed a big party and towels and napkins disappeared in quantities. "I can recall one case." said he," where a respectable-looking fellow, with a valise that would hold about a dozen bricks packed closely, secured a room at a certain hotel. For the proprietor's sake I am happy to say he only lingered a day. After he had gone, the towels, soap, sheets, pillows as well, went with him. It is easy enough to settle how he got away with the linen, but just where he stuffed the pillows is a matter that has never been satisfactorily settled. As strange as it may appear, this passion or weakness comes on like an epidemic. There are times when combs and brushes disappear as if by magic. Some hotels chain these articles of toilet to the washstands. Chains are a delusion. Nothing will save a hotel comb when the guest is stricken with its beauty and utility. It goes along with the soap and is recorded in the profit and loss book. But guests alone are not responsible for these mysterious disappearances. Sometimes bell-boys have a weakness for such articles and chambermaids find ample room in the folds of their skirts to stow away such articles. In some large houses all the help is searched on leaving the premises, but soap and linen, combs and brushes continue to disappear just the same as if there was no hereafter."

Fashion always finds its followers, notwithstanding the frequent inconsistencies and absurdities of its demands. To be in style is to be all that is most desirable, and produces a condition of extreme satisfaction in the minds of those who follow its dictates so unreservedly. "One might as well be out of the world as to be out of fashion," has become a proverbial expression, and while one may not know just what condition would be brought about by being out of the world, the inference is that it could not possibly be worse than that of being out of fashion.

To make any inquiry into the reasons for, or the reasonableness of adopting the different and rapidly changing styles would be in very poor taste and betray altogether too much independence of spirit. One may express a difference of opinion upon any subject with perfect freedom unless fashion has decided the matter one way or the other, and then individuality is to be entirely ignored. And thus the æsthetical mania, which at first affected but few idividuals, having become a fashion, will now control and permeate all grades of social life. To be or not to be æsthetical is the question, and the "soulful" will doubtless be cultivated to an alarming extent; alarming because of the intensely intense condition in which people find themselves after yielding entirely to the æsthetical mania. It will not do to stop at any intermediate point between two extremes. The transition and transformation must be complete, and to become "utterly utter" is the only end in view.

"I am utter! Men may say
That I'm void of brains and beauty;
That my feet are huge and splay,
That I'm limp from crown to shoe-tie;
That my taste is mad fad, full flow,
That my talk is maudlin splutter;
But the Philistines must own
I am utter!

This rondeau from Punch gives the idea of the possibilities in view for those æsthetically inclined, and will be the means of helping many to a full attainment of their desires, since one may be æsthetic while possessing neither brains nor beauty; and the soulful expression may be obtained without the slightest supposition that the soul has anything to do with it. It will be completely easy to assume that far-away, dreamy expression which sometimes expresses so much, and seems to imply that the mind is filled with thoughts unutterable and unfettered by the grosser elements of earthly life. These rapt and entranced moods can be so easily and frequently indulged in that poetic reverie will become sufficiently natural to produce the effect of being "to the manner born." If one has not a single idea to boast of, or a conception of anything under heaven, by a slight effort of the will the effect may be produced of being in the deepest thought, of being possessed with the divine afflatus which lifts the soul into the higher atmosphere of light and love and joy unspeakable. Where silence, a languid and graceful attitude, a dreamy expression and a far-away look in the eyes can do so much, is it any wonder that the "æsthetical in life" has become so extremely fashionable? It is so much easier to follow this delightful fashion than to cultivate ideas, or to be even moderately well informed on subjects of interest that it will be somewhat difficult to lessen the increasing tendency towards the æsthetical, or to set aside the popular prejudice in its favor. The keen lancet of ridicule which has been so often thrust through this bubble of ignorant and arrogant pretense, has failed in convincing people of its absurdity, and we shall continue to see people gazing with open-eyed wonder at the senseless objects who affect the æsthetical mania.

A Chapter on Education.—The Milwaukee Sun says:—This is the season when school teachers are engaged for the coming fiscal year, or school year, and the studies are prescribed by the board and all arrangements made for the beginning of trouble with the the fall term. In picking up a bundle of school books the other day, and carelessly glancing through them, we were struck with the almost Pagan darkness that seems to envelop education. Journalism, photography, telegraphy, and the electric arts—everything, in fact, has made the most wonderful progress during the past fifteen years, but education, or the study of the sciences, is about the same old succotash that it always was. We see that there are stil two grand divisions of the earth, and they are composed of land and water. That was the case twenty years ago. We turn over a few pages and find the following questions:—"Where are the Mountains of the Moon?"—"Where are the Himalayas?"—"Between what two bodies are the Philippine Islands situated?"—"State where the river Dnieper rises, what course it runs and into what body of water it empties."

Well, it has been many years since we left the dear old school room and our teachers, who were so kind, and we are positive that at that time we knew where the Moon Mountains were, the Himalayas, the Philippine Islands and the Dnieper river, but we can put our hand on our heart and say truthfully that we do not know where they are, and we don't believe we have heard one of them mentioned in the last fifteen years. Still, it must be remembered that we are in the newspaper business. If we were dealing in groceries it would probably be different, and we should use the Moon Mountains every day in our business. Customers would expect it, and while they would appear to be looking at the cheese to see if there were any skippers, before buying a wedge of it, they would in reality be making up their minds whether we knew where the Philippine Islands were, and the general course of the Dnieper. Some customers are very particular. People have expressed astonishment at the success of some of the leading dry goods merchants of Milwaukee, and have attributed it to the merchants knowing how to buy goods cheap down east, and sell them less than other merchants. This shows how ignorance is stalking through the land. If one could peek over the shoulder of the most successful business merchants, when they are burning the midnight oil, and clawing into their hair with both hands, they would be found poring over a geography, trying to find some little river in Asia Minor, while their confidential clerk stood by saying, "Hot, hot, hot—cold, cold, cold—now you're freezing." Fortunes that last are not made in a single day.

Then there is algebra, and cube and square root. Only last week we wrote an editorial and didn't know really whether it ought to be published or not. All at once the words of our teacher came to us—"Prove it: if it is correct it can be proved." We threw a radical over it, raised it to the fourth power, extracted the cube root, and having x and y given to us, we easily found the unknown quantity of z and the thing was a bird. Suppose, now, we had never had any training in the English sciences! One of the most successful grocers in Milwaukee, a man who had accumulated a handsome fortune from a very small beginning, told us the other day that he owed all his success to the use of algebra and a few theorems in geometry when picking a mackerel out of the kit with the hock and slapping it against the side of the barrel to get off the brine, and to buying just as close as he could for cash. Where would that man be to-day if he had only learned to add and multiply fractions, and had stopped there, and had bought his goods on time, with ten per cent. added. Teachers have a great duty to perform, because to a greater or less extent, they are responsible for the children under their charge. No teacher who is worthy the name, and competent to understand the great trust that has been committed to him, or her, would think of turning a child out to battle with the world and make its own way in life, unless the child could, upon the instant, name every rivulet from Kamtschatka to Kalamazoo. If the child should starve to death, in a vain effort to wrest a livelihood from some occupation, its death would unquestionably lie at the door of the teacher. The education of our youth, in all that will be of no use to them in after life, is one of the sacredest and most serious matters that can be committed into human hands.

About two weeks ago a boy some ten years of age came to this town from Peabody, and getting acquainted with some lads of his own age made a stop of a few days to look around. During his wanderings he went into the engine room at Munroe's factory, where he took a watch from engineer Cotton's vest, which was hanging against the wall. On his return to Peabody he sold the watch to a barrel dealer for a dollar. The man, thinking it might be stolen property, went to the police station and gave it to Officer Parker, who looked the matter up. The boy was found and it was learned that the watch belonged to a Mr. Cotton of this town. The officer came here and with the aid of the Marblehead officers went to Mr. Cotton, who immediately identified the watch.—Marblehead Messenger.

Mr. Editor,—I wish to write a communication to the citizens of our town through your columns. This year seems to be an unusual one for the success of benefits, from the greatest to the smallest, and I wish to ask the citizens of Peabody to give the Naumkeag Street Railway a benefit, for the purpose of paying the sum of One Thousand Dollars to Mrs. Sam'l P. Wilson, which has been awarded her by the courts, for injuries sustained by incompetent drivers; the balance over the above amount to be given the Railway to pay off the cost of appealing from one court to another, and of sending counsel long distances for the object of gaining points underhanded. I would recommend two gentlemen to volunteer their services from Peabody, and a third one be chosen by the railway, to receive all the money, and disburse it as above. The Superintendent should sign a writing to this effect: "Owing to the divine wisdom, and the carelessness of one of of our drivers, we are bankrupt, but not believing in bowing to divine wisdom, we have tried every dishonest and unworthy method to deprive the above lady of her just dues, awarded by the highest tribunal of justice, but driven at last to this or only one other resort — namely, attachment of horses, buildings, men, brass-buttoned uniforms, bell-punches, etc., we appeal to the good citizens of Peabody to help us in this our dire calamity." I believe our citizens will all turn out on that day, and it will really be a gala day for the N. S. R. And I would name the day our beautiful Soldiers' Monument will be dedicated.

Yours, confidentially,

Peabody, Oct. 4, 1881. Justice.

A wager was laid on the Yankee peculiarity to answer one question by asking another. To decide that bet a down-easter was interrogated.

"I want you" said the better, "to give me a straightforward answer to a plain question."

"I kin du it, mister," said the Yankee.

"Then why is it New Englanders always answer a question by asking one in return?"

"Du they" was Jonathan's reply.

A young man from Cleveland visited some friends in this city, the other day, and was shown around generally. Finally one of them asked him if he would like to see the Widows' Home. If they were good looking widows he would as lief see them home as not, though he would prefer to escort but one at a time. —Saturday Night.

The oldest building in New York and the most interesting for its historic associations is to be pulled down to make room for a modern ten-story edifice.—Mr. Cyrus W. Field has purchased the Washington Hotel, on the corner of Broadway and Battery place, and will soon begin its demolition. This structure was built in 1742 by a British Admiral for a residence, and was, in its day, the finest house in the country. During the Revolutionary period it sheltered most of the commanders of the British forces, and Major Andre was a guest under its roof just before he made his fatal journey up the Hudson.

Quite a collision occurred last evening in Salem Tunnel between the Lawrence passenger train which leaves Peabody about seven o'clock, and a gravel train in charge of Engineer Longley. It was caused by one of the signal men at the end of the tunnel giving the wrong signal, and the Lawrence train entered the tunnel while the gravel train was coming in the opposite direction. Both engineers saw the danger before the collision, but not in season to prevent it. The engineers and firemen of both trains were fortunately unhurt. Police Officer Geo. H. Seavey and Dr. J. S. Emerson of Lynn, were slightly injured and all the passengers were badly frightened and shaken up. The trains were delayed for some hours.

We acknowledge the receipt of an illustrated invitation to visit St. Louis on the Great Autumnal Festival week commencing Oct. 3 and ending Oct. 9, and witness on the night of the 4th the Grand Spectacular Procession which "will be unparalleled in grandeur, magnificence, and lavish expenditure of money."

This evening?

No; not this evening.

Lovely Autumn weather.

The maple leaves are putting on beautiful hues.

The days and nights are now of nearly equal length.

Mr. Warren Shaw and wife are at Alton Bay, N. H.

Ice formed an eighth of an inch thick, last night.

The price of butter goes up as the mercury goes down.

Central street between the railroad tracks is being scraped.

Who are the delegates from Peabody to the Democratic convention?

Mr. Lyman Holman has purchased the Ennis estate on Tremont street.

The new advertisement of Mr. Chas. H. Goulding is timely and attractive.

The house of Mr. W. B. Richardson is being treated finely by the painters.

Mr. H. M. Scholar has been enjoying life in Connecticut for the past week.

With such weather as this the stores will begin to feel the impulse of the fall trade.

Mr. W. B. Richardson and Mr. Henry C. Torr will shortly leave town for a western trip.

Mr. C. O. Stone held the ribbons over the winning horse at Haverhill, last Thursday.

The will of the late Mr. Wm. Bushby was among those proved by the Probate Court, Monday.

R. W., A. H. Sweetser, D. D. G. M., will officially visit Jordan Lodge, F. & A. M., this evening.

It is said that Mr. Geo. Upton is making arrangements to light his glue factory with electric lights.

Mutual Council, 184 R. A., will hold a regular meeting at Masonic Hall, tomorrow, Thursday, evening.

Mr. C. A. Haskell and family have returned from Magnolia, where they have been spending the summer.

Prof. Capen, President of Tufts' College, will preach in the Universalist Church on Sunday next, at 2.15 P. M.

It seems strange to say "President Arthur," but we must get used to it during the next three years and a half.

It is still almost impossible for renters to find vacant houses in Peabody. If you know of a good one address box 236.

The store of Samuel Donnell & Son is undergoing repairs. New floors are being laid and other improvements made.

Our merchants begin to fear that Jack Frost will delay his coming so long as to interfere materially with fall trade.

Base ball shoes have had an immense run in town this summer, but the shoe dealers predict a bigger one next season.

Charles Brown of So. Peabody, has a sunflower which he cut from the stock a few days ago, measuring over three feet in circumference.

We learn that the Republican Town Committee will organize next Friday night. It is also reported that three of their number have resigned.

At the regular meeting of the S. C. Bancroft Engine Co., $50 was voted from the treasury for the benefit of David Nolan, the injured fireman.

A large bird, believed to be a bald-headed eagle, was seen near Gardner's woods last Sunday, soaring at a great height, and going to the South.

A fine portrait of Postmaster Ward done in crayon by Cross, the photographer, is on exhibition at the store of Goldthwait & Bixby, Salem.

Large flocks of ducks are seen at Sauntag Lake, Lynnfield, while an unusual number of squirrels and partridges abound in the woods in that vicinity.

It is the intention of Rev. L. L. Wood to preach next Sunday upon the subject, "Lessons from the Life of Garfield." Services at 10.15; all are invited.

Geo. H. Jones, while peddling about town at Ipswich last Thursday, fell dead in the doorway as he was about to enter a house. A terrible warning to pedlars.

Most of our farmers are losers by this cold weather. As we had had no frost, they were not prepared for the sudden freezing of the ground, and picklers, squashes, etc., had to suffer.

A little fracas in the rear of the Hotel the other evening caused the parties interested to invest in a little arnica to reduce the swelling and coloring about the eyes. The horrid creatures!

As John Nickerson, of Peabody, was returning home from his work on Monday noon, he found his trunk had been rifled of a large lot of clothing, together with a gold watch and forty dollars in money. The thief is supposed to be a fellow boarder, who went away in the forenoon, and for whom a search is being made.

We hope our neighbor will take time and not let this sudden cold snap precipitate him into writing his annual leader on Autumn before it has received the careful and earnest thought the subject requires.

Mr. Jesse Smith has the sole agency for Ready's patent rubber tip. This is a very cute contrivance and is excellent where a horse has sore or contracted feet, over-reaches, or anything of that kind. A large number of references among our horsemen can be furnished if desired.

The following Peabody parties are stopping at Jackson, N. H.: Isaac Munroe and wife, Levi Spaulding and wife, Mrs. J. P. King, Jacob Osborn and wife, Gustavus Merrill, Amos Buxton, John H. Stevens and wife, Charles D. Howard and wife, L. Flora Howard and Charles Nowell Howard. Other Peabody parties are expected.

Mr. D. P. Grosvenor, Sr., is receiving orders for the life of General Garfield. This will be the most complete work offered. It will be published by W. H. Thompson & Co. of Boston and include a full and accurate account of his eventful life trom the cradle to the grave. It contains 550 pages, is finely illustrated and printed on tinted paper. See Mr. G. before purchasing the life of our martyred President.

The following Peabody parties received premiums at the Essex Agricultural Fair at Haverhill last week: W. M. Ward, Light Brahma Fowls, 1st premium, $3.00; Light Brahma Chicks, 2d premium, $1.00; Game Bantam Fowls, 1st premium, $2.00; Game Bantam Chicks, 2d premium, $1.00. M. T. Batchelder, Short H. Carrot, premium $3.00; Flat Onion, premium, $3.00; Nutmeg Melon, premium, $3.00; 2d best Savoy Cabbage, premium $2.00.

The alarm of fire at half-past eleven o'clock this morning was caused by sparks from the chimney at Brimmer's tannery, setting fire to the roofs of two houses on Caller street, one belonging to Mr. Wm. R. Fifield and the other to Mr. Elijah Upton. Another alarm was given about half-past twelve, caused by sparks from the same chimney setting fire to C. Leonard Pierce's morocco factory. Little damage was done, but for the prompt action of neighbors in both cases the result must have been serious.

James A. Garfield.

BY NELL GRAFTON.

A noble boy! Faithful, obedient and kind,
Diligent to cultivate his mind.
True to his widowed mother lone,
And industry in all his conduct shone.

An honored teacher! Moulding many a mind
That will in fame with glory shine,
New truths unfolding daily he'd reveal,
And by his Christian life on all he set the seal.

A gallant soldier! On many a well-fought field,
He pressed the foe and forced them there to yield;
True to his country and his God,
Fearless in all the ranks of death he trod.

An upright statesman! No love of gain
Could swerve from right a jot or grain;
Eloquent in speech, convincing in debate,
He took our heart by storm; all owned him great.

Our much-loved President! So fit to rule!
As fit to govern nations as his school;
His firmness satisfied our love of right;
His gentleness disarmed him quite.

Our suffering friend! Stricken by the cruel hand,
He lay, so patient, pitied thro' the land;
Heroic in his pain, knowing no true rest,
Yet ever saying, "I can bear it if its best."

Our martyred hero! Low in death he lies,
Traces of suffering round his now closed eyes;
A nation bows in woe and deepest grief,
And prays to Heaven to send relief.

Our Christian model! May we follow on,
In all the way that he has gone;
Thus fit to live, to reign, to die,
We may, like him, win joys on high.

Peabody, Sept. 22, 1881.

Only a Smile.

Only a smile that was given me
On the crowded street one day.
But it pierced the gloom of my saddened heart
Like a sudden sunbeam's ray.
The shadow of doubt hung over me,
And the burden of pain I bore,
And the voice of Hope I could not hear,
Though I listened o'er and o'er.

But there came a rift in the crowd about,
And a face that I knew passed by,
And the smile that I caught was brighter to me
Than the blue of a Summer sky.
For it gave me back the sunshine,
And scattered each sombre thought,
And my heart rejoiced in the kindling warmth
Which that kindly smile had wrought.

Only a smile from a friendly face
On the busy street that day.
Forgotten as soon as given, perhaps,
As the donor went her way.
But straight to my heart went speeding
To gild the clouds that were there,
And I found that of sunshine and life's blue skies
I also might take my share.

Don't Stay Late To-night.

The hearth of home is beaming,
With rays of rosy light,
And lovely eyes are gleaming,
As fall the shades of night;
And while thy steps are leaving
The circle pure and bright,
A tender voice half grieving,
Says, "Don't stay late to-night."

The world in which thou movest
Is busy, brave and wide;
The world of her thou lovest
Is at the ingle side;
She waits for the warm greeting,
Thy smile is her delight;
Her gentle voice entreating,
Says, "Don't stay late to-night."

The word so cold, inhuman,
Will spurn thee if thou fall;
The love of one poor woman
Outlasts and shades them all.
Thy children will cling 'round thee,
Let fate be dark or bright;
At home no shaft will wound thee,
Then "Don't stay late to-night."

LOVE AND POKER.

"My 'Queen,'" said he, "I'd like 'two pair'
With you." The fair maid blushed,
And said: "Now, 'Jack,' I'd 'beat' you there,
For, don't you see, I'm 'flushed?'"

"But, that ain't 'straight,'" replied her 'Jack;'
(That 'hand-sir' dimmed his lustre),
"Such 'play' (on words) you know I lack"—
And then he 'double bussed' her.

"Please name the day; I would 'deal light'
To even 'board' your 'ante,'
I've 'table steaks'—'give me a sight'—
Shall I 'order cards?'—or shan't I?"

The 'Queen' said yes; and now, grown bold,
They 'draw' their carriage wicker;
On afternoon you'd 'see' them stroll—
It "holds up a little kicker!"

Selected Story.

LOVE AND LUXURY.

"If ever I marry," Katie Yale used to say, half in jest, half in earnest—"if ever I marry, the happy man— or the unhappy one, if you please—ha! ha!—shall be a person possessing these three qualifications:

"First, a fortune."

"Second, good looks."

"And thirdly, common sense."

"I mention the fortune first; because I think it the most needful and desirable qualification of the three. Although I could never think of marrying a fool, or a man whose ugliness I would be ashamed of; still I think to talk sense for the one and shine for the other, with plenty of money, would be preferable to living obscurely with a handsome, intellectual man to whom economy might be necessary."

I do not know how much of this sentiment came from Katie's heart. She undoubtedly indulged in lofty ideas of station and style—for her education in the duties and aims of life had been deficient, or, rather, erroneous; but that she was capable of deeper, better feelings, none doubted who had ever obtained even a partial glimpse of her true woman's nature.

And the time arrived, at length, when Katie was to take that all-important step of which she had often spoken so lightly; when she was to demonstrate to her friends how much of her heart was in the words we have quoted.

At the enchanting age of 18 she had many suitors; but, as she never gave a serious thought to more than two, we will follow her example, discarding all except those favored ones, and consider their relative claims.

If this were any other than a true story, I should certainly use an artist's privilege, and aim to produce an effect by making a strong contrast between these two favored individuals. If I could have my way, one should be a poor genius and somewhat of a hero; the other a wealthy fool and somewhat of a knave.

But the truth is:

Our poor genius was not much of a genius, nor very poor, either. He was by profession a teacher of music, and could live very comfortable in exercise thereof, without the most distant hope, however of ever attaining to wealth. Moreover, Francis Minot possessed excellent qualities, which entitled him to be called by discreet elderly people a "fine character;" by his companions a "a noble good fellow;" and by the ladies generally a "darling."

Katie could not help loving Mr. Frank, and he knew it. He was certain she preferred his society even to that of Mr. Wellington, whom alone he saw fit to honor with the appellation of rival.

This Mr. Wellington (his companions called him the "Duke") was no idiot or hump-back, as I could have wished him to be, in order to make a good story. On the contrary, he was a man of sense, education, good looks and fine manners, and there was nothing of the knave about him, as I could ever ascertain.

Beside this his income was sufficient to enable him to live superbly. Also he was considered two or three degrees handsomer than Mr. Minot.

Therefore the only thing on which Frank had to depend was the power he possessed over Katy's sympathies and affections. The "Duke"—although just the man for her in every other sense, being blessed with a fortune, good looks and fine manners—had never been able to draw these out, and the amiably conceited Mr. Frank was not willing to believe that she would suffer mere worldly considerations to control the aspirations of her heart.

However, she said to him, one day, when he pressed her to decide his fate—she said to him with a sigh:

"Oh, Frank! I am sorry that we have ever met!"

"Sorry?"

"Yes—for we must part now—"

"Part?" repeated Frank, turning pale.

It was evident he had not expected this.

"Yes—yes," said Katie, casting down her eyes with another piteous sigh.

Frank sat by her side; he placed his arm around her waist, without heeding her feeble resistance: he lowered his voice, and talked to her until she—the proud Katie—wept—wept bitterly.

"Katie," said he, then, with a burst of passion, "I know you love me! But you are proud—ambitious—selfish! Now if you would have me leave you, say the word—and I go!"

"Go!" murmured Katie, very feebly—"go!"

"You have decided?" whispered Frank.

"I have!"

"Then, love, farewell!"

He took her hand, gazed a moment tenderly and sorrowfully upon her beautiful, tearful face; then clasped her to his bosom.

She permitted the embrace. She even gave way to the impulse of the instant, and twined her arms about neck. But in a moment her resolution came to aid her, and she pushed him from her with a sigh.

"Shall I go?" he articulated.

A feeble "yes" fell from her quivering lips.

And an instant later she was lying upon the sofa, sobbing and weeping passionately—alone.

To tear the tenacious root of love out of her heart had cost her more than she could have anticipated; and the certainty of a golden life of luxury proved but a poor consolation, it seemed, for the sacrifice she had made.

She lay long upon the sofa, sobbing and weeping passionately. Gradually her grief appeared to exhaust itself. Her breathing became more regular and calm.

The struggle was over. The agony was passed. She saw Mr. Wellington enter, and arose cheerfully to meet him. His manners pleased her; his station and fortune fascinated her more. He offered her his hand. She accepted it. A kiss sealed the engagement—but it was not such a kiss as Frank had given her, and she could not repress a sigh.

There was a magnificent wedding. Splendidly attired, dazzling the eye with everything around in the atmosphere of fairy-land, Katie gave her hand to the man her ambition—not her love—had chosen.

But certainly ambition could not have made a better choice. Already she saw herself surrounded by a magnificent court, of which she was the acknowledged and admired queen. The favors of fortune were showered upon her; she floated luxuriously upon the smooth and glassy wave of a charmed life.

Nothing was wanting in the whole circle of her outward existence to adorn it, and make it bright with happiness.

But she was not long in discovering that there was something wanting within her own breast!

Her friends were numerous, her husband tender, kind and loving; but all the attentions and affections she enjoyed could not fill her heart.

She had once felt its chords of sympathy moved by a skillful touch; she had known the heavenly charm of their deep, delicious harmony; and now they were silent—motionless—muffled, so to speak, in silks and satins. These chords still and soundless, her heart was dead; not the less so because it had been killed by a golden shaft. Having known and felt the life of sympathy in love, she could not but mourn for it, unconsoled by the life of luxury. In short, Katy in time became magnificently miserable, splendidly unhappy.

Then a change became apparent in her husband. He could not long remain blind to the fact that his love was not returned. He sought the company of those whose gayety might lead him to forget the sorrow and despair of his soul. This shadow-joy was unsatisfactory, however; and, impelled by powerful longings for love, he went astray to warm his heart by a strange fire.

Kate saw herself now in the midst of a gorgeous desolation, burning with a thirst unquenchable by golden streams that flowed around her; panting with a hunger not all the food of flattery and admiration could appease.

She reproached her husband for deserting her thus, and he answered with angry and desperate taunts of deception and a total lack of love which smote her conscience heavily.

"You do not care for me," he cried; "then why do you complain that I bestow elsewhere the affections you have met with coldness?"

"But it is wrong—sinful," Katie remonstrated.

"Yes, I know it!" said her husband, fiercely. "It is the fruit of an evil seed. And who sowed that seed? Who gave me a hand without a heart—who became a sharer of my fortune, but gave me no share in sympathy—who devoted me to the fate of a loving, unloved husband? Nay, do not weep, and clasp your hands, and sigh and sob with such desperation of impatience—for I say nothing you do not deserve to hear."

"Very well," said Katie, calming herself, "I will not complain. I will not say your reproaches are undeserved. But granting that I am the cold, deceitful thing you call me—you know this state of things cannot continue."

"Yes, I know it."

"Well?"

Mr. Wellington's brow gathered darkly; his eye flashed with determination; his lips curled with scorn.

"I have made up my mind," said he, "that we should not live together any longer. I am tired of being called the husband of the splendid Mrs. Wellington. I will move in my circle; you shall shine in yours. I will place no restraints on your actions, nor shall you on mine. We will be free."

"But the world!" shrieked Kate, trembling.

"The world will admire you the same—and what more do you desire?" asked her husband, bitterly. "The marriage of hands and not of hearts, is mockery. We have played the farce long enough. You know the conventional meaning of husband and wife; but do you know what it should mean? Do you feel that the only true union is that of love and sympathy? Then enough of this mummery! Farewell! I go to consult friends about the terms of separation. Nay, do not tremble and cry and cling to me now—for I shall be liberal to you. As much of my fortune shall be yours as you desire."

He pushed her from him. She fell upon the sofa. From a heart torn with anguish she shrieked aloud:

"Frank! Frank! why did I send you from me? Why did I sacrifice love and happiness to such a fate as this? Why was I blind until sight brought me misery?"

She lay upon the sofa, sobbing and weeping passionately. Gradually her grief appeared to exhaust itself; her head lay peacefully upon her arm, over which swept her disheveled tresses—until with a start, she cried:

"Frank! oh, Frank, come back!"

"Here I am," said a soft voice by her side.

She raised her head. She opened her astonished eyes. Frank was standing before her.

"You have been asleep," he said, smiling kindly.

"Asleep?"

"And dreaming, too, I should say—not pleasantly either."

"Dreaming?" murmured Katie, "and is it all a dream?"

"I hope so," replied Frank, taking her hand.

"You could not mean to send me from you so cruelly, I know! So I waited in your father's study, where I have been talking to him all of an hour. I came back to plead my cause once more—and found you here where I left you—asleep."

"Oh, what a horrid dream," murmured Katie, rubbing her eyes. "It was so like a terrible reality that I shudder now to think of it! I thought I was married!"

"And would that be so horrible?' asked Frank. 'I hope then you did not dream you were married to me!'

'No—I thought I gave my hand without my heart.'

'Then, if you gave me your hand, it would not be without your heart?'

'No Frank,' said Katie, her bright eyes beaming happily through tears—'and here it is.'

She placed her fair hand in his—he kissed it in transport.

And soon after there was a real marriage; not a splendid, but a happy one; not followed by a life of luxury, but by a life of love and contentment; and that was the marriage of Frank Minot and Katie Yale.

An active tool never grows rusty.

Miscellaneous.

FACT STRANGER THAN FICTION.—The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:

To the Editor of the Boston Herald: Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full.

Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars.—They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact, I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.

Respectfully yours,
MRS. E. N. WARDWELL.
Pine St., Swampscott, Sept. 15.

The following story is told of James Ryder Randall, author of "My Maryland" and the scholarly editor of the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle and Constitutionalist. He attended preaching at a colored church in the country, and had in his pocket a silver half dollar, just the ticket fare back to Augusta. At the conclusion of the sermon the minister ordered a collection for his own benefit. "Of course," said he, "I 'spects every pusson to give somethin'; but I'se told that Mr. Thomas up the lane yander had some turkeys stole Friday night. I don't want any man who hod a han' in stealing dem turkeys to put any money in de hat." When the hat reached Randall, not a man had denied, and the preacher's eyes were on him. His half dollar went into the hat.

That wonderful remedy for rheumatism, St. Jacobs Oil, has been used by a large number of people in this city, and with effect truly marvelous. Frequent reports are made where sufferers have been afforded relief, and the sale is growing largely. The fact that it is an external remedy, commends it to many who would not otherwise think of going out of the beaten track to find a remedy.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

HER ESTIMATE.—"Do you love me?" "Yes," she answered, "better than anything else in the world. It's a beautiful night for a moonlight drive." A moonlight drive would cost at least three dollars, and as he agitated seventeen cents in his right trousers pocket he surveyed the lunar orb with a knowgaze, and remarked, "I should be so happy to take you, but it's a wet moon, and you know you are so liable to catch cold, dear." The next morning the disappointed maiden observed to her mother, "Charley and I have quit. He knows a heap about the weather, but he's a perfect ignoramus about me."

THERE IS A BALM IN GILEAD.—The success which has marked the introduction of Cream Balm, a Catarrh remedy, prepared by Ely Bros., Oswego, N. Y., is indeed marvelous. Many persons in Pittston and vicinity are using it with most satisfactory results. A lady down town is recovering the sense of smell, which she has not enjoyed for fifteen years, through the use of the Balm. She had given up her case as incurable. Mr. Barber the druggist, has used it in his family and commends it very highly. In another column a young Tunkhannock lawyer, known to many of our readers, testifies that he was cured of partial deafness. It is certainly a very efficacious remedy. —Pittston, Pa., Gazette, Aug. 15, 1879. Price 50 cents. Oct.5 1m.

"If I am not home from the party to-night at ten o'clock," said a husband to his better and bigger half, "don't wait for me." "That I won't," replied the lady, significantly. "I won't wait, but I'll come for you." The gentleman returned at ten precisely.

One of the Plymouth Brethren—a religious sect of which there is a congregation in Montreal—was asked why they never spoke of the Plymouth Sisters. "Oh," was the reply, "the Brethren embrace the sisters."

Some time ago, a character, of which there are many in Newburyport, went into a rum-shop and called for a quart of rum. It was poured into a two quart jug, which he produced, when the coon told the barkeeper to charge it. "Not much," said the man of stimulants. "I'll take it back." "All right, then," said the bummer, "but be careful and take only a quart." The bar-keeper poured out a quart, and was satisfied; so was the customer. The other quart was water, and the stimulant was ready mixed for drinking.

He was a dry goods drummer, and had just returned from the pursuit of his prosaic vocation at the Far West. Eagerly he sought the presence of her whose love shed the only sunshine of poetry upon his existence, and found her drooping, dispirited and melancholy. "Evangeline," he murmured, with all the pathos he could command, "why this gloom? Do I dream it or is it true that our separation has cast a shadow over the lovely landscape of your soul?" "No," she said, straightening out her arm with an expression of pain "I've been vaccinated, and it's taken dreadfully."

"Eloquent," said the Chicago lawyer of his partner. "He's able to reason the kick out of a mule. Why here, awhile ago, business was dull, and he decided that Mrs. Dasher ought to have a divorce, and he'd go into court and get it for her, and then charge her for it. Somehow she heard of what was going on. She galloped down to the court-house to stop him, as she didn't want a divorce. She got there just as he was making his plea for her. And mind you, she was mad at him; but, by Jove, sir! she listened to him five minutes, and became so convinced that she ought to have a divorce that she walked right up where the jury could see her and shed three pints of tears while he recited her wrongs. And when he won the case she embraced him and said he should conduct all her divorce cases. I call that eloquence."

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

WOMAN'S TRIUMPH.

A SEVERE SURGICAL OPERATION. IT IS ENDURED WITHOUT TAKING ETHER. SUBJECT, MRS. EDWARD MYERS, OF RONDOUT, N. Y.

(From the Cor. of the Kingston, N. Y. Freeman.)

The case of Mrs. Edward Myers, of Rondout, New York, furnishes an apt illustration of woman's power of endurance. This lady had been treated for months in the usual way for Erysipelas of the hand, without benefit. Not until her hand had become a mass of putrified flesh, did she turn to Dr. Kennedy, proprietor of the "Favorite Remedy," for help. He at once informed her that it was impossible to save the hand—it must be amputated. She received this terrible intelligence quietly, declined to take ether, stipulating merely to hold her husband's hand during the operation, and underwent the painful process without moving a muscle or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy then gave "Favorite Remedy" freely to cleanse the blood and prevent the return of the disease, and Mrs. Myers now lives and rejoices in her great deliverence.

"Favorite Remedy" is fast becoming a trusted household friend in all cases of Female Weaknesses and diseases of the blood. One dollar a battle. Your druggist has it.

The School Question.

After great research our neighbor has brought out to his readers a letter of Mr. George Peabody, written some thirty years ago, in controversion, we presume, of our views on the School Question. We fail to see its bearing at all. The letter says nothing about the Peabody medal, and in our judgment refers to an entirely different matter.—If our neighbor would have us infer that by the letter quoted, Mr. Peabody intended the medal as a prize, in direct opposition to our statement that it is not a prize, we can only say that his wishes in this respect have not been carried out, and we have only to deal with the facts in the case, and not the requests or desires of Mr. Peabody at that time. For the benefit of our neighbor, we turn to Webster's Dictionary for the definition of the word prize:

Prize: That which is taken from another; that which is deemed a valuable acquisition; that which is obtained or offered as the reward of contest.

In our issue of the 14th, quoted by our neighbor, we said "The Peabody medal is not a prize," "The Peabody medal is presented to every scholar who shall complete the course of study and graduate from the High School. No rank is necessary." Now, we defy our neighbor to say wherein our statement above is incorrect in the slightest particular. We admitted that the books presented to the scholars at graduation were prizes, but inasmuch as we don't remember a class when every graduate did not receive a prize, and the value of each is so nearly equal, we took occasion to say then that we did not think they led to any undue stimulus to obtain them.

Our neighbor refers to Amherst College and says that while she is not offering prizes, there are twenty other institutions of learning who are offering such prizes and have no intention of abolishing them. We admit it. We are frank to admit, also, that there is room for difference of opinion on the results in the matter. But Amherst will not go back to the the old method because her sister institutions are not yet following her lead; she is perfectly satisfied that the step she has taken is an advance in the progress of college education, and if she proves it a success, the other institutions will fall into line. All advance in progress of education is met with opposition at first. It is but natural.

We do not anticipate that our views in this matter, with reference to prizes and disregard of rank, will speedily prevail. We are in harmony with the views as put forth by the advocates of the system in Amherst, and brought out from time to time in this paper. We have heard nothing yet from our neighbor leading us to change them in the slightest degree. We do not expect to do so. He has no personal knowledge of our public schools, their methods or system. If in sympathy with them, he has to depend upon hearsay knewledge, as his education was obtained entirely independent and outside of them.

Puck has four portrait frames, three of them filled with likenesses of Tyler, Fillmore and Johnson, and labelled "first failure," "second failure," "third failure." The fourth is still vacant, but President Arthur is drawing aside the curtain.—Lynn Bee.

The allusion intended to be conveyed by the above is obvious, and we protest against such attempts to create discord and inharmony. There is much in the past record of Gen. Arthur that we cannot commend. Had he been called to the Presidential chair at the time of the struggle at Albany, by the death of Garfield, it would have been hard to forget the partisan purposes to which he had prostituted the office of Vice President. But it is otherwise now. The struggle through which the nation has passed has seemed to have its effect upon Gen. Arthur. He has shown in many ways that he feels the responsibility of his position. And it is right that he should have the full support and sympathy of the party and the nation, and be judged by his actions in the future, in the position which he has been called to fill. Since the death of Garfield, and his accession to the office of President, he has shown no haste, but rather a disposition to calmly and quietly take what steps he deems necessary for the good of the nation.—He has convened the Senate in extra session. This is well. It cannot be expected that his life will be a "charmed one," and not subject to the dangers and vicissitudes resting upon as all. It is necessary that a President pro tem. of the Senate should be chosen, that there may be no break in the succession of the Executive government. He has also wisely deferred the nomination of a new Cabinet until the time of such session, and it is also very evident that his purposes with reference to changes, if any he may make, are kept from the politicians. He is showing a purpose every day more manifest, to be President of the United States. He is to be responsible to the country for his actions and for his policy, for the remaining three and a half years of his term of office. He cannot take Garfield's place. No living man could do that. If imbued in any measure by the spirit that animated him, he can manifest it in his future deeds. The Cabinet of a president should be in sympathy personally and politically with him. If Gen. Arthur can not carry out his purposes, or feels that he is not in harmony with any members of the Cabinet selected by Garfield, it is right that he should start in the first place with such a Cabinet as he can work with. Let us thank God for the harmonious feeling at present existing throughout the country, and let us do all in our power to uphold and strengthen the hands of our present Chief Magistrate. Let us not condemn him unheard. He needs our help and support. Let him have it.

WE much regret that the Monument Committee should have deemed it policy to surrender to the Selectmen their duties which the town had assigned to them. It places the matter of the future dedication in a very uncertain position—and makes it doubtful if there will be a dedication at all. We regret that there should have been any want of harmony between the G. A. R. Post and the Committee; we think there have been mistakes and hasty action on both sides. The Committee acted as they thought wisely, and they have done the work of erecting the monument well and satisfactorily. But there ought to be a dedication. It is in conformity with our feelings and our respect for the brave men whose names are enscribed thereon. Let there be no great display, but let the neighboring Posts of the county be invited to participate, and let us not drop the matter here. We think with little concessions the Monument Committee and the Post could yet agree to go forward together. Come, gentlemen, harmonize your differences, and let us have a dedication that shall be a credit to the town, and a fitting memorial of those of the comrades of the G. A. R. who have died.

THE death of Henry F. Durant, Esq. which occurred at his home in Wellesley Monday night, is a severe blow to the friends of Wellesley College. Mr. Durant was formerly a prominent lawyer in Boston, having studied with Gen. B. F. Butler, and was associated at times with Rufus Choate and other celebrated attorneys. In 1862 he lost a son, to whom he was much attached, which so affected him that he gave up his law practice, became acquainted with Dr. Howard Crosby, and at some suggestions from him, and through his influence, he became a professor of religion, and commenced soon thereafter the erection of Wellesley College. He was a man of very generous impulses, and devoted the latter portion of his life entirely to the College. He has left a large fortune, and it is to be presumed that Wellesley College will not suffer from his death.

The cattle show of the Essex Agricultural Society will be held in Haverhill again next year, then it will be Peabody's turn.

POINTS OF GOOD HORSES.—In buying a horse look first at the head and eyes for signs of intelligence, temper, courage and honesty. Unless a horse has brains, you cannot teach him to do anything well. If bad qualities predominate in a horse, education serves to enlarge and intensify them. The head is the indicator of disposition in a horse. A square muzzle with large nostrils evidences an ample breathing apparatus and great lung power. Next, see that he is well cut under the jowl, with jaw bones broad and wide apart under the throttle. Breadth and fulness between the eyes is always desirable. The eye should be full and hazel in color; ears small and thin and thrown well forward. The horse that turns his ears back until they almost meet at a point is not to be trusted. He is a biter or a kicker, and is sure to be vicious in other respects. A horse with a dishing face is cowardly, and a cowardly brute, being naturally vicious, can never be trained to anything well. A horse with a rounding nose, tapering forehead and a broad full place between the eyes is always treacherous and mischievous. Avoid a long-legged stilty horse. Select one with a short straight back and rump, withers high and shoulders sloping, well set and broad, with good depth of chest, forelegs short, hind legs straight, with the hock low down, short pastern joints and a round mulish foot. By observing the above hints, a horse may be selected that is graceful, good-natured, serviceable and a prize for the owner.

October has come in, and in a very few weeks the brown leaves will lie thick upon the wayside, and keen, chilly blasts will herald the near approach of winter. Of late years in this climate we do not have a great deal of autumn or spring weather. The long, cold winters do their best to get in the lap of summer, and the hot-waves linger as long as they can in the fall. Consequently, it would not be surprising if we were treated to genial sunshine and mild weather for some time to come. In spite of this fact, however, we know that these autumn days will vanish almost imperceptibly, and there place be taken by the season of biting frosts and storms. It is a wise precaution, therefore to make preparation for winter before its severities are at hand.

THREE button kid gloves at forty-six cents per pair is what Conrad advertises in another column. We should judge, at that price, that there would not be a pair left on his counters after the first day. He also has opened his fall importation of his own Kid Gloves, which are so well and favorably known to our readers. Call at his store for kid gloves of all kinds. You will never regret it.

THE "OLD MECHANICS' FAIR" AT BOSTON.—The fourteenth exhibition of the old Mechanics' Association, Boston, Huntington avenue, opposite old Coliseum grounds, is now in perfect running order, and daily receiving thousands of visitors. Its building is of its own erection, and is simply elegant, architecturally considered. It has twenty-two rooms, all of which are filled with the choicest results of New England industry, skill and art, including a full machinery hall; all the electrical appliances; a superb art-gallery; a military and colonial museum; a cataract and floral pyramid; an immense camera-obscura; a large department of ladies' embroidery and needle-work; vocal and instrumental music; and, in short, a thousand attractive novelties. A visit to this spacious and convenient building, with all its inner accommodations free, may well be considered the event of a lifetime.

The attention of our readers is called to the SALEM REMNANT STORE, just above Mechanic Hall, in Salem. This is a new firm, and their method of conducting their business is somewhat different from that of the other dry goods stores, they making a specialty of remnants. But the bargains to be found there—well, there is a surprise awaiting our readers, if they have not visited the store.

Miss Oliver, the eloquent Brooklyn preacher, strikes out after this fashion:

I have seen a man who actually swallowed a brown-stone residence, his own house, and not content with that, he swallowed his nice furniture, piece after piece, then his wife's jewelry and good clothes and things. The bricks with which houses are built, I believe, cost about one cent each. Every time a young man takes a glass of beer he swallows about five bricks. Calculate how many bricks you swallow in a day, and then calculate how many you swallow in a year. Count the bricks by years, and you will find how long it will take to swallow a house.

The clergyman who prayed at Haverhill Wednesday, "We approach Thee, O, Lord, under the auspices of the Essex county agricultural society," must have thought that the members have a good deal of influence in celestial matters.

A. J. De Voe of Hackensack, N. J., has promulgated the following rules and principles whereby he declares it possible for any man in the northern hemisphere (north of latitude 15) to form an accurate opinion concerning weather. If these things are so, they are worth knowing. Mr. De Voe challenges men of science to detect any flaw in them:

1. When the temperature falls suddenly there is a storm forming south of you.

2. When the temperature rises suddenly there is a storm forming north of you.

3. The wind always blows from a region of fair weather toward a region where a storm is forming.

4. Cirrus clouds always move from a region where a storm is in progress toward a region of fair weather.

5. Cumulus clouds always move from a region of fair weather toward a region where a storm is forming.

6. When cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from the north or nothwest there will be rain in less than 24 hours, no matter how cold it may be.

7. When cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from the south or southwest there will be a cold rain storm on the morrow if it be summer, or a snow storm if it be winter.

8. The wind always blows in a large circle around a storm, and when it blows from the north the heaviest rain is east of you; if it blows from the south the heaviest rain is west; if it blows from the east the heaviest rain is south, and if it blows from the west the heaviest rain is north of you.

9. The wind never blows unless rain or snow is falling within 1,000 miles of you.

10. Whenever a heavy white frost occurs a storm is forming within 1,000 miles north or northwest of you.

(Our pressman thinks the sun never sets without its being good or bad weather within 15 miles.)

"A girl's worst enemy is found in her own sex, not in a direct sense, but in the sense of criticisms, insinuations and those tendencies which go to undermine her reputation. As a rule, the first intimation the male gets of a lady comes from the ladies themselves, and is good or evil as they may elect, and this is confined to no class nor condition of society. If a girl unfortunately goes astray, the first to plunge the dagger in her morals is her sister—the first to freeze her with scorn is her sister—the first to advise relegation and ostracism is her sister. Yet the man, her debaser, is fawned over, sought after, not even alluded to as a 'hussy' or a 'mean thing.' Very few girls of to-day but have been the subject of remark while gossips have sipped their tea, yet men seldom or never make a youth the subject of comment while drinking their wine or beer. It is idle to dilate on this subject, everybody knows it, the women included. Men make bad women, to be sure, but don't let us forget that the woman's insiduous enemy fighting in ambush is her own dear sister."—Goshen Times.

The Theological Faculty of Yale College has unanimously adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, We believe the revised version of the New Testament to be better than any other English version, because it follows more exactly the Greek text as originally written, and is a more clear and correct translation; therefore,

Voted, That hereafter it be read instead of the version of 1611 at morning prayers and other devotional services of the Yale Theological School.

A great improvement in travel by rail is the great advance made in the style and workmanship of the cars on the different lines of road. The Stonington Line to New York, have recently put on two elegantly fitted and upholstered cars, on their steamboat train. It is a luxury to ride in them. Their line is one of the pleasantest and safest on the Sound at this season of the year. Train leaves Providence depot at 6.30 P. M.

MERRILL & MACKINTIRE announce that they have opened a new and full line of Wall Papers, of all designs, styles and prices. Now is the time when the thoughts of the housewife are turned in this direction, and an inspection of the stock of the above mentioned firm can not fail to secure a selection.

The Boston and Lowell railroad stands fourth among the Boston railroads in the number of season-ticket passengers carried to that city. The Boston and Providence leads in the season-ticket business, and the Albany comes next and the Boston and Maine third. All of them last year carried over a million passengers.

SPECIAL attention is directed to the prices of men's boots, which are given in another column by the New England Boot and Shoe Co., of Salem, of which F. W. Lucas is manager, and to the additional fact that all the goods sold at this store are warranted as represented. Give them a call.

Amherst college has a hundred students in the freshman class and expects more.

We can easily understand how a man can swallow a dozen bricks or so, or even a brown-stone house, but when it comes to his "wife's good clothes and things," we think he would hesitate, at the risk of being lost, before he tackled a hoop skirt or a corset. This is too much. It would even appall a goat.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

A bad give away. A Toronto lady wrote to another lady friend inviting her by postal card to make an afternoon call, as she had something to tell her. She added that she would not disclose the nature of the communication she wished to make as the postoffice clerk would be sure to read it. When the lady received the postal card from the official at the office, he said, sarcastically, "That is a scandalous libel." Appearances were against the truth of his allegation.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The entertainment given in the Institute last Friday evening by Bennett & Moulton's Juvenile Opera Company, was very poorly attended, but fully as well as the "show" deserved. We had occasion to say, when this same company appeared here last spring under the auspices of the Odd Fellows, that the entertainment was not of the tone our people had been accustomed to attend, nor was it equal by far to what the Odd Fellows had previously given. With the exception of Miss Annie Liebsch and Miss Mamie Upton, the company is very poor. The jokes and actions on the stage were coarse and rude, while the costumes were dirty and the stage effects poorly and slovenly arranged. If Mr. Moulton is going to give our people entertainments, we think it would pay him better, when he advertises a first-class entertainment, and charges first-class prices of admission, to give one, or else charge for a second-rate show and let the public govern themselves accordingly.

There are lots of pleasures about moving that all do not experience. A job wagon was engaged to move a family from Beverly to this town one day last week, and arrived here late in the afternoon, when it was found that the owner of the tenement would not allow the goods to go in, on account of the party engaging it being "poor pay." While the owner of the goods was searching for another tenement the team was stabled for the night. About the middle of the next forenoon a tenement was found in "Dublin," and the goods about half unloaded when the reputation of the family reached the owner and the proprietor of the job wagon was ordered to suspend. But it was too late, and the way that driver and his assistant worked to get rid of those goods as they thought of carrying them around town another day was a a caution.

The Fitch Poole Council, Legion of Honor, which numbers 107 members, organized and elected officers last Friday evening, as follows:

Commander—Henry C. Torr.
Vice Commander—F. S. Worcester.
Past. Commander—W. F. Wiley.
Sec'y.—Jas. N. Ham.
Treas.—Otis Brown.
Collector—Chas. D. Howard.
Orator—George Randall.
Chap.—Jas. R. Waterman.
Guide—H. A. Harrington.
Ward.—J. S. Paul.
Sentry—George Brimmer.
Trustees—C. T. Batchelder, F. S. Worcester and N. M. Quint.

The meetings will probably be held at Masonic Hall, the first and fourth Mondays of each month.

The So. Peabody Christian Temperance Union, which organized last Spring with a membership of thirty-eight, is in a flourishing condition. Six meetings have been held, and the present membership is seventy-seven. The meetings, which are partly of a literary character, are held on the first Tuesday of each month in the Cong. Chapel, and are largely attended by the young people of the place. Its members will be glad to meet any of the temperance workers of the town. The present officers of the Union are: President—Orlando F. Newhall; Vice President—Wm. F. Wiggin; Sec'y.—Viola Putnam; Treas.—Margaret Brown; Chaplain—Rev. J. W. Colwell.

An unknown woman who has been wandering about town for a few days past, was taken up Thursday night and given over to the Overseers of the Poor, and by them sent to the Almshouse in Peabody. She could not, or would not give any account of herself, and is apparently insane. She had lain out in the street nearly all night before discovered. There is nothing about the woman to give any clue to her identity. —Danvers Mirror.

After remaining over night at the Almshouse, she gave the name of Mabel Borden of Atlanta, Ga., and said she had friends in Salem, and was allowed to depart.

On Thursday, Oct. 5, afternoon and evening, the ladies of the Spiritual Society will hold a sociable and supper at Ashland Hall. Supper will be served from 6 and 7. At 8 o'clock a delegation of mediums from Lynn will hold a test seance, and good speakers are expected to be present. Sunday afternoon and evening, Oct. 9, Miss Jennie B. Hagan of Vermont, will occupy the platform at 2 1-2 and 7 1-2 o'clock.

Mr. N. W. Frye, who has been tanner for Richardson, Doyle & Co., is now Superintendent of Hubbard & Blake's large factory in Charlestown. On bidding him good-bye on Friday last, the men in his charge presented him with a handsome gold headed cane. Mr. Charles Barnstead succeeds to Mr. Frye's late position.

Among the most recent patents issued is one to Mr. W. T. Dole of this town, for a carriage wheel, a notice of which we gave a few weeks ago.

During the hasty make-up of our paper last week, we omitted in our list of decorations the following on Walnut street:

Chas. H. Goulding's furniture store was neatly festooned and the window and gas fixtures showed excellent taste in arrangement. Pictures of Lincoln and Garfield were exhibited.

The window and outside of Norton & Gilman's stove store, in the same building, made a fine display.

Vaughn & Fallon draped their windows with black and white crape. Pictures of Garfield and Lincoln were exhibited.

Mr. R. O. Spiller displayed a draped flag.

We would add here that the decorations of Mr. Geo. Stevens, which were also omitted, were very fine, and, as we all know, George never does things by halves and he certainly kept up his reputation this time.

The annual chowder of the Volunteer Engine Co. took place last evening at Pierpont Hall. Besides the company a large number of our citizens and members of other companies were present. After partaking of a most excellent clam chowder—the work of Mr. Ira Burnham—speeches were made by Engineers Geo. O. Pierce and W. W. Reed, Selectmen Southwick and Richardson, Mr. Wm. P. Clark, and others. Shortly after nine the assembly adjourned to the Engine House, where singing was in order.

The Royal Mail Steamship Parisian of the Allan Line, left with the English mail upon Friday, Sept. 2, at 5.30 P. M., and landed it at Rimouski, Canada, upon Friday, Sept. 9, at 10.10 A. M, 6 days, 16 hours, and 40 minutes, thus making the quickest transatlantic mail trip yet accomplished. Mr. Chas. D. Howard is agent of this line, and would be pleased to give any information desired.

On last Sunday, Rev. L. L. Wood preached a Children's Sermon, which was very interesting to them as well as to older persons. He took his text from Psalms 103 : 15, and illustrated it with several appropriate anecdotes. We hope that his practice of preaching sermons especially to the children once in a while will be productive of much good to all.

At a meeting of the Murray Club, connected with the Universalist church, last Monday evening, Mr. Charles S. Goldthwait was elected President; Miss Eva D. Raddin, Secretary; Mr. Herbert A. Harrington, Treasurer. The following gentlemen were elected directors: Rev. G. M. Harmon, F. C. Merrill, F. W. Taggard.

At the State and Belknap County fair at Laconia, N. H., recently, Mrs. Eliza Sutton of this town, received a diploma for a knit quilt. At the same fair Mr. Seth Flanders, a former resident here, was awarded second premium, $5, on pulling oxen weighing over 3500, and third premium, $3, for pulling oxen weighing under 3500.

The committee having in charge the arrangements for the Volunteer Fair for the benefit of Mr. Nolan are making good progress. About $2000 will be given in prizes and four thousand tickets have been issued. Among the grand prizes is $500 in cash and the PEABODY PRESS for one year.

The High School graduates of the Beverly High School, since 1871 having formed an association known as the Sperry Association, named in honor of Rev. W. G. Sperry of this town, a former teacher, held their fourth annual re-union last Wednesday, at which Mr. Sperry was present and addressed the meeting.

Lady readers who intend keeping house plants during the coming winter should re-pot them now. With proper care they will thrive much better than when this work is done later in the season, and by the time winter comes they will be as vigorous and blooming as were the roses in June.

The friends of Miss Mira C. Larrabee met at her residence on Tuesday evening of last week, and gave her a surprise, which was further increased by presenting her with a gossamer water-proof. The evening was socially spent.

Owing to their largely increasing business, the firm of Dean & Blake, morocco manufacturers, have been obliged to change their quarters, and will now be located at the Sanger currying shop on Crowninshield street.

Mr. Edward Caskin of the Troy Base Ball Club, a brother to our stovemen, has returned to his home in Danvers, being unable to play on account of injuries received some time ago while playing a game with the Bostons.

On Thursday night the Rev. Dr. Steele, of this town gave a lecture in Boston, in Christian Association Hall, upon the "Revised Translation of the New Testament."

We are indebted to one of our town fathers, Mr. J. E. Herrick, for a generous supply of very fine Hartford grapes and late Crawford peaches raised at his home in West Danvers.

Anecdotes.

SUICIDAL MANIA.

W. C. H., aged fifty, a laborer, who had four times attempted, at last committed suicide by drowning himself; a brother had drowned himself at the same spot; a sister poisoned herself, and another sister had attempted suicide. Among the three hundred cases I find but two in which heredity may be suspected, though I have not usually made inquiries as to this point. One man had an uncle who had poisoned himself, and a grandfather who cut his throat, both under the influence of drink; and a woman said her father had blown his brains out about a year before her attempt to poison herself. The temperament and dispositions, however, which prompt or incline to suicide are no doubt matters of transmission from parents who have not taught or transmitted the power of self-government and the reverence for life which they themselves did not possess. Secondly, I cannot doubt but that the sentimental glamour thrown over suicide by some poets and novelists has had an evil result, which they would be eager to deprecate. I distinctly assert, for example, my belief that the poem of Thomas Hood, "The Bridge of Sighs," written with the sole object of evoking charity for the despised, has yet, with a certain class, tinged suicide with a halo of romance, and afforded a justification of cowardice and crime to the unreasoning and hysterical. Thirdly, many of the attempts that have come under my notice are distinctly attributable to the ordinarily violently exaggerated language of parents, perhaps especially mothers, of the poorer classes. "I'll break every bone in your body," is an ordinary way of expressing displeasure at some trivial offense of a child; and no one who has been forced to overhear "a few family words" will wonder how that deed of violence, which is threatened with no intention whatever of accomplishment, becomes in a less guarded moment the suggestion of a crime which is familiar in language though never really contemplated hitherto in act. Brought up in an atmosphere of threats against life, what wonder if children proceed from the sin of word to that of deed?—The Fortnightly Review.

TROUT AND COCKROACH.

No sooner the thought than the rod is put together. The finest gut bottom is attached, a No. 7 hook thereto spliced, and a cockroach lightly impaled. By standing on the crown of a willow, some fifteen yards off, I could see the head of my quarry, though he could scarcely see me by reason of the natural exigencies of the laws governing refraction and reflection. Very quietly I let my bait down on the water, and paid out the fine line to within three feet or four feet of the nose of the trout. With the utmost circumspection, with a slow, fluent, gliding motion, the cockroach was lowered on—on—on—till within a few inches of the fish's mouth. Then I withdrew it, as if to take it entirely from the water. No notice took he. My heart again failed me, well nigh, at least, for I had tried by this time persistently for some weeks to capture this lordly fish, and as each failure was added to its predecessor, my desire of possession naturally grew greater and greater. However, I very, very gently moved up a few yards, and again watched the bait down toward the stolid fish. This time the cockroach had sunk deeper in the water, and, with a sort of chuckle, I watched it gradually approach his muzzle in the same plane, and not, as before, rather above. As it neared him, to my inexpressible joy, I saw his under lip show as if it had, by some mechanical impulse, connected with the bait, automatically moved. Nearer passed the bait onward, the jaw lowered yet, and, like a child taking a sop, like an unfledged bird taking in a worm, it passed behind the portals of that polished head. With suppressed breath and palpitating heart I counted—one, two, three, four, five—then, with a side movement, I struck; not violently, but swiftly; not mightily, but strongly. Ye gods, he was hooked, and out yards in the stream he sped! Of course, he was only landed after the usual interregnum of splendid struggling, and I become the hero of the hour in the possession of this splendid fish.—The Practical Fisherman.

PRE-HISTORIC ARIZONA.

Right where Prescott now stands, can be traced the walls of an ancient city, and if we are to judge from the wearing down of mountains and the covering of earth that has almost hidden the buildings from being traced, we should say that many thousands of years have passed and gone since the people who once inhabited a prosperous city, where now stands Prescott, the most beautiful village in Arizona, took their departure or became extinct. That a large and flourishing city once existed here, there can be no doubt, as the evidences are proof positive and deny contradiction. Very often relics are taken from excavations of great depth, and we are inclined to believe that the former inhabitants of Arizona were a curious but a somewhat civilized race. Again, the geologist and antiquarian have a rich field for study in Arizona, for go where you may you are continually treading on the homes and graves of a race of whom nothing is known, other than that they lived in houses and had large buildings of worship.

Have the courage to show that you respect honesty in whatever guise it appears, and your contempt for dishonest duplicity, by whomsoever exhibited.

Have the courage to make a will and a just one.

☞ Try it; keep trying it, and try it again. We say this because we believe that the health, happiness and prosperity of the people depend upon the proper use of these medicines, which have proved so successful in eradicating disease and defeating death. The medicine so effective in its cure of diseases is the great Southern remedy, Simmons' Liver Regulator. Try it; we believe that the first trial will be satisfactory.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

NECESSITATING A SURGICAL OPERATION—LOVING MOTHER ATTEMPTS TO TAKE A PAIR OF SHEARS FROM HER CHILD.

Parents Be Careful.

Domestic accidents are common to women, and some of them are very serious. Mrs. Warner, of South Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., some weeks ago attempted to take from her child a pair of shears with which it was playing. A slight struggle ensued, in which the point of the shears entered Mrs. Warner's left eye, entirely destroying the sight. Her family physician did what he could, but intensely painful inflammation arose, which, by sympathy, threatened the loss of the other eye. Total blindness to a woman having the care of a household is an irretrievable calamity. In this strait Mrs. W— applied to the well-known and skillful surgeon, Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who removed the injured eye by a very successful operation, setting aside all danger of further harm to the sight of the other eye. But, owing to pain and mental distress, her system needed a tonic and restorative medicine. To do this work the Doctor prescribed "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which sustained its reputation and laid a sure foundation of health.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy removes all impurities from the blood, regulates the Liver and Kidneys. Cures Constipation, and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to Females. It is for sale by all our druggists at ONE DOLLAR a bottle. oct5—1m

DIRECTIONS

For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c, insert with little finger a particle of the balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane.

For Deafness.

Apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Having gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone, recognized as a wonderful remedy. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head and snuffles it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeabld. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

AGENTS! AGENTS! AGENTS!

JOHN B. GOUGH'S bran' new book, entitled

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW

is the best chance offered to you. Its Scenes are drawn from the bright and shady sides of life, portrayed as only can portray them. This grand work—now for the first time published—is the "booming" book for agents, and is outselling all others ten to one. The thirty-third thousand is now in press. Its immense sale has been made entirely by active canvassers. No other book compares with it for quick and profitable returns. We are starting more agents now than ever before, and we believe the sale of this book will reach One Hundred Thousand Copies in the next few months.

John B. Gough

We want 1000 more agents at once, to supply this grand book to the thousands who are waiting for it. Remember the sale is only now commencing. The book is entirely new, and most of the territory is now clear. Agents, now is your time to make money, and at the same time circulate a thoroughly first-class book. Exclusive Territory and very Special Terms given. Send for our large circulars containing full particulars. Address A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Publishers, Hartford, Ct.

A girl opened a barber shop at Homer, Ill., and closed it in a month, having already married one of the men whom she shaved.

No More Gossip.—If we are correctly informed, St. Jacobs Oil is now the usual tea-party topic in place of the former staple—free gossip. How wise and much more beneficial!—Indianapolis Daily Sentinel.

"Mr. Smith," said a lady at a fair, "won't you please buy a bouquet to present to the lady you love?" "'Twould'n't be right," said Mr. Smith. "I'm a married man."

There are many forms of nervous debility in men that yield to the use of Carter's Iron Pills. Those who are troubled with nervous weakness, night sweats, &c., should try them.

There are men in this world who attend church all the Sundays in the year, and who never think of admiring the beautiful colored windows on the opposite side of the church until the contribution box comes round

☞ Don't Trust Them. — When you feel badly, and have pains here and there in your body that you don't know how to account for, it is the most foolish policy in the world to take the advice of people who say: Oh! there's nothing the matter with you. Let yourself alone and you will come out all right." These folks know nothing about it, and may be trifling with your life. You may have Kidney or Liver trouble. Send right out to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" and then you will be all right, or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y. sept7—3w

It is a matter of economy for a man to allow his wife to purchase the meat. A woman can get more meat for fifteen cents than a man can for half a dollar. And she can generally get a chunk of liver thrown in, too.

Where pangs the mortal flesh assail,
And give a bitterness to life.
Making the cheek with anguish pale,
And the fierce internal strife;
Then Sanford's Ginger soothes the pain
And smiling Health looks up again.

I purchased five bottles of your Hop Bitters of Bishop & Co. last fall, for my daughter, and am well pleased with the Bitters. They did her more good than all the medicine she has taken for six years. Wm. T. McClure.

The above is from a very reliable farmer, whose daughter was in poor health for seven or eight years, and could obtain no relief until she used Hop Bitters. She is in as good health as any person in the country. We have large sales, and they are making remarkable cures. W. H. Bishop & Co.

"Papa, didn't you beat me once for biting little Tommy?" "Yes, my child; you hurt him much." "Well, then, papa, you ought to whip sister's master, too; he bit sister yesterday afternoon right on the lip, and I knew it hurt her, because she put her arms around his neck and tried to choke him."

Brace Up.—There is serious meaning in this. That wearied step, languid eye and feeling of general lassitude, come from "spring sickness." Be assured, a serious, and, perhaps, fatal disease is close in its wake. The system wants cleansing of winter impurities; the sluggish blood needs to be sent in swift and clear currents through the veins. "Favorite Remedy" will do this; it will give new vigor to the body, brightness to the eye, a glow to the countenance and elasticity to the step. One dollar a bottle. Every druggist has it. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, Catarrh, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, Jr.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

The Bending of Glass Tubing.—When glass tubes are not too wide they may be easily bent over a common gas jet. A burner, made by attaching a lava tip (such as are now commonly used in illuminating burners) to the stand or base of the ordinary Bunsen burner, will be found convenient. The tube is held horizontally in the flame in such a manner as to be entirely surrounded by the flame, and so all possible draughts are avoided and the flame does not flicker. The tube is soon covered with carbon; then it becomes glowing, and bends, in consequence of the weight of its free end, in an even and uniform manner, without making any wrinkles inside the bend or angle. Wide tubes are first filled with sand, and then suspended over a broad flame burner. A broad tube with flattened end, which exactly fits the Bunsen burner, may easily be procured. Thin glass tubes may be bent in the flame of a simple spirit-lamp, but if they are at all thick a Berzelius lamp becomes requisite. In this case the tube must be held across the flame, for then it would become heated in two places and remain cold in the center (i. e., between). It is, therefore, best to hold it tangent to the flame. If it does not bend freely, it is well to assist in the operation with the hand, by slightly pressing the free end in the desired direction. This operation requires a certain amount of skill and dexterity in order to prevent the formation of wrinkles on the interior surface of the bend. These wrinkles not only offend the eye, but so contract the tube that a free current of the gas is prevented, and, in case of distillation, etc., condensable products are caught in the cracks, and the experiment spoilt.—M. B., in Journal of Education.

Lime in Agriculture.—All writers on agricultural subjects seem to agree that the use of lime on clayey soil is of great benefit, crops thus treated showing the advantage of its mixture with the soil. A correspondent to the Farmer's Review writes from France that the European farmers coincide with our agriculturalists in this respect, and concludes as follows:

The extending use of lime is excellent for clay soils. Argil augments in volume when moist—diminishes when dry. Carbonate of lime possesses neither of these properties; applied then to cold clay soils it enables the air and heat to penetrate more readily, thus making the land friable. On light soils the action of lime is weak, and on those very light the use of lime is misplaced. But as the action of lime rapidly transforms the nutritive capital of the land, its success cannot be permanent unless rationally supplemented by direct fertilizers, as farm yard manure, etc. Hence, the adage, Lime enriches the father, but ruins the children. If the soil have an excess of acids, lime "sweetens" by neutralizing them; all cultivated soils are slightly acid, such being necessary for vegetation. Too much, however, acts directly on plants, and indirectly by the formation of soluble and noxious salts of iron.

Disinfection of Ships.—In devising a system for the thorough disinfection of vessels on board of which cases of smallpox had occurred, the Austrian Government, through its medical experts, resorted to the following method: Sulphur to the extent of twelve grains per cubic meter of the space to be disinfected was first burned in an earthenware vessel or basin, placed in center of a mass of sand to prevent all risk of fire; every article of clothing, all the linen, etc., were hung across the cabin, the latter being then hermetically closed for three hours, and afterward exposed to the strongest possible draughts of air for twelve hours; finally, the walls, floor, ceiling, etc., were washed with one kilogramme of lime, or one-half a kilogramme of chloride of zinc, to every hundred liters of water.

Mountain Mahogany.—This wood is indigenous to Nevada. The trees do not grow large; one with a trunk a foot in diameter is much above the average. When dry the wood is about as hard as boxwood, and of a very fine grain. It is of a rich red color and very heavy. When well seasoned it would be a fine material for the wood carver. In the early days it was used in making boxes for shafting, and in a few instances for shoes and dies in a quartz battery. Used as a fuel it creates intense heat, it burns with a blaze as long as ordinary wood would last, and is then found (almost unchanged in form) converted to a charcoal that lasts about twice as long as that of ordinary wood.

Dr. McKinnon, of Windsor, Ont., has sent to the Canadian Lancet a sketch of a stovepipe ventilator, which may not be new in principle,, but which will, no doubt, be found useful as it is simple. The stovepipe is surrounded by a cylinder of sheet iron, having a diameter large enough to leave two and one-half inches of space between it and the pipe. The vitiated air of the room is admitted through an opening or openings at the lower part, and it passes upward as it is heated between the pipe and cylinder for eighteen or twenty inches, according to the height of the latter, and then enters an opening in the stovepipe and passes away with the smoke.

Steam Sledge for Arctic Use.—A dispatch from Washington relative to the outfit of the relief steamer Mary and Helen, states that Chief Engineer George Sewell, of the Navy, now on duty at New York, has, upon official request, forwarded to the head of the Navy Department designs for a steam sledge which is intended to be self-propelling and capable of towing a number of sledges.

The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.

The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.

This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.

TESTIMONIALS from well known people near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible destroyer, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.

We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well-known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, as strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.

Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs. N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician, who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.

THE QUEEREST NAME.—There is a case in Chicago where a young man is going to apply to have his name changed. The man's name is Easus, and he is now about eighteen years old, and just beginning to go into society. It is alleged that he was engaged to be married to an heiress, but she has broken off the engagement until he can get his name changed. She was not very much mashed on the name, anyway, and Monday night, as she was with him coming out of Haverley's Theatre, something happened that broke her all up. The young man's father was a pious man, and he named his son Abijah. His companions nicknamed him "Bige." Coming out of the theatre with his intended on his arm, an old drummer for a Chicago grocery house, happened to see him, and he went up to him and said, "Why, Bije Easus, how are you?" Young Mr. Easus shook hands with his friend, and introduced him to his girl, and she looked at the profane drummer out of one corner of her eye and trembled for his soul. Mr. Easus explained to his friend as they walked out of the building, that he was engaged to the girl, and when they parted at the platform of the street car the drummer grabbed her by the hand and shook it as a terrier would a rat and said, "Well, Mrs. Bije Easus, that is to be, let me wish you many happy returns." Mr. Easus colored up, the girl was as mad as a wet hen when she pried her fingers apart, and they rode home in silence. At the gate she said to him, "Bije Easus, I never till to-night knew what a horrid name I was going to take upon myself, and I have made up my mind that I cannot go through the remainder of my natural life in Chicago, being alluded to as a 'little female Bije Easus.' Mr. Easus, I trust we part friends. If you can come to me by any other name, you would be sweet, but Bije Easus I will never have on my calling cards." The young man has employed a lawyer and will have his name changed. The girl had a narrow escape, and she may thank the drummer for calling her attention to it.—Peck's Sun.

Oct. 2d, Addie M., wife of Emerson Yonland, and daughter of Oliver and Mary Grant, 24 yrs. 4 mos. 1 day.

[Struck down in the vigor of life, Addie bore her long illness with great fortitude, and trusting in the tender love of the Good Father, passed from death unto life. Over her beautiful remains were bent in grief husband and parents. Not on earth wilt thou meet her again, but in that better land where bitter bereavements will be forgotten in the bliss of reunion forever.

Rest till the break of morn,
For that bright day to dawn—
When the sad-hearted
Shall meet the loved of earth
And ne'er be parted.

Words of comfort were spoken by Rev. Mr. Wood.

Oh, mother of an angel,
Raise, raise your drooping head!
Mourn not for lovely Sadie,
Think not of her as dead;
But only as transplanted
To yonder Heavenly shore,
Where, 'mid the blessed sunbeams,
She'll bask forevermore.

Any one who sends three dollars for a years subscription, beginning with the September number, to the office in Springfield, Mass., can by sending seventy-five cents additional, or three dollars and seventy-five cents in all, have the twelve numbers for the year past sent him; making with the twelve numbers for the year to come twenty-four in all. Regular Price, six dollars. Ask any one in whom you have confidence if this is not a rare chance. Besides a large number of short stories, these numbers for the past year contain Three Serials.
1. A serial story by Ellen W. Olney, running through six numbers, entitled, "Rose and the Doctor." "One of the very best stories we have read for years." "Is proving a charming and powerful story." "They are as real people in whom we feel a human interest." "Ellen W. Olney's capital serial."
2. A series of six articles by Lieutenant Schwatka, U. S. A., commander of the recent Franklin search expedition, about his own and other experiences and adventures in the Arctic regions. "No magazine articles have appeared which are of more interest to us than the series of Polar Travels by Lieutenant Schwatka." "Extremely interesting." "Especially reasonable at this time when popular interest is freshly awakened by the departure of vessels in search of the exploring steamer Jeannette, whose fate is unknown." "At this time, when the spirit of Arctic adventure is once more thoroughly aroused, these articles come with adcitional interest."
3. A serial story in six instalments, published anonymously, entitled, "Mildred's Caprice." "Opens remarkably well." "The story is powerfully told." "The strong story of 'Mildred's Caprice.'" "That excellent serial of 'Mildred's Caprice.'"
Among other contributors are included John Burroughs, Maurice Thompson, Edward Bellamy, H. E. Scudder, Geo. M. Towle, Ernest Ingersoll, T. S. Collier, President D. C. Gilman, B. F. De Costa, A. T. About Jackson, N. H.

GLEN ELLIS HOUSE,
Jackson, N. H., Oct. 8, '81.

DEAR READERS,—This beautifully located mountain village is situated twelve miles south of Mt. Washington, and eight from the Glen House. Its population in winter, the town clerk informs me, is about five hundred, but during the summer months nearly double that number. It is largely devoted to farming and stock raising, more live stock, it is said, being raised here than in any other place in the State, in proportion to its size. The principal part of the town is in a deep vale, surrounded by lofty mountains, some of them 3000 feet high; the level of the vale is 650 feet above tide water. Besides farming, there is considerable lumber business done requiring many saw mills, carried by the waters of the Ellis and Wildcat rivers, which run through the vale of the town, joining at the southerly part, and then mingling with the waters of the Saco River at Lower Bartlett. Near the center of the village, there is an establishment, run by steam power, where bobbin blocks for cotton factories are extensively manufactured. The engine is of 80 horse power, and the boiler fires are fed by the saw-dust; saw-dust also furnishes a material for grading the roads in the village. There is only one store doing any business at this time of writing, and it is a small affair. There is a wheelwright shop and a cider mill combined at the falls. Mr. Geo. N. Merrill, a Boston artist, has a studio here near the falls, and his artistic delineations of mountain scenery in these parts do him much credit. The past few winters he has spent in the Signal Service Station on Mt. Washington, and expects to be one of three to stay there this winter. There is not an apothecary shop, nor a harness shop, notwithstanding nearly every family owns a horse; no butcher's shop, the hotels purchasing their meats and vegetables at Portland, Me. There is not a lawyer in the place, or a doctor. When the services of the latter are required Dobbin must be harnessed and driven to North Conway, a distance of some ten miles. The services of a lawyer are rarely needed. There is no fire engine within twenty miles. It is much cheaper to let a building burn down than to support a fire department.—Neither is there a barber here—except during the summer season; when the visitors leave he picks up his kit and starts. As there are no rum shops consequently there are no paupers, and an alms house is unknown. Taxes are not burdensome now, but were during the years immediately succeeding the Rebellion, when, in order to wipe out the town debt, occasioned by the buying up of recruits, a poll tax of nine dollars was levied.

Running directly through the town is the old stage road from North Conway to the Glen House, and before the railroad was built tourists in visiting this place took a stage at North Conway; now they alight at the Glen Station in Lower Bartlett, eight miles from North Conway on the Portland & Ogdensburg railroad. There they are met by conveyances belonging to the different hotels in Jackson, and a delightful ride of about three miles by the banks of the Ellis river brings them to the places of their destination in season for a late dinner. The Eastern Railroad have surveyed for a road through the town to the Glen House, from their terminus at North Conway, which, if ever completed, will land the traveller within a few rods of the Glen Ellis House, where we are now stopping. The project, however, does not at present seem to find much favor with the inhabitants,—especially with the hotel keepers,—who reason that by their isolation their town secures a much better class of visitors. If the opening of a railroad here resulted in increasing the summer population of the town—which undoubtedly it would—more hotels would have to be built, as the present accommodations are barely capable to accommodate the influx, dwelling houses being utilized for lodging purposes—even to the parsonage.

The principal hotels here are the Glen Ellis, the Thorn Mountain, the Eagle and the Jackson Falls, the largest of which is the Glen Ellis, N. T. Stillings, proprietor; S. M. Thompson, clerk. The Thorn Mountain House was recently done justice to by Mr. Southwick in the PRESS of Aug. 31st. The Jackson Falls House, the old stage hostelry, is delightfully situated near the base of Thorn Mountain, and within a short distance from the Jackson Falls. One of the proprietors is the town clerk, and to him I am indebted for much information concerning the place. This hotel accommodates eighty in the dining room. The Thorn Mountain House is near by, on the other side of the Wildcat river, and by the aid of an annex, in the Queen Anne style, accommodates a large number, and is a very popular mountain resort. Near these hotels are the church, the village school house and the town hall, which contains a free library of 1000 volumes, given to the town by the summer visitors. The Eagle House is a mile or two from the village, at the base of the Eagle Mountain, and accommodates about thirty summer boarders. The Glen Ellis House is one of the finest hotels in the mountains. It is one hundred and forty feet in length by forty feet in width, three stories in height, and contains sixty spacious rooms, those on the first floor being twelve feet in height, second floor, eleven; third floor, ten.—They are elegantly and substantially furnished, each bed having an A 1 curled hair mattress, resting on a National Wire Mattress, manufactured in New Britain, Conn. Every room is covered with an all-wool carpet. The dining room will seat one hundred. The lumber for the house was cut and the stones for the foundation quarried in the vicinity. The cost of the building was nearly $40,000, the furnishing alone amounting to $9000. In the basement is the kitchen, containing an immense cook-stove, the top measuring nearly five feet square, with double ovens, three by two feet. It weighs over one ton. Near by is an old-fashioned baking oven, set in the chimney. In an adjoining room is a refrigerator, large enough to contain a carcass of an ox, many sheep, and any quantity of poultry. Eggs and poultry are purchased of the farmers in the vicinity, but nearly everything else for the table is purchased in Portland.—The proprietor of the hotel, Mr. Stillings, is a noted whip in these regions, having driven a stage for forty years, and, it is said, never met with a serious accident. Before the advent of the Portland & Ogdensburg railroad, he owned two important stage lines, one from North Conway to the Glen House, and one from N. C. to the Crawford House. Although 62 years of age, he still retains the vigor of a much younger man, and feels that he is in his right element when seated upon his stage box, with six splendid grays in hand, whirling along the zig-zag narrow roads of the mountain gorges.

The mountains in and near Jackson are Double-Head Mountain, named so on account of its having two peaks. It is 3000 feet high. Next south of it are Tin and Thorn Mountains, nearly as high. In the former tin ore has been discovered. In the south are the Moat Mountains. In the west the Montal Bar Ridge, and the Iron Mountain, where iron ore of the best quality has been discovered. In the north are the Eagle and Black Mountains, the Carter Mountains, with Mt. Washington and the Presidential range towering above them in the back-ground. One of the pastimes to visitors here is a visit to Prospect Farm, on the Carter range, where, when the atmosphere is clear, a beautiful view is obtained. The route, nearly all the way, skirts the western bank of the Wildcat River, designated by one writer as "a perfect highwayman of a stream," "a river in fetters. Every leap it takes is a headlong rush—a tempest of waters. For half a mile the ledges forming its bed look as if an earthquake had ripped them up, not to make a channel, but to waylay, entrap, and cut the stream hopelessly in pieces."

Jackson was settled over one hundred years ago. The present church, the only one in town, of the Free Will Baptist denomination, was established in 1804. The first pastor was Rev. Daniel Elkins, and one of his sons is at the present time the leading man of the church. The descendants of his successors, Rev. Mr. Hazelton and Rev. Mr. Hurlin, still worship in the same church. The present pastor is Rev. Mr. Crockett. His salary is $500, with the use of the parsonage farm. The church has a resident membership of 54 and a non-resident membership of 45; the Sabbath-school numbers about 50. The name of the town was formerly Adams, but was changed to Jackson by an act of the Legislature, in deference to the wishes of the inhabitants, the old hero for whom it was named receiving every vote in town for President. It has, from the conception of the Democratic party, been a strong Democratic town, the vote at the last gubernatorial election standing, Jones, (Dem.), 118; Bell (Rep.), 14.

There are many hard stories circulated in regard to this place during the civil war, reflecting rather severely on the patriotism of its inhabitants. One piazza visitor assured us that the town did not send a single soldier to the front; that a large number went to Canada to avoid a draft; that a company was organized to resist a draft; that the building in which the U. S. enlisting officers were quartered was set fire to in the night, and that the officers barely escaped with their lives by jumping out of the windows; that a company of U. S. troops was sent here to enforce the draft, and were quartered in the church, and that the leading spirit against enforcing the draft had a narrow escape from being captured by the troops, saving himself by concealment in the dense woods. The town clerk, however, who was one of the Selectmen during the Rebellion, informed me that it was not so bad as it had been represented. That the town sent good soldiers to the front, and in every case when called upon sent its full quota, and even more, by doing as most every other place did, offering bounties and buying up recruits, many of the latter, no doubt, being professional bounty jumpers; that the burning of the building in which the officers were quartered was purely accidental, and that the troops were ordered here because the condition of affairs in town had been greatly exaggerated. The attempt to arrest a noisy partisan on the part of the troops, the town clerk admitted to be true.

The cold wave struck here last Tuesday night with great force, doing much damage. One farmer had 150 bushels of apples frozen on the trees. The ground in some places was frozen three-quarters of an inch deep; ice made in the watering troughs an inch thick, and around the fountain of the Thorn Mountain House it was half a foot thick. All the next day it snowed, at times the flakes falling so thick that one could hardly see across the street, a stiff breeze blowing at the time. We gathered closely around the stoves, and wondered if the weather was balmy in Peabody. The next day was clear; the summit of Mt. Washington stood out clear and distinct, bereft of its cloud-cap. The entire range was covered with a white mantle—a beautiful sight, and well worth a visit to Jackson.

Mr. F. A. Bragdon attended the meeting of the New England Cracker Bakers' Association, of which he is secretary, at the New England House, Boston, yesterday. The meeting was called to take action on the by-laws, perfect the organization and transact any business that came before the meeting. It was voted to advance the price of crackers and biscuits of all kinds. The meeting was well attended and harmonious.

Before the editor of the "Reporter" continues to "Romance on Arithmetic," he should look up his mathematics. He says, "Five thousand and seventy-one times nine is 45,739 and the sum of these digits is 27." The object of offering a school prize is obvious.—Salem News.

Mr. James P. King was very successful in saving his crops frozen during the cold weather last week. Anticipating a cold night he secured extra help and piled up some 30 tons of roots and cut corn stalks and covered them over, thus saving them and some 700 bushels of onions in the same way.

The Canada Pacific railroad desires to borrow twenty million dollars in money, and will pay five per cent. interest. It is certainly a tempting offer, as the banks only pay three per cent., but we hardly care to scatter our investments. It is better to keep them all together.

On Sunday evening last, a public reception was given to Rev. M. J. Masterson by his parishioners. Father Masterson has, for the past six months, been travelling through Europe, for the greater part of the time in Italy and Ireland. As has been expected for some time, he returned on Saturday last, and a spontaneous movement was made on the part of his people to extend to him a fitting welcome home.—At eight o'clock, when the exercises commenced, the church was crowded to repletion, fully eighteen hundred being present. Some organ selections were rendered by Mr. J. J. Carew, the organist, in his usual fine manner. Then thirty-two little girls, dressed in white with green sashes, representing the different counties in Ireland, marched down through the church, and stopping in front of the pastor, sang a song of welcome. A solo, "Alla Stella Confidente Romanza," was rendered by Miss Minnie A. Smith with great effect.—Mr. P. H. O'Conor then read an address of welcome, in which he depicted the anxiety with which the Catholics of Peabody had followed their spiritual head and adviser in his travels. A poem, written by Mr. Francis Nugent, was read by Miss Fannie T. Eagan, after which a check for a thousand dollars, a gift from parishioners to pastor, was presented to Father Masterson.—He, in accepting this gift, declared this to be the happiest moment of his life, and the pleasure was all the more great as it was wholly unexpected by him.—Mr. O'Conor had declared that to him was due the credit of building this noble edifice. But he disclaimed the honor in this great undertaking, and upon the people of St. John's parish alone does it rest. After dwelling upon some of the different places he had visited, he said that in the Eternal City he had the privilege of offering up Mass over the body of the Chief of the Apostles for the benefit of his flock at home. It was a source of pleasure to him to think that during the hardships and danger of travel, with what prayerful solicitude he was watched by those he left behind him. And he felt confident that he had the prayers of his people, since, during his long absence and with all the great variety of scenes through which he had passed, nothing happened that could disturb or cause him any uneasiness. He touchingly alluded to his reunion with his parents and relatives, and on his arrival in Ireland found his mother sick nigh unto death. But, thanks to a divine Providence, she rallied, and on his departure had recovered. It is a matter of surprise to every visitor to the Emerald Isle, how universal are the prayers and sympathy which are offered up for this republic and its government. They regard it with a love second only to their affection for their native land. In accepting this generous offering, he cherished far more highly the spirit with which it was given than the gift itself, and the memory of this occasion will always be accepted by him as symbolic of the love and unity existing between himself as pastor and his people. His sincere thanks and well-wishes were always with them, and at Rome he obtained the Papal blessing for his parish. Mr. Martin Curley of Boston then rendered "Palm Branches" and "Father, Forsake me Not," in a superb manner. Mr. Curley has a fine voice, and we think his singing the best of the evening.

Poet's Corner.

Flowers.

They spring unnoticed and unknown,
'Mid rocky wilds they bloom,
They flourish 'mid the desert lone,
They deck the silent tomb.
They cheer the peasant's lowly cot,
Adorn the monarch's hall,
They fill each quiet, shady spot—
O, who can tell them all?

Some o'er the murm'ring streamlet fling
Their blossoms bright and fair,
And there, in vernal beauty, spring,
Fanned by the fragrant air.
Some 'neath the ocean's rolling waves
In silent grandeur grow,
Nor heed the storm which o'er them raves,
But still in beauty blow.

Some where the eagle builds her nest,
Where man has never trod,
Where even the chamois dare not rest
Upon the crumbling sod—
Yes, there, even there, wild flow'rets grow,
In richest dress arrayed,
And o'er the clamorous eaglets throw
Their light and graceful shade.

'Mid mountains of perpetual snow,
By icy girdles bound,
Some, rendered doubly beauteous, glow,
And deck the frozen ground.
And 'mid cold winter's angry storm,
The snow-drop rears its head,
And shows its pure, unspotted form
When other flowers have fled.

Some on the breezes of the night
Their grateful odors send;
While others, children of the light,
To-day their perfume lend.
Some bloom beneath the torrid zone,
'Neath India's sultry skies;
'Mid Iceland's mountains, chill and lone,
The forms of others rise.

The stately fern, the golden broom,
The lily, tall and fair—
All these in rich succession bloom,
And scent the summer air.
In secret dell, by murm'ring rill,
In gardens bright and gay—
Within the valley—on the hill—
Flowers cheer our toilsome way!

Flowers image forth the boundless love
God bears his children all,
Which ever droppeth from above
Upon the great and small;
Each blossom that adorns our path,
So joyful and so fair,
Is but a drop of love divine,
That fell and flourished there.

Stone the Woman.

Yes, stone the woman--let the man go free!
Draw back your skirts lest they perchance
May touch her garment as she passes.
But to him that led her to destruction
And disgrace, put forth a willing hand.
Shut up from her the sacred
Ways of toil, that she no more may win
Honest meat. But ope to him all honorable
Paths, where he may win distinction,
Give him fair, press'd down measures of Life's sweetest joys. Pass her, O maiden,
With a pure proud face, if she puts out
A poor polluted palm, but lay thy hand in
His on bridal day, and swear to cling to him
With wifely love and tender reverence.
Trust him who led a sister woman
To a fearful fate.

Yes, stone the woman--let the man go free!
Let one soul suffer for the sin of two
Is the doctrine of a hurried world,
Too out of breath for holding balances
Where nice distinctions and injustices
Are calmly weighed. But ah! how will it be
On the strange day of flame and fire
When men shall stand before the one true
Judge? Shall sex make a difference in Sin? Shall He, the Searcher of the hidden
Heart, in His eternal and divine decree,
Condemn the woman and forgive the man?

Good Night.

Good-night—the little lips touch ours,
The little arms enfold us;
And, oh, that thus through coming years
They might forever hold us!

Good-night! we answer back and smile,
And kiss the drooping eyes;
But in our trembling hearts the while
The wistful queries rise—

Who in the weary years to come,
When we are hid from sight,
Will clasp these little hands, and kiss
These little lips "Good-night?"

Selected Story.

GETTING A HUSBAND.

"Strange! what can this mean? Is this a stupendous fraud, a trick, or what?" And Dr. Pomeroy stared most vacantly at the closely-written sheet he held in his hand. He read:—

"Dr. Pomeroy, I will not apologize for the unparalelled service I am about to ask of you; suffice it to say I have heard your history, heard of your struggles, and realize how hard a task it is for one so young in the profession and without friends in the great wilderness of houses called a city. Also, permit me to add, I have been informed of the cruel blow you received from the hand of one you loved, who was unworthy of you; and yet I am not acquainted with you, nor you with me. Indeed, we have never looked upon one another's face. Nevertheless, I am about to request you to do me a great favor. Will you come to South street church to-morrow at eight o'clock? Come privately, unattended, and never repeat that which takes place there. Will you give me, a stranger, a lawful claim to your name, and yet not seek to know whom you marry? If you will do so, I will make over to you fifty thousand dollars, payable to your order at the City bank, as soon as the ceremony is over. Trusting that the money will be a temptation to you I shall anxiously await you at the appointed time."

That was all. There was no signature—nothing to give any clue to the writer's address or abode. Indeed, it was so terse and so unfeminine in its details that he was tempted to believe some of his male friends were playing a joke on him.

"I will not go—I will not be fooled!" he said to himself.

He flung the missive down, then he picked it up, folded it carefully, and thrust it into his pocket.

He remembered that he had a patient to visit, and went out; but everywhere the contents of that strange letter was ringing in his ears. He then went to see his mother. She was suffering even more than usual, and a number of dunning bills had been left to his consideration—bills which he had not the remotest idea how he was to meet. He threw them down and buried his face in his hands.

"Poverty is a curse, mother," he moaned. "I do not know which way to turn."

She tried to cheer him, but in vain. Everywhere he turned, hopeless chaos seemed to envelop him.

"Ah, if that letter were only real," he thought, "Fifty thousand dollars would make me rich."

And as he fretted and worried until the appointed hour came—one moment vowing he would not go near the place and the next tempted to see the "farce" out.

Eight o'clock found him stealing in. He saw two ladies closely veiled, and a gentleman standing in the upper part of the building, while the minister sat in a chair. There was but one gas jet lighted, and he could but distinguish the forms. As soon as he entered the gentleman spoke to one of the ladies, and she then advanced to meet him.

"Are you Dr. Pomeroy?" she asked in a low tone.

"I am."

She led him to where the gentleman stood, and he extended his hand.

"How do you do, Pomeroy?" he said; and Pomeroy recognized in him the president of the City bank. "I am here by the request of this young lady," pointing to the one who had not moved or spoken, "to inform you that if you agree to her proposition, I am authorized to pay to your order the sum of fifty thousand dollars."

Pomeroy tried to speak but his voice was choked. It was no fraud; it was a reality. He stood motionless for a moment; then advanced and offered his arm to the silent lady. She took it without a quiver, and went with him to where the minister awaited them. The ceremony was quickly performed.

Dr. Pomeroy registered his name, and then looked with considerable curiosity at the bold, plain signature. "Ellen Latour," which his bride wrote down. The minister hastily filled out the certificate, which he had brought with him by request, and which the maid and the banker signed as witnesses. The bride took it, kissed it and thrust it in her bosom. One moment more and the two glided swiftly away from sight.

Dr. Pomeroy wiped the perspiration from his brow, and then asked:—

"Who was she?"

"I do not know," said the minister. "I was requested by letter, and paid to perform the ceremony and keep it a secret. It is perfectly lawful."

"And I," said the banker, "did not see the lady's face. She deposited the money with me, and requested my attendance here to assure you that her promise should be faithfully fulfilled."

The three men separated; the gas was turned out; the curtain fell on the first act.

The next day Pomeroy tried to realize what he had done. He had sold his name to the unknown woman, but he thought that could not injure him.

She must have been in deadly peril to pay such an exorbitant price for a simple name.

He took an office further up town, and moved his mother to a nicer home.

Patients came pouring in; a different class employed the rich Dr. Pomeroy from those who had employed the poor one.

* * * * * * *

Five years had passed away, and he had gained a reputation and added considerably to his bank account. He had been an indefatigable worker, and now he felt that he needed rest for a while.

"We will take a trip to Europe mother," he said. "It will do you more good than you can imagine."

A great many gentle hearts felt a pang to see the "good doctor" leave, although their endeavors to catch him had been in vain. He felt no preference for the opposite sex. He had recovered from his disappointment, and he ceased to remember that he was a married man, or to think kindly of the woman who had so radically changed his life.

They traveled leisurely through the tour they had marked out before they started, and one night found them in a French village. About the middle of the night the doctor was awakened by some one tapping at his door and calling for him to come out.

He did so. He found the landlord who told him in broken English, that one of his countrymen had just fallen down stairs in a fit, and seeing his name registered M. D., they called him up.

He went into an elegantly furnished room, where a man, some fifty years of age, was lying in a dying condition. A young lady sat by the bed fanning him. The doctor hastily examined the patient, and found it was impossible for him to live; but the day passed, and still another, before he drew his last breath. He never recovered his consciousness.

The lady told Dr. Pomeroy that he was her father. His name was Eugene Syndeham, a native of England, and she would like to have him buried where he died. They were traveling for the benefit of her health, she went on to explain, and he was a widower. Her only remaining relative was a young sister, who was being educated in the convent of the Sacred Heart of Paris.

After Mr. Syndeham was buried, Miss Syndeham went, under the care of the doctor and his mother, to Paris. She insisted on their taking up their abode where she had apartments, and so not a day passed but she was with Mrs. Pomeroy. The old lady got warmly attached to her, and talked dolefully to her son about the time they should have to be separated.

She told them confidentially not to wonder that she did not mourn for her father, for he had endeavored to wrong her so deeply that it was not love that held her to his side; and in all her life she had never been so happy as now that she was free.

Dr. Pomeroy watched her. At first he was very gallant, but at last he began to be reserved and cold. A feeling he dared not cherish was growing in his heart and it alarmed him greatly.

"I dare not love her," he muttered to himself. "I am bound."

Then, for the first time, he felt how heavy were the fetters he had forged for himself. She noticed the change. She tried to beguile him to forget the grief that was evidently wearing on him; and at last, in a fit of desperation, he told her all.

"I am a married man," he said impetuously. "I love you; and yet I am not free to love!"

She recoiled, but bade him tell her all.

"It was cruel, unkind to bind you so," she said.

"No, no!" he ejaculated, "She saved me—she blessed me—and I shall always respect her, but never did my bonds hurt me till I met you. Now I shall be miserable forever."

"You may meet her."

"Improbable!"

"But possible," she said, with a sorrowful look, "I know your Ellen Latour. She lives, and I must give you up."

"You know her?"

"Yes; to-morrow I will introduce you to her. She is anxious to see you; she knows you are here, and—she believed you loved me, and wondered if you were as upright as she had always thought you to be."

He bowed his face in his hands, and Miss Syndeham left him. The hour had come which he had hoped for in bygone days—he was to learn whom he had wedded; but it gave him no pleasure now.

At an early hour the servant told him that Miss Latour awaited him in the private parlor, and he was ushered into a strange room. He scarcely lifted his eyes as he entered, but when he did, they fell upon Miss Syndeham.

"I am Ellen Latour," she said simply. "That is my real name, though I never anticipated revealing the truth to you. Listen to my story before you blame me."

"The man whom you saw die was my step-father. He married my mother when I was but five years old, and sister Ada a baby. My mother was weakly, and she died a few years later, leaving all our fathers property in that mans hands. He was our sole guardian, to hold our property under his control until we were married or became of age. He placed me in the Sacred Heart, and kept me there until I was sixteen, and then he took me out, and proposed to marry me to a friend of his. I rebelled. One night I heard a conversation between them, and found that he was selling me for twenty thousand dollars, that was to be paid down to him out of my property the moment Turner became my husband. I was shocked. I had no friends to go to, and was totally at a loss what to do. He did not allow me to go into society: I made no acquaintances, and instead of allowing me to stay in my mother's house, he kept me traveling about the country.

"At last I proposed to compromise, I told my step-father to take me to America, and when I returned I would marry his friend. He complied, and I got my maid to gossip with one of the servants in the hotel, and by chance she told her your history, as her sister worked for your mother. Just before I started from England an uncle of my mother's left me fifty thousand dollars in my own right, which my step-father could not touch. I had it transferred to New York, and determined to save myself with it. Hearing of you, I adopted the plan of getting you to marry me. When we returned to England, my step-father commanded me to fulfill my promise; I showed him my marriage certificate. He swore but he saw his case was lost; I had outwitted him. I did not leave him, but remained to protect my sister Ada from a similar fate. I never expected to meet you. I intended to have you sue for a divorce as soon as he should die, and it would not endanger my safety."

"But this intention will never be carried into effect," Dr. Pomeroy exclaimed. "You will be mine forever, Ellen!"

"Yours forever!" she answered.

And when they went to see his mother, there were no three happier people to be found in the whole world.

Years have passed since then, and Ada finds a home with her sister who never repents that she was saved from a fate worse than death by strategy.

Miscellaneous.

Sunday One Hundred Years Ago.

BY CHARLES CARLETON COFFIN.

No railroads, no carriages, no wagons, but everybody riding horseback—men, women and children—the father in the saddle, the mother on a pillion behind him, with the baby in her arms, and a small boy behind the mother on the horse's rump, holding on by the crupper; that was the way our grandfathers and grandmothers went to meeting on Sunday one hundred years ago. There were no roads, only paths through the woods. The farmer had carts and sleds, but it was not easy riding in a cart bumping over the stones, pitching into holes; so they rode horseback — dismounting at the horseblock in front of the meeting-house.

Many of the people were too poor to own a horse and were compelled to walk to meeting. They put on their best clothes, carried their shoes and stockings in their hands till near the meeting house, when they wiped the dust from their bare feet, and put on their stockings and shoes, that they might appear decent and respectable in the house of the Lord.

Many of the meeting houses in the country towns were large, square, barn-like buildings, with galleries on three sides, and a high pulpit with a sounding board—a sort of canopy made of wood, hanging over the pulpit, to send the minister's voice out to the congregation. The pews were square and the seats were hung on hinges. When the minister offered prayer the people turned up the seats and stood; when he said amen they let them down with a bang, like the rattling of guns in battle. The meeting houses were very cold in winter, for there were no stoves. The people thumped their feet, curled their hands in their mittens, turned their coat collars and mufflers above their ears, and shivered through the long prayers and longer sermon, from firstly up to seventeenthly, inference, practical observations and lastly.

There was no Sunday school at noon. In winter the people went into the neighboring houses, the women filling their foot stoves with coals, then eating their luncheons of gingerbread, doughnuts and cheese, the men smoking their pipes in the kitchen and warming themselves before the great fires blazing in the wide mouthed chimneys.

In summer they gathered beneath the old trees at noon, and talked of what was going on in the world. The boys roamed the orchards, hunting birds' nests and tasting the ripening apples.—They knew all the best trees. The girls went into the neighboring gardens and looked at the bachelor buttons, hollyhocks and sweetwilliams, and gathered sprigs of caraway to eat during the afternoon sermon.

They understood very little of the sermon, but the singing was glorious. All the good singers of the congregation sat in the singers' seats together—soprano, counter, bass and tenor. The counter ran very high and there were few who could sing it. The leader sounded the key on a pitch pipe—each part joined in fa, sol, fa, the leader beat time—not down, left, right, up, but dropping his hand and then his wrist, then raising wrist and hand, singing fugue tunes, in which one part chased another like children at play, but all coming out together at the end.

When the meeting was over the people hurried home to kindle their fires, raking open the bed of coals on the hearth, sometimes to discover that the fire was out; if so, they rekindled it by striking a flint against a piece of steel, throwing a spark upon tinder, or by taking down the old flint-lock gun and flashing powder in the pan. One boy whom I knew was greatly astonished when the gun went off with a bang! He did not know that it was loaded.

It was a long time to supper, and the boys and girls were as hungry as bears before the mother could get it ready.—When supper was over all hands sat around the old fire-place and recited the catechism, beginning with "What is the chief end of man?" father, mother and all taking part.

If it was long to supper time, it was still longer to bed time. There were no Sunday school libraries, no papers filled with pictures, no newspapers, nothing to read except the Bible, catechism, and the primer with its pictures, and the rhymes accompanying them:

In Adam's fall
We sinned all.

Xerxes the great did die,
And so must you and I.

Everybody was glad when it was time to go to bed; for, take it all in all, Sunday was a tiresome day to boys and girls.

Although tiresome, the boys and girls who refrained from playing because it was the Lord's day; who learned the catechism because they had to, although they could see no sense in it; are they who have done great things for the world—building churches, schools, colleges, carrying the gospel and a Christian civilation to heathen lands. Through the instruction obtained in those old meeting houses, and around those blazing fires in their humble homes, those boys and girls of one hundred years ago have given a mighty uplift to the world, and men and women everywhere are happier and better, for what they have done for the human race.

THERE IS A BALM IN GILEAD.—The success which has marked the introduction of Cream Balm, a Catarrh remedy, prepared by Ely Bros., Oswego, N. Y., is indeed marvelous. Many persons in Pittston and vicinity are using it with most satisfactory results. A lady down town is recovering the sense of smell, which she has not enjoyed for fifteen years, through the use of the Balm. She had given up her case as incurable. Mr. Barber the druggist, has used it in his family and commends it very highly. In another column a young Tunkhannock lawyer, known to many of our readers, testifies that he was cured of partial deafness. It is certainly a very efficacious remedy. —Pittston, Pa., Gazette, Aug. 15, 1879. Price 50 cents. Oct.5 1m.

NEWS ITEM OF 1981 IN PUCK.—A grand discovery has recently been made which, it is thought, will entirely supersede the telephone and electric telegraph as a means of communication. It is called the post office. The system consists in writing a letter containing your message, putting a postage stamp on the envelope and dropping it in a box. It will then be forwarded to its address by first train or steamboat.—The advantage over the electric telegraph is that the message will reach the person to whom it is sent within a reasonable time. The Western Union Telegraph Company talks about purchasing the patent.

An impecunious tramp stepped into a restaurant in Nebraska to feed, and then started out without paying. The indignant man hurled a piece of new pie after the retreating guest, striking him in the head and fracturing the skull. The restaurateur has been arrested on a charge of commiting an assault with a deadly weapon, with intent to commit bodily injury.

A fair and buxom widow who had buried three husbands, recently went with a gentleman, who, in his younger days, had paid her marked attention, to inspect the graves of her dear departed. After contemplating them in mournful silence, she murmured to her companion, "Ah, James, you might have been in that row now if you had only had a little more courage."

It is very rare that the Republican consents to editorially forward the interests of advertisers of what are known as patent medicines, as it does not frequently fall out that we can have positive knowledge of their merits. However, we take pleasure in saying of St. Jacobs Oil from individual experiment, that it is a most excellent remedial agent, and as such we can heartily recommend it.—St. Louis Republican.

The Boston Herald says that "it takes some cheek in the milkmen who, all over New England, are putting up the price of milk on the avowed ground that water is scarce."

The Boston Fairs.

The importance of the Industrial Exhibitions held in the city of Boston cannot be over estimated. They are drawing a concourse of visitors from different parts of New England, and are becoming important factors in the education of our people. To the young men of the country who are to take part in the business enterprises and manufacturing interests the education to be derived from experience and active observation is the lesson which is to be of paramount importance to them in their coming struggle in life. Other education holds only a subordinate place and much as is this to be desired, the practical teachings must necessarily be of the greatest value to them. It is therefore a matter in which the managers of these two exhibitions can point to with pride, that the schools of Boston and vicinity are being largely represented among the visitors, and that special efforts are being made to induce their attendance. In the art studies, which are coming more and more into prominence among the young ladies of this generation, there has been made a special effort by the Old Mechanics' Fair to satisfy the wants of its admirers, and a visit to this portion of the exhibition is alone worth more than the price of admission to the fair.

We noticed that several of our townsmen are represented in the exhibits of this fair. One can hardly pass the fine large showcase of Wm. H. Brown, filled with the different kinds of glue made at his establishment, without giving it a passing notice. To those from Peabody it is of especial interest, as the manufacture of glue is a leading branch of business of the town. The different qualities and colors of the glues are neatly done up in packages and make a very attractive and creditable display. In the center of the case, in glass jars, are different samples of Brown's Comminuted Glue, (warranted pure). This glue received a medal and diploma at the Centennial. The whole is surrounded by a neat black walnut railing, and our people who are in search of objects of interest will readily perceive it.

Messrs. J. E. Clement & Co. are also on hand in the basement with the products of their machine shop here in town. They show several different machines which they have manufactured, and which are attracting considerable attention. Those who are interested in mechanics and machinery will surely visit their exhibit, and it is of interest to our own town from the fact that the different machines are adapted to the principal business of Peabody, that of leather. They show a Leather Whitening Machine, a McDonald Unhairing Machine, and a Sawyer's Leather Measuring Machine. They are all in good running order, and the merits and advantages of each are cheerfully and carefully shown to any in search of such information.

Mr. George H. Little shows different sizes of his Patent Injector, and we observed that the neat cards which he had left explaining somewhat the machine and giving the prices of the different sizes were in demand by people who seemed interested in the workings and object of the invention. The exhibit is certainly a credit to the town and the patentee.

Mr. David T. Winter exhibits his improved Leather Measuring Machine in this fair and also in the New England. This machine is a wonder to those who have not seen its operation. Our leather men of Peabody have become familiar with the operation of his other machine from use here, and Mr. Winter has met with great success, which he justly deserves. The improved machine makes several important changes which are considered by Mr. Winter as much simpler and more advantageous, and it can be seen in operation at his manufactory here as well as at the fairs.

Mr. H. P. Reed has on exhibition near the Fitzhenry scouring machine: his Leather Brushing Machine. This machine is used to good advantage in removing all dirt and grease from the grain of all kinds of leather and skins, and in the finish of polish leather to raise the nap. This machine is also used by belt manufacturers to a large extent.

An opportunity of visiting these and other interesting exhibits in the fairs should not be missed by our citizens who have not already made a tour of inspection of the wonders there displayed.

It should be no surprise that Senator Bayard should have been elected president pro tem. of the Senate. It was not to be expected that the democrats would let pass the opportunity which they had of being in the majority, occasioned by the death of Gen. Burnside and the resignation of the two senators from New York. They have had no such advantage of late years, and very few anticipated that they would not make the most of the situation. That they allowed the new republican senators to be sworn in with so little opposition is a gratifying sign, and shows that both parties are disposed to make the extra session as short as possible. At present writing, it looks as if a committee, composed equally of republicans and democrats, would be appointed, to whom will be referred all nominations sent in to the Senate for confirmation. It is to be hoped that the business will be hastened without delay, when the object of convening the Senate—the providing for the succession of the executive branch of the government and the confirmation of the Presidential nominations—shall have been accomplished. It looks probable that an entirely new cabinet will be submitted by President Arthur, the resignation of Secretary Windom having been accepted, and the need of the appointment of his successor being imperative.

In another column, we give place to an extract from some remarks by Rev. Mr. Talmage, of Brooklynn, which we reprint more from their sensational character than from any expectation that they will be accepted as true by a majority of our readers. And, yet, the attitude of the Mormons, their spirit and bitter feeling which has been manifested in many ways towards those whom they have considered as enemies to their church, leads us to reflect again upon the danger threatening the country from this people, and to ask if there may not be some truth in the suggestions as thrown recklessly out. It is well known that our late President took strong and radical ground against their practices and so-called religion; and it is also well known that active and persistent enforcement of our laws there will put an end to this stain upon our country. But thus far only attempts have been made, and they realize, as well as any one, that they have been safe from any decided inroads upon the system. It would not be strange if we were compelled, before many years, to meet this issue face to face. Harper's Magazine for October portrays in a vivid manner the increase and growth of polygamy and Mormonism, and in this connection we quote the closing words of the article:

"Little as the masses believe it now, there will come a time, if this monster in Utah is left to grow, when there will be another call for volunteers and for money, and, as before, tens of thousands of brave young men will go away, never more to return; as before, there will be an enormous debt incurred; as before, the country will be hillocked with graves and the whole land will be moistened by the rain of women's tears."

The citizen's executive temperance committee present to our readers this week a report which has the unanimous approval of the members of the Committee. It will be read with interest, in view of some of the recent raids upon the liquor sellers, and explains to a certain extent their action. We commend it to the attention of our readers, without any comment on our part, which the crowded state of our columns forbids.

Messrs. Davis & Fay are making the Essex House, Salem, about the most homelike place in this vicinity. It is being patronized more than ever, and the guests are the most contented lot of human beings in the world.

Obituary.

We have to record the decease, last Wednesday night, of Mr. Elijah W. Upton, well known to the citizens of this town from his long connection with the manufacturing interests of Peabody. Mr. Upton had been in failing health for some time; having been taken seriously ill some three years ago, since which time he has been gradually declining. He was born in Danvers, February 24, 1811, and was the son of Elijah Upton, who was during his life actively engaged in many prominent enterprises of the old town of South Danvers. He was the first man in this town to commence the manufacture of glue, and by his sagacity and enterprise built up a large business in this article. "To him," says Fitch Poole, in the South Danvers Wizard, "our town is more indebted than to any other man for erecting dwellings for our population, for opening streets and avenues, and leveling hills and raising vallies to make eligible sites for building." He was formerly engaged in the tanning business with the late Mr. Joseph Tufts and afterwards with Caleb L. Frost. In the business enterprises of his father Elijah W., when quite a young man, took an active interest.—After receiving a good academical education at Hopkinton, N. H., he returned to this town, and at the early age of twenty years became a partner in the glue business, and, later, after the retirement of his father, he assumed the entire charge of what has since been known as the Essex Glue Company.—In 1847, he formed a partnership with Theopilus and Nathaniel Walker, and they still further extended and increased the then growing business, until it has become an important branch of the business enterprise of Peabody. About the same time, this firm built and established the Danvers Bleachery, which has always done an extensive business, and is known far and near, for the superior and excellent quality of the work produced. It remained under the control of this firm until about fifteen years ago, since which time it has continued as a stock company. Mr. Upton, from his early connection with his father's tannery, was always interested to a great degree in that branch of industry in this town, which he retained to the time of his death. He was not engaged actively in public life, preferring the quiet and retirement of business, which was more congenial to him. He was, however, sent to the Massachusetts Legislature for two years, and was a director and for a considerable time President os the Warren National Bank.—He visited Europe several times, the first time in 1851, at the time of the International Exhibition, in which he took considerable interest. He bore his last illness with patience and great cheerfulness, retaining full possession of his faculties, and his interest in matters of public and private interest, to the last. He leaves a wife and five children. His funeral took place on Saturday last, and was attended by Rev. Mr. Sperry, of the South Congregational Church, assisted by Rev. Prof. W. M. Barbour, formerly pastor of the church here, and a friend of Mr. Upton. Before offering prayer, he made the following remarks, which we are permitted to publish entire.

"Died on the 5th inst., Elijah W. Upton, a well-known citizen of Peabody, aged 70 years, 7 months." A well-known citizen of Peabody, perhaps exhausts the history of the life just closed-in so far as its public import is concerned. Our friend was not called to be a great legislator, nor a leader in reforms, nor a man on whom should turn the eyes of the world, but simply to serve his generation in his native town, according to the will of God. And, having done so, he has fallen asleep. He is dead. And what is that? What is it to die—to go hence—to have done forever with us the sweet ties of kindred, and home, and friendship! it may be well for us, as we think of this, to ponder the life just departed.

Its most prominent features was unselfishness. This gave your well-known citizen his remarkable serenity. You all know how he bore himself among you: never unduly elated with his successes: never rankling with bitterness in his losses: never using his wealth or influence to hinder anyone, but to help all he could. He was a Puritan born and bred; but of the gentle sort, taking after Milton and Vane, rather than after Cromwell and his Ironsides. Hence the beauty of his home and home life. He was lavish in literature and the fine arts,—a certain natural refinement in him superinduced upon his ancestral puritanism, made him the gentleman he was. His home which he leaves this day forever, has welcomed to it many, from many lands, who have felt the warmth of its fireside; the inspiration of its intellectual treasures; and its satisfaction to the imagination and the taste. The walls that now look down on his remains, are covered with the emblems of a rare culture in the beautiful. It is a loss to an American town to bury such a citizen; for he was one of the sort that give our republican life its inherent worth. He has expired with a stainless name. His sons will think of this. They will remember that the moan of no widow whose house has been devoured, the cry of no laborer defrauded of his hire, follows him to the grave. We shall all remember that he has been feet to the lame, and eyes to the blind; blest as the one who considered the poor: who left the world better than he found it; who lived beloved, and died lamented.

This much upon his citizenship. Let me say a word upon him as a friend. Very pleasant has his friendship been to me. Pardon a personal allusion. It is twenty years, this very week, since I came to this town, as minister of the South Church. Among the many valued friendships I fell into, was his. And from the day of his first kindness to me in Andover until now, I can say with William Wirt of his friend Judge Carr, "I have known little difference between his happiness in mine." In the flush of success, and in the gloom that falls over our children's coffins, we have been together, and in the same accord, and in all cases alike with a blessing unto me. More who have preceded me, ministerial friends of his family, have the same testimony to give of our departed friend.

The household grief over this good man's death, it would be rude to dwell upon. The days will be here soon, when they are to say,

"O, for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still!"

They will then think on the source of the love that filled this gentle life. God is love: God alone could have given him that unselfish love. Unless all signs fail, this life was moved by the principles of the gospel of Christ. And to God in Christ, the God of all consolation, are they to turn for the future.

And our united thanks are due to God, for our knowledge of the departed, and our blessing by his life.

The Temperance Executive Committee to their Fellow Citizens of Peabody:

Some months since we were appointed at a public meeting, wherein you were well represented, "to aid the town authorities in enforcing the present Liquor Law." We have attended to that duty, at a considerable sacrifice on our part, and now report the result of our labors, and respectfully ask your aid and counsel as to our future action. From the start, we have encountered the chronic difficulty of procuring evidence of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, the rule being the frequenters of rum shops will commit perjury rather than endanger their sources of future supply. Under the provisions of the present statute, however, we have brought eighteen cases to trial, in our Trial Justice's Court, most of them being for keeping with intent to sell, in fifteen of which convictions were secured. All appealed, and the result now depends upon the District Attorney and the juries of the Criminal Term now in session at Lawrence.

We have also, by means of private detectives, procured evidences of sales against the principal illegal dealers which we are now bringing to trial, very much to their dismay and rage, and, somewhat, we regret to say, to the dissatisfaction of some, who profess friendliness to the temperance cause. In company for once with that class composed of sellers, their victims and hangers-on, always to be found on the side of disorder and lawbreaking, they are penetrated with horror at the terrible dishonor of a plan which proves effective in dealing with this, as well as other classes of criminals. The benefit and necessity of detective service in ferreting out thieving, counterfeiting, and other crimes, they freely admit, but they would limit the means of combating with the very fountain-head of almost all crime, to the circulation of tracts and the prayers and tears of its victims!

Why this distinction? That the plan we have pursued is not the one which the criminals themselves would have selected is entirely true. That it is effective, their desperation testifies. When, in her previous history, has our good old town seen a mob of criminals pursue witnesses from the court house itself, through her central square, and savagely assault them as they reached the principal hotel of the place, because they had testified to a few of the many crimes committed by these wholesale law breakers?

Fellow citizens — this issue between those who seek by lawful methods to protect the wives, mothers and children of this and future generations, and those who seek to overwhelm with misery in defiance of all law, must be met, and Order, Justice and Right are yet strong enough to prevail, if their followers are but in unison. A firm and united front at this juncture by all those who have professed themselves in favor of Temperance and Law will drive the evil traffic to secret holes and corners, and destroy its aggressiveness within one year. Shall this work go on until there is at least a greater degree of public security than at present? To cease our exertions now is simply to increase the difficulties of another beginning. It is for you, fellow citizens, to say, in some unmistakable manner, whether we shall continue our efforts to protect you, and prevent your children from becoming drunkards and drunkards' wives, or whether in future we shall simply endeavor to guard our own. It is patent that we can have but one object in this appeal. We certainly cannot be aiming at profit or popularity in facing the horde we have aroused. We are acting solely for the common weal. If our action is approved by you, we are ready to go on. If disapproved, we are released from a most disagreeable duty.

Published by unanimous vote of the Temperance Executive Committee.

For Lieut. Governor, J. A. Carleton, of Haverhill.

For Secretary of State, Gen. Michael T. Donahue, of Somerville.

Tor Treasurer and Receiver General, Col. Francis J. Parker, of Newton.

For Auditor, Chas. R. Field, of Greenfield.

For Attorney General, Patrick A. Collins, of Boston.

The State Central Committee is as follows: Jonas H. French of Gloucester, Josiah C. Abbott of Boston, Philander Cobb of Kingston, A. C. Drinkwater of Braintree, M. M. Cunniff of Boston, Henry Walker of Boston, Daniel Mullin of Lynn, Luther G. Pitman of Marblehead, John A. G. Richardson of Lowell, J. W. Coveney of Cambridge, George W. Gill of Worcester, Henry E. Alvord of Easthampton, E. A. McLearned of Pittsfield, Reuben Noble of Westfield, and Henry A. Plimpton of Worcester.

Mr. Sam'l P. Wilson, our veteran flagman, had a narrow escape this morning. As he was shifting the signal balls, which are run up in a sort of framework on chains, a nut came off and let the whole business down. Mr. Wilson sprang to one side and one of the balls struck him on the hand, cutting a deep gash, and the heavy weights that balance the balls just grazed his foot, cutting a piece out of his boot and stocking without injuring the foot.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE.

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by EDWARD W. JACOBS to EBEN SUTTON, dated May twenty-eighth, A. D. 1879, and recorded with Essex Deeds, Book 1019, Leaf 16, and for breach of the condition therein contained, will be sold at public auction upon the premises hereinafter described, on Friday the fourth day of November, A. D. 1881, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:—

A certain lot of land with the buildings thereon, situated in rear and northerly of Main street in Peabody, in the county of Essex, said estate being described in a deed of conveyance from Fitch Poole to Warren M. Jacobs, dated the seventeenth day of March, A. D. 1852, and recorded with Essex Deeds, South District, Book 457, Leaf 85: the description in said deed from Fitch Poole to Warren M. Jacobs being as follows:—Beginning at the southeasterly corner of said premises and running westerly by land conveyed to the grantor by said Jacobs, by deed dated March 17th, A. D. 1852; thence southerly by said land forty-two feet to the middle of Strong Water Brook; thence westerly by said brook and by land of O. F. Batchelder and William Sutton seventy-two feet; thence northerly, along the middle of said brook, by land of J. Shed and C. L. Frost and D. W. Osborn about three hundred and seventy feet to the Essex railroad; thence by said railroad easterly about one hundred and seventy feet; thence southerly to the middle of the creek by land of heirs of William Sutton; thence following up along the middle of the creek to the northeasterly corner of the morocco factory; thence running in a straight line southerly about two hundred and thirty feet parallel with the easterly side of said factory and four feet distant from it to the point begun, with all the buildings thereon standing, reserving and excepting to said Poole his heirs and assigns a right of way, if any they have, over said premises by the existing way on the northwesterly side of said Factory, to land on Walnut street conveyed to said Poole by said Jacobs, March 17th, 1852. The above premises are subject to a mortgage from Warren M. Jacobs to Emily W. Rockwood for one thousand dollars. EBEN SUTTON,

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

WOMAN'S TRIUMPH.

A SEVERE SURGICAL OPERATION. IT IS ENDURED WITHOUT TAKING ETHER. SUBJECT, MRS. EDWARD MYERS, OF RONDOUT, N. Y.

(From the Cor. of the Kingston, N. Y. Freeman.)

The case of Mrs. Edward Myers, of Rondout, New York, furnishes an apt illustration of woman's power of endurance. This lady had been treated for months in the usual way for Erysipelas of the hand, without benefit. Not until her hand had become a mass of putrified flesh, did she turn to Dr. Kennedy, proprietor of the "Favorite Remedy," for help. He at once informed her that it was impossible to save the hand—it must be amputated. She received this terrible intelligence quietly, declined to take ether, stipulating merely to hold her husband's hand during the operation, and underwent the painful process without moving a muscle or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy then gave "Favorite Remedy" freely to cleanse the blood and prevent the return of the disease, and Mrs. Myers now lives and rejoices in her great deliverence.

"Favorite Remedy" is fast becoming a trusted household friend in all cases of Female Weaknesses and diseases of the blood. One dollar a battle. Your druggist has it.

A gentleman had five daughters, the first of whom married a man by the name of Poor, the second a Mr. Little, the third a Mr. Short, the fourth a Mr. Brown, the fifth a Mr. Hogg. At the wedding of the latter her sisters with their husbands were there, and the old gentleman said to his guests: "I have taken pains to educate my daughters that they might act well their part in life and do honor to my family. I find that all my pains, care and expectations have turned out nothing but a Poor, Little, Short, Brown, Hogg."

The Boston Fairs.

The importance of the Industrial Exhibitions held in the city of Boston cannot be over estimated. They are drawing a concourse of visitors from different parts of New England, and are becoming important factors in the education of our people. To the young men of the country who are to take part in the business enterprises and manufacturing interests the education to be derived from experience and active observation is the lesson which is to be of paramount importance to them in their coming struggle in life. Other education holds only a subordinate place and much as is this to be desired, the practical teachings must necessarily be of the greatest value to them. It is therefore a matter in which the managers of these two exhibitions can point to with pride, that the schools of Boston and vicinity are being largely represented among the visitors, and that special efforts are being made to induce their attendance. In the art studies, which are coming more and more into prominence among the young ladies of this generation, there has been made a special effort by the Old Mechanics' Fair to satisfy the wants of its admirers, and a visit to this portion of the exhibition is alone worth more than the price of admission to the fair.

We noticed that several of our townsmen are represented in the exhibits of this fair. One can hardly pass the fine large showcase of Wm. H. Brown, filled with the different kinds of glue made at his establishment, without giving it a passing notice. To those from Peabody it is of especial interest, as the manufacture of glue is a leading branch of business of the town. The different qualities and colors of the glues are neatly done up in packages and make a very attractive and creditable display. In the center of the case, in glass jars, are different samples of Brown's Comminuted Glue, (warranted pure). This glue received a medal and diploma at the Centennial. The whole is surrounded by a neat black walnut railing, and our people who are in search of objects of interest will readily perceive it.

Messrs. J. E. Clement & Co. are also on hand in the basement with the products of their machine shop here in town. They show several different machines which they have manufactured, and which are attracting considerable attention. Those who are interested in mechanics and machinery will surely visit their exhibit, and it is of interest to our own town from the fact that the different machines are adapted to the principal business of Peabody, that of leather. They show a Leather Whitening Machine, a McDonald Unhairing Machine, and a Sawyer's Leather Measuring Machine. They are all in good running order, and the merits and advantages of each are cheerfully and carefully shown to any in search of such information.

Mr. George H. Little shows different sizes of his Patent Injector, and we observed that the neat cards which he had left explaining somewhat the machine and giving the prices of the different sizes were in demand by people who seemed interested in the workings and object of the invention. The exhibit is certainly a credit to the town and the patentee.

Mr. David T. Winter exhibits his improved Leather Measuring Machine in this fair and also in the New England. This machine is a wonder to those who have not seen its operation. Our leather men of Peabody have become familiar with the operation of his other machine from use here, and Mr. Winter has met with great success, which he justly deserves. The improved machine makes several important changes which are considered by Mr. Winter as much simpler and more advantageous, and it can be seen in operation at his manufactory here as well as at the fairs.

Mr. H. P. Reed has on exhibition near the Fitzhenry scouring machine: his Leather Brushing Machine. This machine is used to good advantage in removing all dirt and grease from the grain of all kinds of leather and skins, and in the finish of polish leather to raise the nap. This machine is also used by belt manufacturers to a large extent.

An opportunity of visiting these and other interesting exhibits in the fairs should not be missed by our citizens who have not already made a tour of inspection of the wonders there displayed.

It should be no surprise that Senator Bayard should have been elected president pro tem. of the Senate. It was not to be expected that the democrats would let pass the opportunity which they had of being in the majority, occasioned by the death of Gen. Burnside and the resignation of the two senators from New York. They have had no such advantage of late years, and very few anticipated that they would not make the most of the situation. That they allowed the new republican senators to be sworn in with so little opposition is a gratifying sign, and shows that both parties are disposed to make the extra session as short as possible. At present writing, it looks as if a committee, composed equally of republicans and democrats, would be appointed, to whom will be referred all nominations sent in to the Senate for confirmation. It is to be hoped that the business will be hastened without delay, when the object of convening the Senate—the providing for the succession of the executive branch of the government and the confirmation of the Presidential nominations—shall have been accomplished. It looks probable that an entirely new cabinet will be submitted by President Arthur, the resignation of Secretary Windom having been accepted, and the need of the appointment of his successor being imperative.

In another column, we give place to an extract from some remarks by Rev. Mr. Talmage, of Brooklynn, which we reprint more from their sensational character than from any expectation that they will be accepted as true by a majority of our readers. And, yet, the attitude of the Mormons, their spirit and bitter feeling which has been manifested in many ways towards those whom they have considered as enemies to their church, leads us to reflect again upon the danger threatening the country from this people, and to ask if there may not be some truth in the suggestions as thrown recklessly out. It is well known that our late President took strong and radical ground against their practices and so-called religion; and it is also well known that active and persistent enforcement of our laws there will put an end to this stain upon our country. But thus far only attempts have been made, and they realize, as well as any one, that they have been safe from any decided inroads upon the system. It would not be strange if we were compelled, before many years, to meet this issue face to face. Harper's Magazine for October portrays in a vivid manner the increase and growth of polygamy and Mormonism, and in this connection we quote the closing words of the article:

"Little as the masses believe it now, there will come a time, if this monster in Utah is left to grow, when there will be another call for volunteers and for money, and, as before, tens of thousands of brave young men will go away, never more to return; as before, there will be an enormous debt incurred; as before, the country will be hillocked with graves and the whole land will be moistened by the rain of women's tears."

The citizen's executive temperance committee present to our readers this week a report which has the unanimous approval of the members of the Committee. It will be read with interest, in view of some of the recent raids upon the liquor sellers, and explains to a certain extent their action. We commend it to the attention of our readers, without any comment on our part, which the crowded state of our columns forbids.

Messrs. Davis & Fay are making the Essex House, Salem, about the most homelike place in this vicinity. It is being patronized more than ever, and the guests are the most contented lot of human beings in the world.

Obituary.

We have to record the decease, last Wednesday night, of Mr. Elijah W. Upton, well known to the citizens of this town from his long connection with the manufacturing interests of Peabody. Mr. Upton had been in failing health for some time; having been taken seriously ill some three years ago, since which time he has been gradually declining. He was born in Danvers, February 24, 1811, and was the son of Elijah Upton, who was during his life actively engaged in many prominent enterprises of the old town of South Danvers. He was the first man in this town to commence the manufacture of glue, and by his sagacity and enterprise built up a large business in this article. "To him," says Fitch Poole, in the South Danvers Wizard, "our town is more indebted than to any other man for erecting dwellings for our population, for opening streets and avenues, and leveling hills and raising vallies to make eligible sites for building." He was formerly engaged in the tanning business with the late Mr. Joseph Tufts and afterwards with Caleb L. Frost. In the business enterprises of his father Elijah W., when quite a young man, took an active interest.—After receiving a good academical education at Hopkinton, N. H., he returned to this town, and at the early age of twenty years became a partner in the glue business, and, later, after the retirement of his father, he assumed the entire charge of what has since been known as the Essex Glue Company.—In 1847, he formed a partnership with Theopilus and Nathaniel Walker, and they still further extended and increased the then growing business, until it has become an important branch of the business enterprise of Peabody. About the same time, this firm built and established the Danvers Bleachery, which has always done an extensive business, and is known far and near, for the superior and excellent quality of the work produced. It remained under the control of this firm until about fifteen years ago, since which time it has continued as a stock company. Mr. Upton, from his early connection with his father's tannery, was always interested to a great degree in that branch of industry in this town, which he retained to the time of his death. He was not engaged actively in public life, preferring the quiet and retirement of business, which was more congenial to him. He was, however, sent to the Massachusetts Legislature for two years, and was a director and for a considerable time President os the Warren National Bank.—He visited Europe several times, the first time in 1851, at the time of the International Exhibition, in which he took considerable interest. He bore his last illness with patience and great cheerfulness, retaining full possession of his faculties, and his interest in matters of public and private interest, to the last. He leaves a wife and five children. His funeral took place on Saturday last, and was attended by Rev. Mr. Sperry, of the South Congregational Church, assisted by Rev. Prof. W. M. Barbour, formerly pastor of the church here, and a friend of Mr. Upton. Before offering prayer, he made the following remarks, which we are permitted to publish entire.

Its most prominent features was unselfishness. This gave your well-known citizen his remarkable sereuity. You all know how he bore himself among you: never unduly elated with his successes: never rankling with bitterness in his losses: never using his wealth or influence to hinder anyone, but to help all he could. He was a Puritan born and bred; but of the gentle sort, taking after Milton and Vane, rather than after Cromwell and his Ironsides. Hence the beauty of his home and home life. He was lavish in literature and the fine arts,—a certain natural refinement in him superinduced upon his ancestral puritanism, made him the gentleman he was. His home which he leaves this day forever, has welcomed to it many, from many lands, who have felt the warmth of its fireside; the inspiration of its intellectual treasures; and its satisfaction to the imagination and the taste. The walls that now look down on his remains, are covered with the emblems of a rare culture in the beautiful. It is a loss to an American town to bury such a citizen; for he was one of the sort that give our republican life its inherent worth. He has expired with a stainless name. His sons will think of this. They will remember that the moan of no widow whose house has been devoured, the cry of no laborer defrauded of his hire, follows him to the grave. We shall all remember that he has been feet to the lame, and eyes to the blind; blest as the one who considered the poor: who left the world better than he found it; who lived beloved, and died lamented.

This much upon his citizenship. Let me say a word upon him as a friend. Very pleasant has his friendship been to me. Pardon a personal allusion. It is twenty years, this very week, since I came to this town, as minister of the South Church. Among the many valued friendships I fell into, was his. And from the day of his first kindness to me in Andover until now, I can say with William Wirt of his friend Judge Carr, "I have known little difference between his happiness in mine." In the flush of success, and in the gloom that falls over our children's coffins, we have been together, and in the same accord, and in all cases alike with a blessing unto me. More who have preceded me, ministerial friends of his family, have the same testimony to give of our departed friend.

The household grief over this good man's death, it would be rude to dwell upon. The days will be here soon, when they are to say,

"O, for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still!"

They will then think on the source of the love that filled this gentle life. God is love: God alone could have given him that unselfish love. Unless all signs fail, this life was moved by the principles of the gospel of Christ. And to God in Christ, the God of all consolation, are they to turn for the future.

And our united thanks are due to God, for our knowledge of the departed, and our blessing by his life.

The Temperance Executive Committee to their Fellow Citizens of Peabody:

Some months since we were appointed at a public meeting, wherein you were well represented, "to aid the town authorities in enforcing the present Liquor Law." We have attended to that duty, at a considerable sacrifice on our part, and now report the result of our labors, and respectfully ask your aid and counsel as to our future action. From the start, we have encountered the chronic difficulty of procuring evidence of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, the rule being the frequenters of rum shops will commit perjury rather than endanger their sources of future supply. Under the provisions of the present statute, however, we have brought eighteen cases to trial, in our Trial Justice's Court, most of them being for keeping with intent to sell, in fifteen of which convictions were secured. All appealed, and the result now depends upon the District Attorney and the juries of the Criminal Term now in session at Lawrence.

We have also, by means of private detectives, procured evidences of sales against the principal illegal dealers which we are now bringing to trial, very much to their dismay and rage, and, somewhat, we regret to say, to the dissatisfaction of some, who profess friendliness to the temperance cause. In company for once with that class composed of sellers, their victims and hangers-on, always to be found on the side of disorder and lawbreaking, they are penetrated with horror at the terrible dishonor of a plan which proves effective in dealing with this, as well as other classes of criminals. The benefit and necessity of detective service in ferreting out thieving, counterfeiting, and other crimes, they freely admit, but they would limit the means of combating with the very fountain-head of almost all crime, to the circulation of tracts and the prayers and tears of its victims!

Why this distinction? That the plan we have pursued is not the one which the criminals themselves would have selected is entirely true. That it is effective, their desperation testifies. When, in her previous history, has our good old town seen a mob of criminals pursue witnesses from the court house itself, through her central square, and savagely assault them as they reached the principal hotel of the place, because they had testified to a few of the many crimes committed by these wholesale law breakers?

Fellow citizens — this issue between those who seek by lawful methods to protect the wives, mothers and children of this and future generations, and those who seek to overwhelm with misery in defiance of all law, must be met, and Order, Justice and Right are yet strong enough to prevail, if their followers are but in unison. A firm and united front at this juncture by all those who have professed themselves in favor of Temperance and Law will drive the evil traffic to secret holes and corners, and destroy its aggressiveness within one year. Shall this work go on until there is at least a greater degree of public security than at present? To cease our exertions now is simply to increase the difficulties of another beginning. It is for you, fellow citizens, to say, in some unmistakable manner, whether we shall continue our efforts to protect you, and prevent your children from becoming drunkards and drunkards' wives, or whether in future we shall simply endeavor to guard our own. It is patent that we can have but one object in this appeal. We certainly cannot be aiming at profit or popularity in facing the horde we have aroused. We are acting solely for the common weal. If our action is approved by you, we are ready to go on. If disapproved, we are released from a most disagreeable duty.

Published by unanimous vote of the Temperance Executive Committee.

For Lieut. Governor, J. A. Carleton, of Haverhill.

For Secretary of State, Gen. Michael T. Donahue, of Somerville.

Tor Treasurer and Receiver General, Col. Francis J. Parker, of Newton.

For Auditor, Chas. R. Field, of Greenfield.

For Attorney General, Patrick A. Collins, of Boston.

The State Central Committee is as follows: Jonas H. French of Gloucester, Josiah C. Abbott of Boston, Philander Cobb of Kingston, A. C. Drinkwater of Braintree, M. M. Cunniff of Boston, Henry Walker of Boston, Daniel Mullin of Lynn, Luther G. Pitman of Marblehead, John A. G. Richardson of Lowell, J. W. Coveney of Cambridge, George W. Gill of Worcester, Henry E. Alvord of Easthampton, E. A. McLearned of Pittsfield, Reuben Noble of Westfield, and Henry A. Plimpton of Worcester.

Mr. Sam'l P. Wilson, our veteran flagman, had a narrow escape this morning. As he was shifting the signal balls, which are run up in a sort of framework on chains, a nut came off and let the whole business down. Mr. Wilson sprang to one side and one of the balls struck him on the hand, cutting a deep gash, and the heavy weights that balance the balls just grazed his foot, cutting a piece out of his boot and stocking without injuring the foot.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE.

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by EDWARD W. JACOBS to EBEN SUTTON, dated May twenty-eighth, A. D. 1879, and recorded with Essex Deeds, Book 1019, Leaf 16, and for breach of the condition therein contained, will be sold at public auction upon the premises hereinafter described, on Friday the fourth day of November, A. D. 1881, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:—

A certain lot of land with the buildings thereon, situated in rear and northerly of Main street in Peabody, in the county of Essex, said estate being described in a deed of conveyance from Fitch Poole to Warren M. Jacobs, dated the seventeenth day of March, A. D. 1852, and recorded with Essex Deeds, South District, Book 457, Leaf 85: the description in said deed from Fitch Poole to Warren M. Jacobs being as follows:—Beginning at the southeasterly corner of said premises and running westerly by land conveyed to the grantor by said Jacobs, by deed dated March 17th, A. D. 1852; thence southerly by said land forty-two feet to the middle of Strong Water Brook; thence westerly by said brook and by land of O. F. Batchelder and William Sutton seventy-two feet; thence northerly, along the middle of said brook, by land of J. Shed and C. L. Frost and D. W. Osborn about three hundred and seventy feet to the Essex railroad; thence by said railroad easterly about one hundred and seventy feet; thence southerly to the middle of the creek by land of heirs of William Sutton; thence following up along the middle of the creek to the northeasterly corner of the morocco factory; thence running in a straight line southerly about two hundred and thirty feet parallel with the easterly side of said factory and four feet distant from it to the point begun, with all the buildings thereon standing, reserving and excepting to said Poole his heirs and assigns a right of way, if any they have, over said premises by the existing way on the northwesterly side of said Factory, to land on Walnut street conveyed to said Poole by said Jacobs, March 17th, 1852. The above premises are subject to a mortgage from Warren M. Jacobs to Emily W. Rockwood for one thousand dollars. EBEN SUTTON,

HOME HAPPENINGS.

A Republican Caucus was held last evening in the Town Hall. James P. King was chosen Chairman and George Randall Secretary. The following delegates were chosen to attend the county and councillor conventions, to be held in Salem to-morrow: James P. King, Henry Wardwell, Chas. D. Howard, Geo. Randall, C. H. Goulding, S. F. Blaney, J. F. Foye, E. W. Abbott, John Osborn, David S. Claflin. The following gentlemen were chosen to attend the Senatorial convention, to be hereafter appointed: A. B. Merrill, Amos Merrill, Albert Vittum, William Blaney, Elbridge Rust, J. F. Foye, C. T. Batchelder, J. P. King, W. F. Wiley, J. F. Ingraham, Jr. Delegates are empowered to fill all vacancies.—A committee was appointed to present four names to fill vacancies upon the Town Committee. They reported the following which were accepted: Bowman Viles, H. H. Proctor, Alonzo Raddin, Chas. D. Howard. The committee will organize on Saturday evening.

The members of the Leather Splitter's Mutual Union effected a permanent organization on Friday evening last, by electing the following officers: President, A. H. Warner; Vice President, Geo. A. Warner; Sec'y, Stephen Murphy; Treas., Theodore P. Teague; Executive Committee, A. H. Warner, Stephen Murphy, Jos. H. Sumner, Michael T. Lawrence, James Conway.—Meetings will be held on the first Friday of each month, and an adjourned meeting on Friday of this week, at Ashland Hall at 7.30 o'clock. All splitters wishing to join are requested to hand their names to some member of the Executive Committee. It is intended to take only workmen from Salem and Peabody, and the object is purely for insurance in case of accident.

The Greenbackers will open the campaign in town by a rally at town hall to-night, to be addressed by Mr. Chas. H. Litchman of Marblehead, and I. W. Andrews of Danvers. It seems to be the object of this party to make it appear that they have the strength, with the hopes that the Democrats will wheel into line and support their candidate for representative. It is known that the Democracy will never for a moment entertain the idea of not nominating a candidate. The strength of the Greenback party was shown at the last election, and any deep scheme to keep a Democratic candidate from the field will not be tolerated for an instant. It is very easy to make a noise, but the votes count.

Last Wednesday evening, Mr. Chas. M. Poor, of the firm of Wiley & Poor, leather manufacturers, was united in marriage to Miss Alice P. Osborn, at the residence of the bride's father, Franklin Osborne, Jr., on Central St. The nuptial ceremony took place in the presence of an assembly of invited friends, and was performed by Rev. W. G. Sperry, of the Cong. Church. The couple were the recipients of numerous and costly presents. A short reception was held previous to the departure of the happy pair on a tour to Washington, D. C.

Last Friday, Bragdon's large wholesale cracker team came home fastened to the rear of one of Munroe & Arnold's express teams. It seems that as the driver, Mr. W.H.Morgan of Beverly, was ascending the hill near the Lead Mills the forward wheel suddenly came off, letting the wagon down and breaking the pole. The driver was thrown from his seat, and finding himself uninjured, started for his horses, which had become frightened and run away. He overtook them at the top of the hill and returned home.

A horse belonging to Schollar & Donnell created a lively sensation by lying down in the shafts last Saturday. The horse is known as "John," and had been leaned up against Dr. Pike's only a few minutes before, while the driver went into the store. After overturning the wagon and collecting a crowd he concluded to postpone his nap until night, and with a little assistance he was on his feet again, not having done much damage.

The platform of the Spiritualists in Ashland Hall, was occupied last Sunday afternoon by Miss Jennie B. Hagan of Royalton, Vt. The hall was comfortably filled, and Miss Hagan gave an address and several poems on different subjects selected by the audience. She claims to do this without previous preparation, and appeared to do so to the satisfaction of those present. She speaks in the same place next Sunday.

A Sunday evening collection was recently taken at the Baptist Church to defray the expense of repairing the steeple which was struck by lightning and $30 contributed.

Arrangements for the Benefit Fair, of Volunteer Engine Co., are progressing finely. One hundred and one prizes will be distributed among the season ticket holders, and the whole makes a grand total of $2000. The committee having the matter in charge are gentlemen whose executive ability is well known and guarantee its success. The following is the committee:

James S. Smith, Chairman.
Ira A. Burnham.
Frank A. Warner.
H. J. G. Kimball.
William O'Connor.
U. A. Brophy.
Horace M. Holt.
William McElligott.
Fred Edwards.
Eugene O'Grady.
Oliver Boynton.
Horace G. Upton.
Frank Heylingberg.
George H. Carr.
M. J. McElligott.

It is the intention of the Committee to appeal to their brother firemen throughout the state for assistance, well knowing that a fireman is always "able and willing" to help a brother in distress. And to excite a friendly rivalry among the different companies to whom tickets will be sent for them to sell, a silver trumpet, valued at $50, will be given to the company that disposes of the largest number of tickets. Chief Engineer Littlefield will have charge of the drawing, and will be assisted by four gentlemen appointed from the floor on the evening of the drawing. The following are the prizes:

Mr. Wm. A. Smith has handed us a circular, which was received from Jas. G. Bovey, asking aid for Comrade Chas. E. Brown, who enlisted in Co. G, 1st Mass. Vol. H. A., and froze his feet while on picket duty, Jan. 17, 1865, from the effects of which one was amputated. By the recent fires in Michigan he lost whatever property he possessed, and an appeal is made in his behalf. Mr. B. enlisted in the town of Lincoln, July 5, 1864. Any information can be obtained of Mr. Smith, or contributions left with him or Captain Benj. Day, Treasurer of the Regiment Association, Marblehead. Small favors thankfully received.

It is sad to chronicle that men who call themselves respectable can enjoy and make light of another's misfortune. Last Sunday afternoon, on Walnut street, an elderly woman, under the influence of liquor was surrounded by a crowd of young men, who greeted her harangue and low wit with boisterous laughter and blackguardism. Such conduct on the part of both is disgraceful.

As the 11.38 train from Danvers was crossing Central street last Saturday, a team driven by a stranger was approaching at a rapid rate. The flagman was at his post and tried to stop the team, but the driver whipped up his horse and just cleared the track, the locomotive striking the rear of the wagon sufficient to throw it to one side. It looked like a narrow escape.

A number of employes at J. B. Thomas' slaughtering establishment visited Mr. Sam'l S. Gibson at Gloucester, last Thursday evening. The occasion was to celebrate the completion of a large refrigerator recently completed at that place, capable of holding some 30 tons of ice. The boys all sat down inside the box and partook of a good clam chowder.

At the October term of the Superior Court in Lawrence, the following indictments were brought in by the Grand Jury against Peabody parties: James F. Murphy and James Claxton, malicious taking of team; Frank O. Parker, assault with a pistol; Patrick J. Ronan, assault.

Anecdotes.

THEY ARBITRATED.

One day last week a Detroit produce-buyer had occasion to remain over night with a farmer in Western Michigan. While eating supper he was asked if he knew much about law—whether he had ever served on a jury; if he called himself a competent man to arbitrate in an affair between neighbors, and if he was posted on the law regarding breach of promise cases. He answered these questions as best he could, and apparently to the satisfaction of the farmer, for as soon as the meal was finished the sun-browned agriculturist confidentially began:

"I think you are a pretty square man, and I want you to help me out of a little difficulty. I'll be back in about half an hour."

He put on his hat and went down the road, and at the time agreed upon he returned in company with a young farmer about twenty-two years old, whom he called Josephus. The only peculiar things about Josephus were his flaxen hair, long legs, white eyebrows and breadth of feet, but he was no mud-sill. As soon as he was introduced he opened the case as follows:

"There hain't no use in any beating around the bush. The fact is, when I first come here, I fell in love with Uncle Sile's Mary. She riciprocated, and we agreed to have each other. That's correct, isn't it, Uncle Sile?"

"I guess that's about the way of it," replied the farmer.

"Wall, to make a long story short, last Jinuary I gin Mary the cold shake fur a gal over in the Bebee Settlement. Mary is a good gal, but she hain't even second fiddle on style or good looks, and Uncle Sile knows that as well as I do. Now, then, they've been talking about a breach of promise suit on me, and I won't deny they've got a case. I've been willing all along to settle damages on a fair basis, but we couldn't just agree on what was fair. Uncle Silas comes over and says you are here, and he offers to leave it out to you if I will, and so if you will act on the case we'll come to some conclusion."

"Where is Mary?" asked the Detroiter.

"Down in Martin county, Indiana," answered the father.

"And she writes home," added Josephus, "that she's had nine offers of marriage in two weeks. Them Hoosiers is just swarming for her. Them nine offers want to be considered in assesing damages."

"And how old is she?"

"She's only twenty-one, and that's another thing to be considered. 'Taint like as if she was forty, and might have to go off to China as a missionary.

"And how much property are you worth?"

"Wall, I've forty acres of scrub land, an old cow and a mule, and I reckon the traps around the place might bring $10 at auction. That's honest Injun, and Uncle Sile knows it."

"Yes, that's about the way he's fixed," said the farmer.

"And another thing you want to consider is the fact that I ain't purty. If I was purty the gal might claim high damages, but I'm about as infernal homely as a Digger Injun. Add to this the fact that I am an Infidel, and that I can't sing, nor fiddle, nor dance, and am too lazy to enjoy a biled dinner, and what has the gal lost by not marrying me?"

"And you are both willing to leave it to me?"

"I reckon," they answered together.

"Well, all things considered," said the Detroiter after due reflection, "my verdict is that Josephus drive the old cow over here in full for all damages. What do you say, young man?"

"The cow is worth $14, but I'll do it rather than have any hard feelings."

"How is it with you, Uncle Sile?"

"Waal, I guess that's about fair. I had been sticking out for $15 in cash, but times are purty clus and I want to give Joe a fair show. Go'n git the crittur, Josephus, and we'll have the papers made out, treat the stranger to hard cider, and go to bed feelin' that we are good friends as before you gin Mary the shake."—Detroit Free Press.

HOW HE CAUGHT THEM.

A celebrated and somewhat eccentric preacher in London played a little trick on his people in order to get them to church early. They had been in the habit of coming whenever it suited them, thereby causing him much annoyance. This minister one Sunday told his people that he would, on the next Sunday, have something of unusual importance to communicate to them, but that in order to avail themselves of the benefits of it they must all be in their seats at the very moment appointed for beginning the service. It turned out that all he had to communicate was the expression of his pleasure at finding them all in their seats in season. Only two persons were late, and the others grinned at them as they came in on tiptoe and took their seats. It was the impression of most of those who were thus lured into a spasmodic punctuality, that the minister had sold them very cheap.

The waste of material in coal mining is enormous. It is estimated that only two-thirds of the coal in workable mines is taken out; there is a further loss of twenty-five per cent in the preparation and delivery. The Reading Railroad Company has spent $300,000 in the attempt to utilize coal by burning it in locomotives constructed for the purpose.

Happiness is like a sunbeam, which the least shadow intercepts, while adversity is often as the rain of spring.

☞ Try it; keep trying it, and try it again. We say this because we believe that the health, happiness and prosperity of the people depend upon the proper use of these medicines, which have proved so successful in eradicating disease and defeating death. The medicine so effective in its cure of diseases is the great Southern remedy, Simmons' Liver Regulator. Try it; we believe that the first trial will be satisfactory.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

NECESSITATING A SURGICAL OPERATION—LOVING MOTHER ATTEMPTS TO TAKE A PAIR OF SHEARS FROM HER CHILD.

Parents Be Careful.

Domestic accidents are common to women, and some of them are very serious. Mrs. Warner, of South Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., some weeks ago attempted to take from her child a pair of shears with which it was playing. A slight struggle ensued, in which the point of the shears entered Mrs. Warner's left eye, entirely destroying the sight. Her family physician did what he could, but intensely painful inflammation arose, which, by sympathy, threatened the loss of the other eye. Total blindness to a woman having the care of a household is an irretrievable calamity. In this strait Mrs. W— applied to the well-known and skillful surgeon, Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who removed the injured eye by a very successful operation, setting aside all danger of further harm to the sight of the other eye. But, owing to pain and mental distress, her system needed a tonic and restorative medicine. To do this work the Doctor prescribed "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which sustained its reputation and laid a sure foundation of health.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy removes all impurities from the blood, regulates the Liver and Kidneys. Cures Constipation, and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to Females. It is for sale by all our druggists at ONE DOLLAR a bottle. oct5—1m

DIRECTIONS

For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c, insert with little finger a particle of the balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane.

For Deafness.

Apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Having gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone, recognized as a wonderful remedy. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head and snuffles it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeabld. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

I purchased five bottles of your Hop Bitters of Bishop & Co. last fall, for my daughter, and am well pleased with the Bitters. They did her more good than all the medicine she has taken for six years. WM. T. MCCLURE.

Gen. Brady appeared in court in seer-sucker suit, we are informed. The country would like to see this old sere sucker of the treasury in a striped suit in which the "stwipes go wound and wound."

The above is from a very reliable farmer, whose daughter was in poor health for seven or eight years, and could obtain no relief until she used Hop Bitters. She is in as good health as any person in the country. We have large sales, and they are making remarkable cures. W. H. Bishop & Co.

BRACE UP.—There is serious meaning in this. That wearied step, languid eye and feeling of general lassitude, come from "spring sickness." Be assured, a serious, and, perhaps, fatal disease is close in its wake. The system wants cleansing of winter impurities; the sluggish blood needs to be sent in swift and clear currents through the veins. "Favorite Remedy" will do this; it will give new vigor to the body, brightness to the eye, a glow to the countenance and elasticity to the step. One dollar a bottle. Every druggist has it. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence. Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. MCPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. READ THE PROOF:

Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.

The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.

The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.

This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.

TESTIMONIALS from well known people near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible discrover, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.

We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.

J. W. Manning the Veteran Nurseryman, says: Having over-exerted myself in my nursery giving me a weakness of the Stomach and Kidneys, I used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam—which has given me an appetite and proves better than any bitters, and is the most pleasant preparation to the taste that I have ever used.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well-known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I fe l like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

"Almost at Death's Door."
114 Shawmut street, Chelsea, March 1, '81.
I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, as strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.

Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs. N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician, who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.

Write or call upon Mrs. Russell, and also upon her family Physician for further particulars.

Saved! Saved! Saved!
I am happy to say that Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has cured my cough, of which I had despaired of ever being cured. I can now sleep without coughing at all, all of which I owe to Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. I only now need strength.

Two Tragedies of Niagara.

More than twenty years ago Niagara witnessed a tragedy which, while of a heart-rending character, was marked by an act of true heroism seldom equaled in grandeur. Mr. Charles Addington, a young man about 23 or 24 years of age, was affianced to Mrs. DeForest, both being residents of Buffalo. One day a happy party, comprising Mrs. DeForest, Miss DeForest, a young daughter, Eva, a beautiful child five or six years old, and "Charley" Addington, as his friends were accustomed to call him, visited the falls. They crossed the bridge to Goat Island, and, while resting under the trees, little Eva strayed away from the group, and, approaching the bank of the narrow but deep and swift stream that rushes between Goat Island and the small island lying between it and the main American rapids, was amusing herself by casting sticks into the water and watching them as they whirled swiftly away.—Mrs. DeForest, alarmed for her child's safety, requested Charles Addington to bring her back. Charley at once proceeded to the bank, and thinking to give the little one a fright, approached her stealthily from behind, and catching her under the arms, held her over the stream. The startled child threw up her little arms over her head, and instantly she slipped through Addington's hands and fell into the rapids.

The realization of the horrible calamity must have come home to Addington's brain with the rapidity of the lightning's flash. He saw that his rash act had cost the child's life, and that one desperate chance of saving her remained; that the world was at an end for him forever. Tearing off his coat, he rushed along the bank until he had passed little Eva who was kept afloat by her clothing; then, plunging in ahead of her, he seized the child and desperately attempted to throw her on the bank. As he made the effort he fell back into the rapids and was whirled over the small fall that intervenes between the American and the Horse Shoe Falls. Little Eva struck the top of the bank, but all power had apparently gone from her, and she rolled back into the stream and was hurried to her dreadful fate. The mother and sister stood powerless and paralyzed with horror, while a tragedy, almost instantaneous in its action, passed before their eyes, leaving its dark cloud hanging over all their future lives. Charley Addington had made a hero's atonement for his thoughtless and reckless act.

An accident with very dramatic accompaniments occurred some very few years after the sad event that cost Charley Addington and Eva DeForest their lives. One morning, soon after daybreak, the early risers at the falls discovered something moving on a huge old log or trunk of a tree which for years had shown itself above the boiling rapids on the American side, having been caught by and firmly wedged into the rocks on its way to the falls. Looking downward from the bridge this log was and still is in full sight, in the fiercest part of the rapids, considerably nearer to the small island on the American side of Goat Island than to the American shore. The moving object was soon found to be a man, and it was evident that his boat had been carried over the falls during the night, while he himself had miraculously been cast against the log, by which he had managed to stop his fearful rush toward death. Despatches were immediately sent to Buffalo to the coast life saving service, and Capt. Dorr hastened to Niagara by a special train, carrying with him two metallic life-boats, and plans to save the man were concerted. But, before the arrangements were completed the news had been spread abroad, and many thousands of persons had reached the falls by special trains.

The first attempt at rescue was by means of a large Francis metallic life-boat attached to a cable which was slacked off from a bridge opposite the log and guided by side ropes. The boat had not got far from the bridge when the fierce rapids siezed it, turned it round and round, and appeared to be endeavoring to crush in its sides. The small cable snapped like a whip cord, and the poor fellow, who had been waiting the effort made for his rescue, saw the boat whirled past him and carried over the falls, as if in mockery of his would-be rescuers. Considerable time was then used in deliberating on a new plan, and it was proposed to fasten a cable to some building on the American side, to carry it over to the island until it would sag near the log, and then to rescue the man by means of a basket let down by rings, and to be let down and pulled in by similar ropes. The materials for this experiment could not be procured, so at last it was decided to send down a strongly constructed raft in the same manner as the life-boat had been launched, and if it reached the man in safety, to ease it over toward the small island, from whence his rescue would be comparatively easy.—The raft was built, but it was 4 o'clock in the afternoon before all was ready. The day had passed without flight of time being noticed.

The excitement was intense. Men and women, who had stood for hours without food, were painfully agitated. The raft moved, it withstood bravely the wild assaults of the angry rapids. It neared the log. The man stood up and waved his arms. The raft came within his reach and he got on to it, ate the food, drank a small quantity of weak brandy and water that had been put aboard, and fastened himself to the lashings which had been prepared, and the intent of which he understood.—Then the raft was cautiously and steadily moved toward the island with its precious freight. The people shouted, and many wept from overwrought feeling. Suddenly the raft came to a stand. The rope was fast. It had caught in a rock. To attempt to force it was to risk its parting, and the fatal consequence could not be misunderstood. The poor victim seemed to take in the situation, and grow desperate. He unfastened the lashings, stood up, made a spring from the raft in the direction of the island, and was in the foaming waters. Instantly he struck out for the island. He seemed to be a powerful swimmer, and thousands of men and women held their breath in horrified suspense. He appeared to near the island in his desperate endeavors. Then arose the cry, "He's saved! he's saved!"

But suddenly those on the bridge, who could see more distinctly from their location, became aware that the distance between the island and the swimmer's head was gradually widening. There was another dreadful moment of suspense, and then the unpitying rapids seized their prey, and, apparently making sport of the efforts that had been resorted to to snatch him from their grasp, twisted him round and whirled him along until they hurried him over the precipice. As the poor fellow went over a singular effect was observable. The vast body of falling water curves over the edge of the falls like a huge wheel, and as the body was shot forward by the force of the current, it seemed to leap completely out of the water, the feet being visible, before it took that terrible plunge.—The deathlike silence that had fallen upon the crowd was broken by a fearful cry—a sound mingling a wail, a howl and a shriek in one. Many strong men as well as women fainted. They had witnessed a tragedy more intense in its painfulness than any the drama could present, and one not likely to be soon forgotten.—The Hour.

In his sermon last Sunday Dr. Talmage called attention to the repugnance to polygamy that General Garfield had expressed. After depicting the horrors of the institution of polygamy the preacher said: "It needed a father and a husband like Garfield to understand the value of a Christian home and to annihilate the abomination of Mormonism. Perhaps the time had not quite come; perhaps it was necessary that a nation's indignation should be aroused to a greater pitch of anger against Mormonism before the extirpation should be attempted. The death of Garfield under such circumstances would arouse the nation. While all good people were praying for the President's recovery, the Mormons were secretly praying for his death. Mormonism declared long ago that its bitterest enemies should perish, if not in one way then in another. The murder was to be done in the name of the Lord. Brigham Young declared in his church that any one who destroys the life of an anti-Mormon does God a service. The Mountain Meadow massacre and the work of the Mormon Destroying Angels was done in the name of the Lord. I will not say that Guiteau was a Mormon, nor would I dare to say that he was not. But Guiteau says he shot Garfield in the name of the Lord. If he was not a Mormon, he was one of the Oneida Community, whose chief doctrine was the right to a profusion of wives. He had the spirit of Mormon licentiousness, of Mormon cruelty, and Mormon murder. He says he sat in the park beside the President's house and practiced at a mark in the name of the Lord; then he went into the Baltimore depot and shot him in the name of the Lord. I suppose Guiteau's crime originally started from revenge, because he did not get a consulship; but I should not wonder if in the great day when all secret things are revealed it shall be found that he was the paid agent of that old hag of hell which sits making mouths at high heaven between the Rocky Mountains and the Sierra Nevadas."—Boston Globe.

Before receiving his sentence of ten years' imprisonment, Marvin, the bigamist, roundly abused the witnesses, the court officers and the jury. If his eighteen wives had been present to also relieve their minds the scene would have been complete.

A Burlington man looked into the garden hose to see why the water didn't come, just as his son turned the water on at the hydrant, and when the doctor came the stricken man told him that he saw the fellow climb over the fence, but didn't see his revolver until just as he shot. And then he wanted to know how long he had to live and said he was not afraid to die. But when he got at the true inwardness of it, he hunted for that boy nearly two hours, with a piece of lath and a skate strap to hold him, and then didn't find him.

A GIGANTIC FALL AND WINTER OPENING!

BY A BRANCH OF THE LARGEST CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT IN AMERICA.

$80,000!

EIGHTY THOUSAND Dollars' worth of Men's, Youths', Boys' and Children's Fine and Medium Clothing to be placed on exhibition by one of the Largest Clothing Manufacturers in the United States.

ON THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1881,

WE SHALL HAVE PLACED UPON OUR COUNTERS THE

Largest and Most Elegant Display of Fine and Medium Clothing !

That it has ever been our pleasure to exhibit to the citizens of Essex County. We have taken especial pains this season in selecting our Domestic Goods from the most popular woolen mills in the United States, such as the Globe, Sawyer, Assabet, Eddy's, Broadbrook, Middlesex, Norwalk, Riverside, Harris, &c., &c. We KNOW our Garments are right as we manufacture them ourselves and employ none but first-class workmen. We boldly assert that we can show the finest assortment of Young Men's Dress and Business Suits and Overcoats ever seen in any retail establishment outside of the cities of New York or Boston. It is conceded by our Patrons and by many of our Competitors that our Garments are made and trimmed much better and fit better than the ordinary custom work,

AND ARE SOLD AT A MUCH LESS PRICE.

We give below a list of our FALL AND WINTER GARMENTS, made from Foreign and Domestic fabrics :—

1000 Men's Busines Suits,
1000 Men's Dress Suits,
2000 Boys' and Children's School and Dress Suits. (3000) Three Thousand Men's, Youths', Boys' and Children's Heavy Overcoats.
5000 Men's Pantaloons,
500 Men' Fall Overcoats,

HEAVY WEIGHT OVERCOATS

Receive the first attention of buyers of Winter Clothing, and we have prepared such a line of them as cannot fail to interest the most critical. Every grade of these goods, from the lowest to the most expensive, are confidently recommended as sustaining the specialty of style, cut and workmanship which we have initiated. Our Heavy Overcoats represent the following different styles: 75 Different Styles Men's Overcoats, 60 Different Styles Youths' Overcoats, 35 Different Styles Boys' Overcoats, 25 Different Styles Chil. Overcoats, making in all 185 Different Styles to select from. Prices of Men's and Youths' Overcoats, $3.00 and $30.00. 500 Men's Extra Heavy Ulsters, made with wide, deep collars, just the thing for men who are exposed to the cold weather. Prices from $6.00 to $25. Prices of Boys' Overcoats, $2.50 to $10. Prices of Children's Overcoats, $1.50 to $10.00. Our Young Men's Suits are made up in the following styles: Plain Cutaway Sack, Double Breasted Sack, Derby Frock, Plain Cutaway Frock, Four Button Cutaway Frock, and Paris Derby Frock.

BOYS' AND CHILDREN'S SPECIAL DEPARTMENT.

We never forget the little folks, as they grow up to be men. This department is stocked to its utmost with all the novelties of 1881. Mothers who desire to dress their little ones in handsome and stylish garment should call and examine our immense stock of Boys' and Children's Clothing, as we have many styles which cannot be found elsewhere. Our unparallelled success in Salem is due to the following facts: 1st. We manufacture our own Clothing. 2d. We never are undersold and never will be. 3d. No misrepresentation of goods. 4th. All garments guaranteed to fit. 5th. No extra charges made for alteration. 6th. Courteous Treatment. 7th. Strictly one price and no deviation. Our Motto: "SQUARE DEALING, STRICTLY ONE PRICE."

NAUMKEAG CLOTHING COMPANY, 179 ESSEX STREET, SALEM.

Manufacturers, Wholesale and Retail Dealers.

DIRECTLY OPPOSITE THE ESSEX HOUSE.

Z. A. GALLUP, Manager.

☞ REMEMBER! Our Headquarters, Manufactory and Wholesale Rooms, 395 to 403 Washington St., Boston are the largest in the United States.

WE HAD the pleasure, one day last week, of making a short visit to the town of Willimantic, Conn., and of observing the enterprise and public spirit displayed by its citizens. It is a large manufacturing town—the Willimantic spool thread being made here—and the four large mills being in operation at the time. We took a short trip over the newest mill, not yet fully completed, which is over 800 feet in length, and is run by steam power, all the other mills depending upon water for their power, which is scarce just at present, and necessitates running at less than their full capacity. This mill has the finest and most improved machinery, and is lighted throughout with Brush's electric light, making in the evening a brilliant appearance. We were informed that this company are making a very extended exhibit in Atlanta, Ga., at the Exposition there, of their mode of manufacturing spool thread, with a view to introducing it more in the South, and propose to take the cotton from the fields, and by evening produce from it their finest thread. They have arranged that all their operations in so manufacturing it shall be seen by the visitors there, and it cannot fail to be an interesting part of the exhibit.

We were invited to view the fine opera house recently erected by Mr. S. F. Loomer, one of the citizens, built on the plan of the Madison Square theatre, in New York, and the cosiest building of its kind we have ever seen. Everything about it, the stage, the properties and the decorations are equal to that of any metropolitan theatre, and the town feel very proud of it, which they have abundant reason to do. It will seat one thousand people, and the ground floor is occupied by several large stores, while the second story in front rents for offices, thus assuring the proprietor of a fair income independent of the receipts from the Opera house. The population of Willimantic is about the same in number as our own town, and independent of the fact that it is not in close proximity to a neighboring city, is no better able to support such a hall than is Peabody. Willimantic is a county seat, and they also have a new court house, elaborately finished in hard wood, and expensively furnished. There are two weekly papers there, both of which are ably managed, and well supported by the towns-people. The Journal is the Republican sheet, its editor, Mr. Hall, being a prominent and able campaign orator, as well as writer, and we were cordially receivod by him in his pleasant office. There are several large dry goods, clothing and other stores in the place, which appears to be rapidly growing.

Mr. DAVID CONRAD'S store was crowded with the ladies of Salem and vicinity, the latter part of last week, the occasion being his opening of fall and winter styles in millinery, cloaks and worsted goods. He made a fine and creditable display, the interior of the store being tastefully arranged with new and elaborate patterns in worsted embroidery, and the show windows attracting a great deal of attention, one of them having a large star in the center made of flowers of different colors and designs, and surrounded with laces, neck wear and goods of the fine description which are always to be found at his store. Mr. Conrad has a full line of fall goods now in stock, and advertises especial bargains in hosiery and underwear. This department is full of choice styles, and of fine quality, and will repay a careful examination. We were shown some very elaborately trimmed hats and bonnets, which he is selling at very low prices, and all the novelties in worsted work, trimmings and embroideries can be found on his counters.

OUR lady readers will not forget that Fernald & Sawyer have now open at their Millinery Store, No. 60 Main St., a line of all the new and leading styles in the Fall hats and bonnets, an inspection of which is cordially requested. Their regular opening occurs to-day, their store is neatly and appropriately trimmed, and the correct styles, made by a first-class milliner, are shown on the counters. The many patrons of the store will not fail to examine the goods at their store before looking elsewhere, and we feel confident that they will be suited to their entire satisfaction. Attention is also called to the fact that the firm have removed their worsteds and yarns to the millinery store, and that special attractions and advantages will be offered this season in this department. New canvass, slipper and embroidery patterns, patterns and designs for work, a large line of crewels, knitting and filling silks, and everything in this line can be found at their store at bottom prices.

CASS CITY, MICH.,
Oct. 15th, 1881.

MR. EDGAR W. UPTON,
Peabody, Mass.,

DEAR SIR,—I am in receipt of your donation containing your request that the recipient thereof should drop you a line.

The fire has left us very destitute, destroying everything that was combustible, even burning up my cow (the only one). There is a great scarcity of warm winter clothing, such as bedding, and under clothing for the men and women. Many yet are camping out in the open air, with no shelter of any consequence to cover them, but all seem to "stare fate in the face," and accept the situation. Anything that you may wish to send will be thankfully received by

W. J. WORK, Cass City,
Tuscol Co., Mich.,

Mark goods "Relief," and they will come free of charges.

Any goods of the above description sent to the house of Mr. Edgar W. Upton, Holten street, will be promptly forwarded.

NEWSPAPERS.—The Lynn Daily Bee and Weekly Reporter was sold Wednesday by Dr. J. G. Forman, administrator of the effects of the late Eugene F. Forman, to George A Schaffer and R. W. Bye, of Boston. The price paid was the appraisal to the probate court, $6334.50. Possession will not be taken by the new proprietors until about Nov. 1. The Salem Argus is now the daily edition of the Salem Post, and is lively as ever. The Lynn Record has suspended. Once was the time when this paper was in a most flourishing condition, but of late its managers have been oppressed by care and buffeted by fortune. We tender our commiseration. The Ipswich Chronicle has enlarged, and gives its readers about 6 1-2 columns more of reading matter. We congratulate Ipswich on having so good a paper as the Chronicle.

Peabody is proud and happy over the honor conferred upon it by the re-nomination, by acclamation, of its esteemed citizen, Hon. A. A. Abbott, clerk of courts.

An autograph letter has been published, written by Baron Steuben to Hon. Samuel Holten, and preserved in the latter's family, the interest in which is revived by the advent of some of the Baron's descendants to this country.—Mr. Holten was a native of Danvers, Mass., where he was born June 9, 1738. He was chosen a member of the Continental Congress, 1778-1787, serving one year as President, and was elected a representative from Massachusetts in the Third Congress, serving from December 2, 1793, to March 3, 1795. He was Judge of Probate for Essex county for a number of years, and his name fills a prominent place in the History of Danvers.

Attention is called to the new advertisement of George E. Pearson, No. 206 Essex street, Salem, his store being familiarly known as the Boston branch. The announcements which he makes are of interest to all our readers, it being of great value to find good and easy fitting boots and shoes, and which will give constant satisfaction to the wearer. This we believe can be done by a visit to the store of this firm, and an examination of their stock of goods.

The thumb is said to be an important index to female character. Women who have large thumbs are said by phrenologists and physiognomists to be more than ordinarily intelligent, and women with small thumbs are regarded romantic. According to very close observers, a woman's hand is more indicative of her character than her face, the latter being to some extent under the control of emotions. Women with square hands and large thumbs "have a temper of their own" and consequently a long tongue.

"Yes, You May Kiss Me, but Don't You Tell Pa," is the title of the latest song. It was very evident that this girl was not addressing a Chicago young man. In the free and boundless West the boys never tell pa. In this section the old men all wear box-toed boots.

October has five Saturdays, five Sundays and five Mondays.

Mr. Thomas M. Stimpson has been reappointed a Justice of the Peace.

ENVIOUS PEOPLE. — The envious never rejoice in the good fortune of their friends. Directly a man rises in life they come to the front with a story about his low origin, and wonder that so obscure an individual should ever have amounted to anything. The fact that he has proved himself a success, seems to make some of his acquaintances feel that they have been robbed in a manner, and that by so much he has risen above them in position or influence, by so much they are dwarfed. Men who have groped blindly to find a fitting place for their talents find it, and with it comes naturally appreciation, money, influence, prosperity. Can their good fortune cause anything but rejoicing in magnanimous and noble mind? One thing is certain: the man or woman who is occupied in picking to pieces the crown lawfully won by a successful neighbor, is not likely ever to wear one; for the time thus spent is worse than wasted, and the disposition that can find pleasure in employment so ignominious and degrading, can never find those aspirants, labors and toils congenial, which bring deserved reputation, honor and success.

Perhaps one of the most significant planks of the platform adopted by the convention of Greenbackers at Worcester was the one in which they "demand that the telegraphs of the country be purchased by the country, at cost, in the interest of commerce, and that the daily news be publicly bulletined at every telegraph office, and given to every newspaper, free of charge, in the interest of a broader dissemination of intelligence." We say significant because it exhibits so prominently the gross ignorance of the men who identify themselves with the Greenback and Labor-Reform agitation as developed in the parties bearing those names. How is the "daily news" to be publicly bulletined at every telegraph office unless it is received there for that purpose? The telegraph companies do not collect news; and the news that is transmitted over the telegraph lines is the private property of the persons sending and receiving it, just the same as private messages. If the "demand" should be granted by the government—and the same platform demands that the telegraph lines be owned and controlled by the government—it would involve an expense greater than that caused by the war of the Rebellion, and would bankrupt the government in a few years. But the proposition is quite as sensible as any that the Greenback-Labor-Reform politician is capable of formulating.—Gazette.

THE SORT OF GIRL TO GET.—It has been well and truly said that the true girl has to be sought for. She does not parade herself as show goods. She is not fashionable. Generally, she is not rich. But, oh! what a heart she has when you find her! so large and pure and womanly. When you see it you wonder if those showy things outside were women. If you gain her in love your two thousands are millions. She'll not ask you for a carriage, or a first-class house. She'll wear simple dresses and turn them when necessary, with no lofty magnificat to frown upon her economy. She'll keep everything neat and nice in your sky parlor, and welcome you so when you come home that you'll think the parlor higher than ever. She'll entertain true friends on a dollar, and astonish you with the new thought how little happiness depends on money. She'll make you love home (if you don't you're a brute,) and teach you how to pity while you scorn, a poor, fashionable society that thinks itself rich, and vainly tries to think itself happy. Now, do not, I pray you, say any more, 'I can't afford to marry.' Go find a true woman, and you can.—Throw away that cigar, burn up that switch cane, be sensible yourself, and seek your wife in a sensible way.

POLICE NOTES.—Oct. 12, Elizabeth M. Lillis, assault, discharged.

Daniel O'Connell, (not the great Irish orator,) for truancy, was committed to the truant school at the Alms House for six months.

Wm. Gorman, truancy, sent to the truant school for 6 months.

13th, Simon Hayes, truant, 6 months at truant school.

James Doran, another truant, was put upon probation.

18th, Jacob Powell, keeping liquor with intent to sell, fined $100 and costs.

CRADLES.—We clip the following judicious article from the Herald of Health.:

Fortunately for children, cradles are seen more and more rarely in all families, and we are decidedly of the opinion that these soothing-machines, once so popular, will soon have only a historic interest, like the spinning-wheel.—Still there are here and there mothers who advocate the cradle, and for such we have a word of advice. It the first place, the rocking motion to which the child is subjected causes an unnatural circulation of the blood in the brain, which tends in the end to produce a state of unnatural excitability. Now, if this takes place several times a day and these motions of the cradle are carried to excess with wakeful children, it is clear to our mind that the effects can only be injurious, especially when we remember that children once accustomed to it are often troubled with it for years. Cases are not rare of serious injury to the brain from violent rockings given to infants when intrusted to nurses or ignorant children. It is not difficult, with a little patience, to treat an infant so that, as soon as the time for sleeping approaches, he will go to sleep in his little bed without any artificial aid. If the beginning has been made, and if the mother has not been softened by the disagreeable crying of the child, to rock it to sleep in the cradle or in her arms, it will be found after a few days how quickly the child likes to go to asleep alone, without the affliction of popular remedies of mothers. Many mothers will not believe this true until they have tried it and learned from experience. Although the child may cry at first, it soon learns to go to sleep quietly, and the mother has the additional advantage of gaining valuable time for rest from her domestic duties. Why does a health baby need rocking more than a bird, a colt, or a calf?

Mr. Frank Baxter lectures for the Spiritual Society at Ashland Hall, on Sunday next, at 2.30 and 7.30. This will probably be the last and only time Mr. Baxter will speak in Peabody this seasen. All should improve this opportunity of hearing his vocal and oratorical abilities.

Coming.

"Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh."—Matt. xxiv : 44.

He will come, perhaps, at morning,
When to simply live is sweet;
When the arm is strong, unwearied
By the noonday toil and heat;
When the undimmed eye looks tearless
Up the shining heights of life.
And the eager soul is panting,
Yearning for some noble strife.

He will come, perhaps, at noontide,
When the pulse of life throbs high,
When the fruits of toil are ripening
And the harvest time is nigh;
Then through all the full-orbed splendor
Of the sun's meridian blaze
There may shine the strange, new beauty
Of the Lord's transfigured face.

Or it may be in the evening,—
Gray and sombre in the sky,
Clouds around the sunset gather,
Far and dark the shadows lie.
When we long for rest and slumber
And some tender thoughts of home
Fill the heart with vague, sad yearning,
Then, perhaps, the Lord will come.

If He only finds us ready
In the morning's happy light,
In the strong and fiery noontide,
Or the coming of the night,—
If He only finds us waiting,
Listening for His sudden call,
Then His coming when we think not
Is the sweetest hope of all.

The Pretty Waiter Girl.

It is the pretty waiter girl!
She's one among a score;
And 'tis not that I love them less,
But, oh! I love her more!
Down to the festive board I sit—
She stands behind my chair;
I catch the slight suggestive cough
That tells me she is there.

My pretty, pretty waiter girl!
She hath a pleasant voice;
Of chops and steaks, of fish and fowl,
She biddeth me make choice.
I ponder on my little joke
While fingering the menu;
Then, "if I were to order duck,
I might perhaps get you,"

Her eyes are on the table cloth—
Their glance it is severe.
"Or, should I call for venison,
'Twere you again, my dear."
She wears the lofty look of one
Who searcheth the top shelf:
"Pray do not ask for goose," says she,
"For you might get—yourself!"

Selected Story.

CUPID'S BLINDERS.

It was a dull day, and I was musing about Kittie Elton, and wondering how long it would be before I should be able to marry her.

She was sweet and patient, but I knew it was a hard life for her in that over-crowded work-room, month after month, and I longed to set her free. She was a pretty, blue-eyed girl of twenty, with a dimple in her chin, and the sweetest roses on her cheek that ever inspired the pen of a poet, and it was of them I was thinking when the door opened and Mr. Clenner came in.

He was our "chief," a dark, silent little man, with square stern mouth and clouded gray eyes, which seemed almost expressionless when they were turned full upon you, and yet seemed to see everything at a glance. He sat down beside me.

"Meredith," he said in a quiet, subdued tone that was natural to him, "didn't you say you were getting tired of doing nothing.?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I now have something for you to do."

"What is it, sir?"

"Something that will bring you both credit and friends, if you manage it skilfully. I had intended to go myself, but circumstances happen untowardly, and I shall send you instead."

Bending towards me and speaking above a whisper, he told me there had been a series of forgeries committed, with a boldness that set the authorities at defiance. For some time he had been in doubt. but after much investigation he had detected the hidden spring, one Perley Matteson, who had skillfully eluded all pursuit, and was now hiding somewhere in the north-eastern portion of the state. His haunts had been found as near as possible, and it was for me to go quietly up and apprehend him before he should be aware of our knowledge of his movements.

The reward offered was high. My heart leaped as I reflected how much nearer it would bring me to Kitty Elton, nor did the enterprise seem difficult.

"Do you think you can do it," Mr. Clenner asked, after the whole thing had been laid before me.

"Yes, sir; when shall I start?"

"Now—within half an hour."

"So soon?"

"Yes; why not?"

"Just as you decide, Mr. Clenner, of course," I said, rising, "If I take the four o'clock express, I shall be there by daylight to-morrow."

"Yes, and that is the best plan. He will not remain long in any place just at present, and what you do must be done at once."

All through that long night-journey I mused upon the task before me. The house to which I was directed was in the midst of woods, about half a mile beyond the village of Drownville, the residence of Mrs. Matteson, the mother of the audacious forger. If help was needed I was fully authorized to call upon the authorities of Drownville, but I expected to need none.

The rosy dawn was just flushing the eastern sky when I alighted, stiff and weary, from the train, at the little station of Drownville.

"Can you direct me to Mrs. Matteson's place," I asked of the sleepy station master.

"Matteson—Mrs. Matteson; I don't know her, but just you follow the main street of the village out about half a mile and ye'll come to a patch o' woods with bars at the fence. Go through the bars at a little way further on, and ye'll see a little yaller house, just the last place in the world where you'd expect to see a house. That's where Mrs. Matteson lives."

I thanked my informant, and set out on a brisk walk.

It was quite a distance ere I emerged from the suburbs of the "main street," into a quiet and secluded road, or rather lane. The "patch o' woods" with the bars and the "little yaller house"—a cream-colored cottage, literally overgrown with honey-suckles—rewarded my search, and as I knocked at the door, a clock somewhere struck seven.

A decent-looking elderly woman in widow's weeds came to the door.

"Is Mr. Matteson in; Mr. Perley?"

"No," she answered quickly, with rather a confused look. I did not believe her, and asked quietly;—

"When do you expect him home?"

"Not at present."

Apparently she expected me to go away, but, instead, I stepped in."

"Mother," asked a soft voice at the head of the stairs, "who is it?"

And then for the first time I became aware that some one had been watching our colloquy from the head of the stairs—a young girl, dressed like the mother, in deep black, with very brilliant eyes and a profusion of jet-black ringlets.

"Some one to see your brother."

She came half-way down the stairs, pushing back her curls with one hand, and looking at me with wonderful eyes. Even then her beauty struck me, as I stood gazing at her.

"Perley is not at home," she said hurriedly. "He has gone away. We do not know when he will return."

Evidently this mother and daughter were in the secret of Matteson's villainy and doing their best to screen him from its consequences. My heart bled for both of them; but it was no time to indulge in sentimental pity. Speaking as briefly as I could, I told them it was my duty to compel them to remain where they were while I searched the hause.

Mrs. Matteson sat down, pale and trembling; her daughter colored high.

"Mother," she said, "why do you stand by and listen to such slanders? It is false! Let this man search the house if he will; my brother is as innocent as I am!"

No opposition was offered to my search. It was entirely fruitless however—there was nowhere any trace of the flown bird. Nevertheless, I concluded to remain there quietly for a day or two, to see what a little waiting might bring forth.

The same afternoon Clara Matteson came in as I sat by the piazza window, keeping a silent watch on all the surroundings, and she said softly, "Mother thinks I have been rude to you. She says it was not your fault personally, that you were sent here—on such a mistake, and perhaps she is right. I am sorry if I have hurt your feelings."

The pretty, penitent way in which she spoke quite won my heart, and a few questions on my part seemed to unlock the hidden recesses of her confidence. She talked at first shyly, but afterwards with more assurance of herself, her absent brother and her mother, giving me a thousand little family details, which I almost dreaded to hear. The twilight walk was one of the pleasantest episodes of my by no means universally pleasant life, and I was considerably annoyed when it was broken in upon by the arrival of the Drownville constables who were to watch through the night. At the sound of their footsteps on the piazza floor, Clara rose up and sat down again, confused and frightened.

"Oh, Mr. Meredith, those men"——

"Be easy, Miss Matteson," I said; "you shall in no way be annoyed by them. Your privacy shall not be broken in upon."

My orders to the men were brief and succinct. I stationed the men as seemed best to me, and then returned to spend the evening with Miss Matteson. And when I was at length left alone I could not help thinking—God forgive me—how much more winning and graceful she was than poor Kitty Elton.

At length an answer came to my report to Mr. Clenner— it was short and to the purpose.

"Come back. You are only losing time. The bird has flown, and we must look elsewhere for him."

I read the missive with a pang. Clara Matteson's cheek deepened in color as I announced my departure to her.

"You have been far kinder than we dared to hope, Mr. Meredith," she said as I held her hand in mine.

"You will think of me sometimes, Clara?"

The reader will readily perceive how our intimacy had progressed. She smiled, hung her head, and taking a pair of scissors from the table, severed one bright, black curl from the abundant tresses that hung over tne forehead.

"Keep this, Mr. Meredith, in memory of me."

Was I foolish to press the jetty ringlet to my lips, as I laid it closely against my heart? Clara evidently thought I was for she laughed, but did not seem displeased.

Mr. Clenner seemed annoyed when I got back to the Bureau—rather an unreasonable proceeding on his part, for I certainly did all that man could do under the circumstances.

"We have been mistaken all the way through, it seems," he said, biting his lip. "Strange—very strange—I was never mistaken before in my calculations. Well, we must try again."

I went to Kitty Elton's that night. She received me with a sweet, shy sadness of welcome that should have made me the happiest man in the world; but it did not. Clara Matteson's dark beauty seemed to stand between me and her like a visible barrier. When I took my leave there were tears in her eyes.

"Kitty, you are crying!"

"Because you are changed. Edward, you do not love me as well as you did."

"Kitty, what nonsense!"

I was vexed because I knew her accusation was true, and I took my leave, moody and dissatisfied.

When I reached the office next morning, Mr. Clenner was not there.

"He has gone to Drownville," said my fellow-detective; "he went up last night."

"To Drownville?"

I was annoyed. Did Mr. Clenner distrust my reports. or did he imagine that I was unable to institute a thorough and complete investigation of the premises.

"It's very strange," I mused aloud.

Jones laughed.

"Well," he said, "you know Clenner has a way of doing things strange. Depend upon it, he has good reason for his conduct."

I was sitting at my desk two days subsequently, when the door glided noiselessly, open and Clenner himself entered.

"You are back again, sir, and what luck?"

"The best."

"You don't mean to say you've got him?"

"I do mean to say it. Edward Meredith, I knew I could not be entirely mistaken. Perley Matteson is in the next room—half an hour from now he will be in prison."

"Where did you apprehend him?"

"At home in his mother's house."

"But"——

"He was there all the time you remained there. Ned, my boy, you've made a blunder for once, but don't let it happen again."

"What do you mean, sir?"

For reply he opened the door of the private inner apartment. A slight, boyish figure leaned against the window smoking a cigarette, with black curls tossed back from a marble white brow, and brilliant eyes. He mockingly inclined his head as I stared at him, with a motion not unfamiliar to me.

"Clara Matteson!"

"Clara Matteson or Perley Matteson, or whatever you choose to call me. Many thanks for your politeness, Detective Meredith; and if you would like another lock of hair"——

I turned away, burning scarlet, while Mr. Clenner closed the door.

"Never mind, my boy, it will be a lesson to you," he said, laughing. "He made a very pretty girl, but I am not at all susceptible."

What a double-dyed fool I had been! I had lost the reward—failed in the estimation of my fellow-officers—and behaved like a brute to poor Kitty—and all for what?

I went to Kitty and told her the whole story, and to my surprise the dear faithful little creature loved me just as well as ever.

"I won't be jealous of Perley Matteson, Edward," she said smiling, "whatever I might be of his sister. And, dearest, don't be discouraged. I'll wait as long as you please, and you'll be a second Mr. Clenner yet."

She was determined to look on the bright side of things, this little Kitty of mine! But I felt the mortification none the less keenly, although, as Mr. Clenner said, it would undoubtedly prove a good lesson to me.

Perley Matteson's girlish beauty is eclipsed in the state prison—nor do I pity him. The stake for which he played was high—and he lost!

Miscellaneous.

Civilization of the World.

Some one has said, that the chief influences which are now at work in promoting the world's civilization, are European. That may be questioned by some, but every one must admit, we think, that they are powerful. Those influences may be, and indeed have been, thus divided by able authors—the Germanic, the Romanic, or the Teutonic and the Slavonic. The most powerful of these is the first-named, the Germanic, as may be clearly seen in the character and habits of the Germans.—There is made obvious to the close observer a lack of nationality among the people. Their love of foreign lands, as well as for their own country as made manifest, is strong. This peculiarity is owing partly to certain circumstances, and partly to an inherent tendency of the German mind. They seem to live in the past, rather than in the future, and to believe that the present is only the production of the past. They love truth more in the abstract that in the concrete, and endeavor to comprehend the system of universal truth. The most of them understand many languages, study the history of other countries more than their own, and the literature of almost all other nations, as may be clearly seen in their writings. They are well acquainted with almost every author of any note, either in England or the United States. The social and domestic habits of the Germans are quite interesting. The daughters, whether of the "noble or the ignoble blood," are obliged to attend school in order to qualify themselves for the practical duties of life. From what we have read and heard, we infer that a knowledge of culinary art skill in darning stockings, neatness and dispatch in mending pantaloons, lighting up the fires of genius at the shrine of the wash-tub, strengthening the sinews and muscles of the arm over the ironing-board, are all considered of more importance among the Germans, than becoming great adepts in the art of thumbing a piano, the modern thunder-drum, although such music has its proper place in the system of education. In the common-schools in Germany children are not allowed to begin to study books till they are seven years old, parents believing that Nature is the best instructor during the first five years of childhood, and that it is better to develop and mature the physical system first and then the intellectual—a theory well sanctioned by good common-sense, and confirmed by experience. Both Byron and Walter Scott, if we mistake not, spent much of their time in early youth in out-door exercises, roaming the fields and climbing the hills on foot before their mental powers were subjected to long and heavy taxation. And was it not true, also, of Sir Isaac Newton?

Receiving a religious education, the girls of Germany are catechised till they are five years old, and not allowed to be called Miss till after their confirmation, which takes place in their sixteenth year. The object of the Germans seems to be to make girlhood last as long as possible, quite different from the practice here in America. Here, this period of life is more and more curtailed by each generation; and should its present course be continued, it would not be at all surprising if some of our aged folks ere long had to behold "infant sages and venerable sucklings," wearing lace caps, gold spectacles, bustles, wrinkled boots, knee-buckles and long braided queues.

In regard to mechanics in Germany, apprentices are obliged to serve four years and then travel three more to some distant land. Each branch sets the number that shall be employed to carry on a particular trade in any one place.

Druggists are obliged to travel round ten years before they can start their business; and those engaged in mercantile pursuits do not, (like a certain class of individuals among us), carry on business with a rush and a whirl, till, with a failure, they are compelled to stop, but are contented to advance slowly, but surely, to a competence, regarding the cultivation of the moral and social feelings of more importance than the possession of the "almighty dollar."

Even the amusements and recreations of the Germans have special reference to their physical and moral natures; and in view of the whole history of that country, its training, education, etc., we are convinced that notwithstanding the opposite opinion of one celebrated author, "something original besides original sin" might be imported from them.

We have never visited Germany, nor do we ever expect health and strength enough to go there, but should rejoice under favorable circumstances to travel there, or reside for a season.

We have heard some things about the Germans that are rather amusing as well as provoking. One of the professors at Andover, some years ago, (so we heard it), having broken down his eyes with over-taxation, went to Germany to consult with one of the celebrated oculists, as to what would restore them to their usual vigor. Calling upon one who seemed to stand high in the estimation of many, he was told to come the next morning at sunrise and his eyes would be examined. He called, and after what seemed a close examination, he was told to call again the next day when the sun was at its meridian height—at noon. He did so, and his eyes were again seemingly closely examined. Then he was told to come again the next day at sunset. He went just as the sun was sinking below the horizon in the west, and his eyes underwent a third scrutinizing; and he was told, as the serious result, that he must bathe his eyes every morning in cold water, which would be a perfect cure. The patient retired, and after practicing that for a considerable length of time, found that it amounted to just nothing; his eyes were not better.—Feeling somewhat indignant, he went to another celebrated optician in the same place and consulted him. He was there told, after going through the same long process of examination, to bathe his eyes in warm water every morning, and perfect strength would be restored to his visual organs. He did this but met with the same result as before—eyes as weak as ever. The professor came back to Andover with his mind made up, that some doctors were like artificial cisterns that will, in time, dry up and crack for dryness. "The voice may be Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau." Thomas Aquinas held, we believe, that no other substance would rise from the dead but that which existed at the moment of death. But whether that be true or not, one thing is certain, viz., that nothing will arise out of the mind while a man lives, but that which is in it. The efforts of some doctors bear not a faint resemblance to those of the man who planted feathers to raise chickens: they pass through public opinion as meteors through the air, or comets through the heavens, leaving no marks behind him. You'll rumple all my ruffles.
He—Then let me kiss you without force,
And thus avoid all scuffles.
She—There is no sweetness in a kiss
Unless by force 'tis taken.
He—I know it. There! Oh, this is bliss!
This style of osculation.
She—My ruffles you have rumpled, love,
And put me in a fluster.

INVESTIGATIONS recently made of ocean temperatures show that the waters of the North Pacific is, in its whole mass, colder than that of the North Atlantic, and that the water of the South Pacific is, down to 4,225 feet, somewhat warmer than that of the Atlantic, but below that depth colder. Again, the bottom temperatures are generally lower in the Pacific than in the Atlantic, at the same depths and in the same degree of latitude; but nowhere in the Pacific are found such low bottom temperatures as in the antarctic portion of the South Atlantic, between thirty-six and thirty-eight degrees south and forty-eight and thirty-three degrees west longitude. In the western parts of the Pacific, and the adjoining parts of the East Indian Archipelago, the temperature of the water reaches its minimum at depths between about 1,800 and 9,000 feet, remaining the same from this depth to the bottom.

PROFESSOR JENKINS, an eminent English astronomer, has endeavored to show a very remarkable effect of the planet Venus upon the earth. The present astronomer-royal of England proved, many years ago, that the disturbing effect of this planet was really so great that the earth was materially pulled from its orbit. According to Professor Jenkins, it is to this action that an explanation must be looked for, in accounting for the cold waves which have occurred, on an average, every eight years during the last half century, and in this connection the prediction is ventured by Prof. J. that for the next forty years the temperature will be below the average. He also states, as others have before him, that a heat wave has been observed to pass over the earth every twelve years, nearly contemporary with the arrival of the planet Jupiter at its perihelion.

THE construction of a maritime canal along the Seine, between Havre and Tancerville, is now engaging the attention of French engineers. This great artificial watercourse will begin at the extremity of the basins of Havre, and will follow, without leaving, the right bank of the Seine till it reaches a point which is called the Nars, or the Cape of Tancerville. It is to be twenty-five kilometres long, twenty-five metres broad at the bottom, and three m. fifty draught of water, this latter being some fifty centimetres greater than exists in the Seine between Paris and Rouen. One of the desirable points is that from Harfleur to Havre the canal can be accessible to brigs, schooners and coal-bearing steamers coming from Cardiff or Swansea, Sunderland or Newcastle—this requiring that the draught be carried to four m. fifty.

THE decay of the wood of ships in these parts of the structure adjoining iron nails and bolts, while no such decay is usual where wooden or copper bolts are employed, is a fact of familiar occurrence. For the purpose of ascertaining the true solution of such a phenomenon, various experiments have been made, among which are those on the action of sesqui-oxide of iron on different vegetable products. The results of these researches, as made by French chemists, appear to prove that the sesqui-oxide brings the oxygen of the atmosphere into contact with the organic matter of the wood, and thus its destruction is hastened. The oxide becomes, in some degree, a kind of reservoir of oxygen, filling itself at the expense of the air, and emptying itself to support the combustion of combustible bodies.

A NEW submarine cable, manufactured in Switzerland, has a single conductor, composed of seven copper wires, and the insulating envelope presents the notable peculiarity of being composed of cotton boiled in paraffine, and colophany—resin. The copper conductor is surrounded by three layers of cotton, and as soon as the weaving of the cotton covering is finished, the wire is immersed for an hour in a bath of paraffine, at a temperature of 180 degrees C. By this means, it is stated, all moisture is expelled from the cotton, which then absorbs the melted paraffine. The cable is finally passed through a powerful press, which covers it with a leaden tube, the interstices which present themselves between the cable and the tube being hermetically filled with the resin.

IT appears, from various experiments with the oil lubricants now in use, that a mineral oil which flashes at less than three hundred degrees Fahr. does not possess the best qualities for lubrication, and it is unsafe in proportion to the lesser degree at which it flashes. Again, a mineral oil evaporating more than five per cent. in ten hours, at a heat of one hundred and forty degrees Fahr., is found to be hazardous in proportion to the increased percentage of volatile matter, and is also more unfit to be used as a lubricant the more rapidly it evaporates—because the remainder will either become thick and viscous, requiring a high heat in the bearing to make it operate at all, or, if the oil does not contain such a residuum liable to become thick and heavy, it will leave the bearing dry.

The small value of birch wood for fuel, and its lack of toughness and strength, except in the smaller twigs, have led to its general neglect in the arts. Our more enterprising builders of railway cars, however, have discovered that its light weight, close grain, and rich grain made it admirably suited for certain applications where fine finish and bright effects are desired. The contrast presented when white birch and light colored ash are relieved by the red of the cherry birch, are said to be peculiar, but very pleasing.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

WOMAN'S TRIUMPH.

A SEVERE SURGICAL OPERATION. IT IS ENDURED WITHOUT TAKING ETHER. SUBJECT, MRS. EDWARD MYERS, OF RONDOUT, N. Y.

(From the Cor. of the Kingston, N. Y. Freeman.)

The case of Mrs. Edward Myers, of Rondout, New York, furnishes an apt illustration of woman's power of endurance. This lady had been treated for months in the usual way for Erysipelas of the hand, without benefit. Not until her hand had become a mass of putrified flesh, did she turn to Dr. Kennedy, proprietor of the "Favorite Remedy," for help. He at once informed her that it was impossible to save the hand—it must be amputated. She received this terrible intelligence quietly, declined to take ether, stipulating merely to hold her husband's hand during the operation, and underwent the painful process without moving a muscle or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy then gave "Favorite Remedy" freely to cleanse the blood and prevent the return of the disease, and Mrs. Myers now lives and rejoices in her great deliverence.

"Favorite Remedy" is fast becoming a trusted household friend in all cases of Female Weaknesses and diseases of the blood. One dollar a battle. Your druggist has it.

The Liquor Question.

We published last week an address by the Citizens' Temperance Committee to the people of this town, giving an account of their proceeding thus far in the enforcement of the statute against those who were selling liquor in violation of the law. It was brought to us but a few hours before our paper went to press, and we had neither the time nor space to devote to such a consideration of it as would be warranted by a careful perusal of the report. Our neighbor, however, accuses us of "hedging" and dodging the issue, because, forsooth, we did not occupy a half column or so in the re-statement of our views.

Our position on the temperance question has been given several times to our readers. We are in favor of the strict enforcement of the law against the unlicensed liquor dealers of this town: believing that the just and impartial enforcement of this, as of any law, will best show the results, whether good or ill, of such a statute. Early in the season, a citizens' meeting, composed of all parties, Protestants and Catholics, held a meeting in the vestry of the Congregational Church. This meeting was largely attended, and a Committee appointed, after the matter had been thoroughly ventilated, to take such action as they thought advisable to restrict the liquor traffic in the town. It is fair to say that this Committee had a right to feel that they represented, not a small class, but the large body of our tax payers and best citizens of Peabody. They waited upon the Selectmen, and after the latter body had fully decided upon their course in regard to the number of licenses they would grant, proceeded to act in concert with them in enforcing the law. As to what they have done, we refer our readers to their address. We can, however, say that they have taken no action, nor prosecuted any dealers, without consultation with the Selectmen, and by their authority and advice, and the attempt of a correspondent of our neighbor (representing the views of that sheet, we presume,) to make it appear that their action was taken as private citizens, is feeble in the extreme, and entirely false. And even if they had not such advice and authority, the statement that any private citizen has not the right, even to a duty, of making a complaint against, and prosecuting, violators of law, is weaker still.

We do not agree with our neighbor that the main issue in choosing a representative to the Legislature this year is to be the liquor question. We do not imagine that body will materially change the law as at present on the statutes, and as it rests with the Selectmen to say whether the town shall grant licenses or not, we do not think it will change the aspect of the question whether our future representative is in favor of license or prohibition. That matter can be settled here, and if our neighbor wants more liquor than he can get now, he should use his influence in securing Selectmen who will open all the shops. We feel grateful to our neighbor for his advice as to an early nomination. The Republicans of this town will see to it, in ample season, that the right man shall be nominated to represent them in the Legislature, and proceed to elect him.

While the large cities of the country are welcoming with their plaudits vocalists, actors and platform orators from Europe, it is pleasing to note that some of our distinguished artists are acquiring an equal reputation abroad. Two of our prominent vocalists, one known more especially in New York and the other in Boston, have met with continued and enthusiastic ovations in England and Norway. Miss Henrietta Beebe will be remembered by those of our readers who had the pleasure, many years ago, of attending some of the Concerts in Boston Music Hall, of the then celebrated New York Glee Club, and listening to the exceptional rendering of English madrigals and glees.—Miss Emma Thursby has been for a long time a favorite in this vicinity, and the success of these two artists will compare favorably with the most enthusiastic receptions given by our own people to singers from the old world. We have only space to give a few lines referring to each of them. Miss Beebe left New York last Spring, and has sung in concerts in St. James' Hall, Royal Albert Hall, and the Crystal Palace, in London, and also very much in private, at the special request of Mrs. Gladstone. She has so many engagements before her that she will pass the winter abroad. The London Musical World thus speaks:

"Miss Beebe has a talent that needs no support but its intrinsic worth; a talent that commands approbation from all. In Bishop's 'Tell me, my heart' she at once secured the good will of her audience and an unanimous encore.—Every year a true reciprocity in all matters of art is becoming more and more firmly established between England and America. British artists of all kinds go to the States, and, if worthy, are made welcome; and such a pleasant lady and such an admirable artist as Miss Beebe, will be always received here with warm respect and lasting favor."

The following extract is from a letter received by Mr. Daniel Taylor, of Brooklyn, from Miss Ina Thursby, giving an account of her sister's success:

"When we left the hotel it was all most impossible for Emma to get into the carriage on account of the immense throng surrounding it, and when we arrived at the hall it was worse still. The hall holds 1500, and the ticket seller says that within two hours after opening the sale not a seat could be had. Many travellers—Americans—came to Mr. Strakosch and begged him to try and get them inside the house some way. After the concert they were obliged to have the police stationed at the hall to protect her in reaching her carriage and the hotel. But after the carriage started you never saw anything like the enthusiasm. The people screamed and ran with the carriage all the way to the hotel. They even tried to take the horses out of the carriage, but the coachman was too quick for them.

WE SEE NO occasion for the delay of the dedication of our Soldier's Monument until the Spring. It is now fully completed, is a credit to the town, and should be regarded with pride by them. By a little hasty action, no dedication has yet been arranged for. Both parties were undoubtedly sincere in the steps they took, but we think they are conscious of creating some little feeling, which they regret. This is no fault of the citizens generally, and is it not their duty to use all reasonable measures that some formal dedication be held? We feel positive that our people generally will not be satisfied to see it turned over to the town officials without appropriate ceremony. The time for such proceeding is now. The weather for several weeks will undoubtedly be favorable, and no splendid display is necessary. We are of the opinion that the Selectmen would be sustained promptly in making a reasonable appropriation and it would be a small matter, if there was any doubt of it, to call a meeting of those in favor of such dedication and take proper action. In the spring, other things may attract the attention of our citizens, and the Monument be an old story. The Grand Army can of course be relied upon, to render assistance with their comrades from other towns, and we hope some speedy action will be taken.

The advertisement of the Naumkeag Clothing Co., will command the immediate attention of our readers. They are the largest and most enterprising clothiers of Salem, and their connection with one of the largest establishments in Boston enables them to show a line of goods which cannot be surpassed in the State. Call and see them.

OUR lady readers will not forget that William R. Weeks has a large and elegant line of Ladies' and Children's Cloaks and Suits, to which especial attention is directed. He also has all the novelties in foreign and American Dress Goods, with the prices and quality of which he challenges comparison. Read his advertisement on 2d page.

At the fifty-fourth annual session of the Salem Baptist Association held at the First Church in Lynn, last Wednesday and Thursday, Rev. L. L. Wood of Peabody, was elected assistant clerk. In the evening Rev. Chas. V. Hanson of Damariscotta, Me., addressed the meeting.

Lamp posts are getting numerous on the Square. A new one has been placed in front of Southwick's fish-market.

Several runaway accidents and collisions have been reported during the week, all of them of minor importance.

We have seen better streets than those of Peabody at present. The water-works are to blame for their condition.

Mr. H. M. Schollar has returned from Meriden, Conn., where he has been spending a few weeks, much improved in health.

Dr. F. S. Worcester's horse, that has seen service for thirty-four years, was killed last Monday, on account of being sick.

Mrs. Jas. Rodie stepped on a cat nap was thrown down the basement stairs at her residence recently, but escaped serious injury.

The alarm of fire last night about 6.20, was caused by a fire at Gannon Bros.' shoe shop on Phelps Court, leading from Boston street.

A gentleman who represents Spaulding's bell-ringers was in town Friday, and says he would like to give an entertainment here if we had a suitable hall.

The W. C. T. U. will hold an Apron Sale at their room over Mr. A. L. Whidden's store, on Tuesday afternoon and evening, Oct. 25. Admission 10 cents.

At the leather factory of Brown & Stanley, the employes go to work at six o'clock in the morning and quit at five at night, thus obviating the necessity of lighting up at night.

A boy on Shillaber street was out in the yard last Monday splitting wood, and in raising the ax it struck against a clothes-line and came down on his head cutting a severe gash in his skull.

An exchange speaks of a new fashion in gait for girls, but a stroll along some of our streets last Sunday would have convinced any one that the old gate has a tenacious grip on the public favor.

Our neighbor thinks there will not be much interest in State politics this fall, because the attendance at the Greenback rally was small. This town is no exception in this respect. The party is already dead.

It is rumored that a prominent Republican who has heretofore been unwilling that his name should be used in this connection, will be placed in nomination for Representive to the General Court from this town.

Miss Mira A. Larrabee entertained a number of her friends at her residence on Lynnfield street, last Wednesday evening. During the evening Miss Larrabee was presented with a gold ring and a box of handkerchiefs.

We have been presented by Messrs. Schollar & Donnell with some sheet music. This music is the same in every respect as that which has hitherto been sold at from thirty to seventy-five cents a copy. They are selling it at five cents each.

Next Sunday, Rev. L. L. Wood, of the Baptist Church, will preach a sermon in the morning, should the weather be pleasant, to the elderly people. In the evening he will take for his subject, "Jehu, or the fast young men of the Bible." The public are invited.

Mr. Frank Stone, who has recently entered the matrimonial state, entertained a party of friends last Thursday evening, to the number of one hundred. They brought with them numerous useful and ornamental presents, which were presented to the host and hostess during the evening.

MESSRS. ALMY, BIGELOW & WEBBER, of Salem, have now open a full and complete line of fall goods, and a visit to their immense establishment at this time is replete with interest. The goods which are shown this fall in the line of dress goods are of very beautiful designs, while the colors in the plain goods are of the more sombre hues of browns, ink blues, the different shades of green, with the varied tints, and are relieved by the trimmings of large irridescent plaids which give to the whole a most elaborate, gay and finished appearance. This firm makes a very choice display of their dress goods of all prices, and all styles, suited to the tastes and means of all classes. Their store presents a very metropolitan appearance, on these pleasant afternoons, and their well selected stock of all lines of goods gives our readers an opportunity which can be found only in the largest cities of the country. We were shown upstairs into the large and well lighted cloak and suit department, where are the newest and choicest styles made by the best and leading manufacturers of the country, as well as many imported garments. This firm has in stock over one hundred different styles in ladies' cloaks and suits, from the plain cashmere suits, trimmed with the varying contrasts of plaids and stripes, to the more elaborate silk and satin suits, trimmed with plush and fur, and the most expensive ornaments. Many of the cloaks are black, but some of the newest and most desirable styles are in the lighter colors, trimmed with plush of the same color, or oftener with a darker contrast. They are made in the style of ulsters, ulsterettes, dolmans and sacques. We noticed a very beautiful suit, the skirt being irridescent plaid, no especial color being predominant, all blending into a harmonious shade of green, with an elegant bottle-green overdress of silk velvet. There was also a fine brocade velvet, with satin pleating to match, also a navy blue and garnet, made after a similar design. Black silk suits are also a prominent feature, one with very elaborate plush trimming and valued at $65.00, being especially beautiful. A very choice line of children's suits is also displayed, this being at the present time a very important branch of the suit business. They have ten distinct lines of children's goods, in sizes varying from two to sixteen years, and are made principally by the finest manufacturers in New York, and many of them of the neatest designs, being trimmed with folds and stripes of old gold, garnet, and prevailing colors, interspersed with plush to match. There are also many outside garments mostly of light colors, and all of the best work in the country, and warranted to fit.

In the rear of the same room is the Millinery department and workroom, in which a rich display is made. The pattern hats and bonnets are all made in the establishment, and we noticed particularly the prevalence of large hats—larger than ever, it would seem—and most of them of plush or fur. The prevailing colors are pheasant brown, bottle-green, and cardinal, to match the suits and dress goods to be worn this fall. No flowers to speak of are being worn, and the trimmings are made of feathers, shaded, tinted, and of all colors. Some of the real French hats are made with feathers woven into the hat itself around the edge, presenting a very showy appearance. A very large line of mourning hats and bonnets were shown, in black silk and crape, and we think they excel in this particular branch of the business.

Space will not allow us to make a more extended description of the novelties to be found in this establishment. Suffice it to say, that their Carpet and Upholstery rooms are filled with the newest and choicest products, the Brussels carpets being kept in a new room upstairs, which is in connection with the upholstery room. Here, also, they have a large line of antique curtains, bought at a great sacrifice, which they are selling at very low prices. Not the least among the attractions is the uniform courtesy shown by the gentlemanly firm and their clerks, making a visit there a pleasure.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

SOFT AND STIFF HATS.

Gentlemen about to purchase Fall and Winter Goods, will find it for their advantage to examine our assortment and prices. Our stock of Stiff Hats is the best in the State, embracing all the leading and popular styles, a great many of which are of our own design, and made expressly to satisfy those of our customers who desire an article of superior quality, elegant style and finish.

Our style of Young Men's Soft Hats is superior to anything ever before shown on our counters. These hats are in all grades from the cheapest to the best, and the styles of cheap hats are equal to those of better quality. The medium and fine grade soft hats have silk bands and bindings, giving them a richer appearance. They are durable and fast colors; they come in Black, Seal Brown, Olive Green, Rifle Green and Nutrias, and is undoubtedly the best line of fine hats ever offered.

Children's Hats in great variety. Boys' School Hats, .50, .75, $1.

Cadet Caps, .15, .25, .35, .50, .65, .75, $1.

Our goods come direct from the leading manufacturers and jobbers of New England, enabling us to show you goods at a great discount from regular Hatters' prices. 25 per cent. saved on every article that you purchase at the Shawmut.

Men's Furnishing Department.

A dollar saved is as good as a dollar earned, and you can save your dollars by buying fall and winter furnishing goods of us. We offer

A Good Heavy Clouded Merino for 50 cts. Also a Good White for 50 cts.

These goods are winter weight, good color, well-finished and are usually sold for 75 cts.

1 Lot very dark mixed Shirts and Drawers, which we are now selling for 75 cts.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The whole of the Greenback about 100 in number, assembled Town. Hall, last Wednesday ev to listen to remarks by their can for Governor, Mr. I. W. Andre Danvers, and Mr. Chas. H. Lit of Marblehead. Mr. Jas. H. T was chairman of the meeting. M drews spoke for about an hour, an cussed the Greenback theory to his satisfaction, but advanced no new i Mr. Litchman, in his remarks, said currency of the nation should be trolled and its volume regulated by government and not by National Ba He arraigned both the Republican Democratic parties, and thought th the Republican party had remain it was when founded things would been different, that the people do see fit to trust the somewhat unce statesmen of the Democratic party the task they had been so anxi assume. He further said the "I cratic party was too cowardly to for principle." He called attentio the platform of the Greenback p and offered to occupy the platform of the time and discuss it with a r sentative of either of the other parties. The meeting was quite harmonious and very little enthusiasm was manifested. The meeting closed about ten o'clock, with cheers for the speakers.

Holten Lodge, 104, I. O. O. F., are perfecting arrangements for a course of entertainments in Peabody Institute. The course as planned by the committee is about as follows: On Thanksgiving evening the entertainments will commence, probably, with the play, "The Octoroon," by a first-class dramatic company; a matinee will be given in the afternoon. The second will be given by the Park Instrumental Quartette, with J. P. Cobb humorist. The third will be by Adelaide De Mont and her superb concert company, including Mr. Frank G. Reynolds humorist, Mr. J. A. Hill violinist, Prof. Geo. Eichorn Zither soloist, the whole to conclude with the musical eccentricity, "Æsthetics." The fourth will be by the Ruggles street Church Quartette, with James Savage reader, and Wm. H. Richards impersonator. The fifth and concluding entertainment will be given by the Evelyn Lyceum Company in a musical and dramatic entertainment.

So extensive has become the practice of boring and punching holes in silver coins, and otherwise mutilating them, that a movement is in progress to deprive such pieces of all value as money by making them uncurrent in business transactions. In New York the horse car and elevated railroad lines refuse to accept any but perfect coins, and a disposition is manifested among dealers in merchandise to adopt a like rule. A general refusal to accept them by the public at any price except as bullion is the only effective way to prevent their circulation.

Mr. F. A. Bragdon proposes soon to open, in the store of Mr. Nathaniel Symonds, a first-class bread and cake store, to be run in connection with his bakery. This is what has long been needed—a central and convenient place to purchase such articles. Mr. Bragdon will put in a nicer assortment of cakes, crackers and pastry than he has ever shown, the store will be neatly fitted up, and we feel certain he will meet with the patronage he justly deserves.

Considerable interest was taken in the trot at Danvers Riding Park last Thursday, and a large number of private teams from this town went up.—The race was between H. F. Hawkes' "Knox Boy," and W. W. Phillips' "Dispatch," for a purse of $500, best 3 in 5, according to the National Association rules. Hiram Smith drove Knox Boy and Jim Golden Dispatch. The race was in mile heats. First heat was won by Knox Boy in 2:33 1-2. Dispatch won next three heats in 2:33 1-2, 2:36, 2:35.

As will be seen by advertisement, the original Bohemian Glass Blowers will have an exhibition in Upton's Hall, every evening next week, also Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. They have not been in town for twelve years, and our readers will not fail to see them. The price of admission will be only fifteen cents, and all the elegant ornaments manufactured by them will be given free to the audience.

Mrs. Starr C. Hewitt came near being bitten by a large tarantula last Friday at her husband's store. She saw the spider, and thinking it was artificial was about to pick it up when it began to move. It was afterwards captured and measured five inches. It is supposed to have come in some of the fruit.

Winter apples, which promised so abundantly early in the season, are generally worm eaten and of a poor quality.

with friends and s ces. As a pupil she had an ardent desire to acquire knowledge and advance herself in her studies. To her teachers she was obedient and affectionate, always entering into their work with enthusiasm.—The deceased was also a member of several religious societies of St. John's Church, and the young ladies' Sodality contributed a handsome pillar of flowers at her funeral, which took place on Monday morning from St. John's Church, and was attended by a large number of friends of the family. The pupils of the High School and their teachers attended in a body. The young ladies' Sodality, of which the deceased was a member, marched to the grave as a fitting tribute to their departed friend.

Last Wednesday evening, after the remarks of Mr. Andrews, copies of the Essex Statesman were distributed free among the audience, previous to which the chairman said that Mr. Litchman had kindly brought over some back copies of his paper, and that it was the only organ the Greenback party had in this vicinity, etc. This was all right if it hadn't been that the publisher of the Danvers Review—Mr. Cheever—was present at the meeting, and certainly that paper claims to be a Greenback organ. And it was also a little rough on our neighbor, who, we believe, advocates the same cause.

The many friends of Mrs. Frank W. Poor, formerly of this town, will be pained to learn that she died on Wednesday last at her home in Kansas City, Mo. The cause of her death was typhoid fever. Her age was 36 years. Her remains were brought to East Danvers and the funeral took place at the home of her father Mr. James Friend, at that place yesterday, and were largely attended. The services was conducted by Rev. Mr. Dillingham of the Universalist church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Sanger, and the remains were interred at Walnut Grove cemetery, Danvers.

Mr. F. C. Ferguson's card appears in this issue. Mr. F. is prepared to do anything in the line of pattern and model making. Models in wood or metal for the Patent Office are made a specialty. He is located at the corner of Wallis and Walnut streets, in the shop of John E. Clement & Co., although not connected with that firm.

At the prayer meeting in the Cong. Church last Friday evening a portion of the time was spent in discussing the liquor question. The opinion seemed to be unanimous that the committee ought to be sustained in the work they were doing, and that money should be raised to prosecute the cases at a higher court.

The Republican county and councillor conventions were held at Lyceum Hall, Salem, at 10 o'clock last Thursday. The Hon. Alfred A. Abbott of Peabody, was nominated for clerk of courts, Hon. Joseph Dakis, 2d, of Lynn, for councilor from 5th District, and Col. John W. Raymond, of Beverly, for county commissioner.

The Republican town committee met on Saturday evening. Present Messrs. F. Osborn, Jr., H. H. Proctor, Chas. D. Howard, Geo. Randall and Frank E. Farnham. The organization of the committee was completed by the choice of H. H. Proctor, Chairman, and Geo. Randall, Secretary.

Mr. Wm. Donnell of the firm of Schollar & Donnell has leased the boarding house in Mrs. Sutton's Block, Main St., now occupied by Mr. John S. Toby, and will keep a first-class boarding house and endeavor to give all a good square meal who apply.

Anecdotes.

AN EASY DIVORCE.

It is evident, says the Chicago Tribune, that the divorce practice in the Chicago courts requires stricter attention from the judges than has been given it for some time past. The Taylor case shows how easy, informal and reckless the practice of granting divorces has become. One William A. Taylor was able to obtain a divorce from his wife, both living in Chicago, without her knowledge. The husband seems to have no grounds for divorce, and yet was able to procure one so expeditiously and quietly that the first intimation the wife had of the fact was the notice of the marriage of her husband to another woman, she continuing to live with him for months after he had procured the unknown divorce. If there were no other evidence of the baseness of the divorce practice than the bald statement of this one case, there would be sufficient warning of the necessity of reform. In the Taylor case it seems that an appearance was entered for the wife by an attorney named Kinney. The answer was filed and immediately withdrawn, and thereafter the proceedings progressed smoothly and secretly until the decree was granted. Mr. Kinney explains that a man called at his office with written authority for him to appear as Mrs. Taylor's attorney; that he declined to act upon such a document alone, not knowing that the signature was genuine; that the next day a woman appeared who represented herself as Mrs. Taylor, and expressed a desire to have the matter disposed of as quickly and quietly as possible, and that thereupon he accepted the fee, entered an appearance, filed an answer, then immediately withdrew it under instructions, and thus permitted the case to proceed without further obstacle to a fraudulent decree.

THE ARCTIC WINTER.

Lieut. Schwatka, the Arctic explorer, gives some interesting facts in regard to the character and duration of the Arctic winter. He says the generally received opinion that the Arctic winter is a long, dreary one of perfect opaque darkness is not strictly correct. In latitude 83° 20' 20" N., the highest point ever reached by man, there are 4 hours and 42 minutes of twilight on Dec. 22, the shortest day in the year in the Northern Hemisphere. In latitude 82° 27' N., the highest point where white men have wintered, there are 6 hours and 2 minutes in the shortest day, and 328 geographical miles from that point must yet be attained before the true Plutonic zone, or that one in which there is no twilight whatsoever, even upon the shortest day of the year, can be said to have been entered by man. Of course, about the beginning and ending of this twilight it is very feeble and easily extinguished by even the slightest mists, but nevertheless it exists, and is very appreciable on clear, cold, days, or nights, properly speaking. The North Pole itself is only shrouded in perfect blackness from Nov. 13 to Jan. 29, a period of 77 days. Supposing that the sun has set (supposing a circumpolar sea or body of water unlimited to vision) on Sep. 24, not to rise until March 18 for that particular point, giving a period of about 50 days of uniformly varying twilight, the Pole has about 188 days of coutinuous daylight, 100 days of varying twilight, and 77 of perfect inky darkness (save when the moon has a northern decliuation) in the period of a typical year. During the period of a little over four days the sun shines continuously on both the North and South Poles at the same time, owing to refraction, parallax, semi-diameter, and dip of the horizon.

A GOOD PHYSICIAN.

A man can hardly be a good physician without having a considerable native share of scientific ability, and he should also have much of the artist's sensibility to form, color and expressive motion. The physician, besides actual accomplishments, which he is likely enough to have quite outside his vocation, is often the most agreeable and well-informed man of the world in his very large circle. And everything conspires at present to compel or invite the widening of his horizon. To be a really good physician a man must be a psychologist. This does not mean that if he finds in a case of insomnia no obvious cause for the patient's disorder he should ask the unfortunate man if he has anything on his conscience—embezzlement, for instance. It is well known that Lord Eldon, when plain John Scott, eloped with the lady whom he married, and that they were lovers all their lives. While it was yet very early days with them, young Mrs. Scott fell ill in a strange village, and the local practitioner was sent for. Having, after the usual routine, failed to make out what was the matter with this beautiful lady, he said: "I am afraid, ma'am, there is something on your mind. You are not happy with your husband?" This was bad practice. Mrs. Scott had much spirit and natural eloquence, and there was nothing the matter with Mr. Scott, who was both tall and athletic; but the muse will not sing the dismissal of that doctor. The anecdote only illustrates, in passing, the sense in which the physician must not be a psychologist.—The Spectator.

There are very many true and noble women in this world, who would be quite willing to give up all for the sake of the man they love, and there are many worthless and selfish men who are willing to accept that sacrifice.

Happy is he who has learned this one thing—to do the plain duty of the moment quickly and cheerfully, whatever it may be.

☞ Try it; keep trying it, and try it again. We say this because we believe that the health, happiness and prosperity of the people depend upon the proper use of these medicines, which have proved so successful in eradicating disease and defeating death. The medicine so effective in its cure of diseases is the great Southern remedy, Simmons' Liver Regulator. Try it; we believe that the first trial will be satisfactory.

Consider well, then decide positively. Respect the counsel of your parents.

$10,000 AWARDED.—"I was so sick and low-spirited that I thought I would give anything to get well; and if any one had ensured me the good health produced by using Simmons' Liver Regulator, and charged me a thousand dollars, I would willingly have paid it if I had had it; in fact, ten thousand dollars would be worth less to me than what it has done for me.

GEO. F. BARRETT, Macon, Ga."

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

NECESSITATING A SURGICAL OPERATION—LOVING MOTHER ATTEMPTS TO TAKE A PAIR OF SHEARS FROM HER CHILD.

Parents Be Careful.

Domestic accidents are common to women, and some of them are very serious. Mrs. Warner, of South Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., some weeks ago attempted to take from her child a pair of shears with which it was playing. A slight struggle ensued, in which the point of the shears entered Mrs. Warner's left eye, entirely destroying the sight. Her family physician did what he could, but intensely painful inflammation arose, which, by sympathy, threatened the loss of the other eye. Total blindness to a woman having the care of a household is an irretrievable calamity. In this strait Mrs. W— applied to the well-known and skillful surgeon, Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who removed the injured eye by a very successful operation, setting aside all danger of further harm to the sight of the other eye. But, owing to pain and mental distress, her system needed a tonic and restorative medicine. To do this work the Doctor prescribed "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which sustained its reputation and laid a sure foundation of health.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy removes all impurities from the blood, regulates the Liver and Kidneys. Cures Constipation, and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to Females. It is for sale by all our druggists at ONE DOLLAR a bottle. oct5—1m

DIRECTIONS

For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c, insert with little finger a particle of the balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane.

For Deafness.

Apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Having gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone, recognized as a wonderful remedy. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head and snuffles it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeabld. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

No rival has he save the drumber;

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.

Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St..Boston

Dr. Lighthill.—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,

Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

Miscellaneous.

TUNIS.

A most impressive journey is to the palace of the Bey, the Barbe. Passing through the Marine Gate we enter the quarters of the town which lie between the ancient wall and the outer ramparts; we glide past a confused multitude of huts and houses and shops (which are a joke) filled with charming rubbish kept by wax-work figures; rows of sable women sitting against whitewashed walls with piles of bread; youths with savage faces; bent old men leaning on their staffs; mangy children with scald heads—shirted, hooded, naked, with features black and yellow in all indefinable shades—in costume for the most part white, squatted in circles, asleep in corners, motionless as the rubbish-heaps which form the background, without a smile, without one movement of muscle, oppressed, weary, petrified, filling the bright air with mystery. We ride on amid a scene peaceful, silent, sad. In these wretched little imps and those horrible hags we see the children of lust and debris of the seraglio. Year by year the negro villages of the Soudan are ransacked for girls of voluptuous beauty—who are stolen or bought for a few beads or a bottle of rum—for the Mussulman market, where, unmoved by pity, swollen with savage passion, the drover knows eager buyers await his arrival. Beautiful women are the money monopoly the luxury of the fat, fair-complexioned, majestic, lounging, lazy Moor. Over exceptional beauty caids, pashas, ministers, and merchants wage a fierce money war before it is determined in whose embrace it shall be used up. Thousands of both male and female children, from eight to ten years of age, are annually imported into the Moorish markets. On their way many of them die of a broken heart. They are fattened prior to sale, and are treated to music to cure home-sickness, it is said and to give the look of contentment—for the Moor loves only the flesh. When worn with care, or sorrow, or old age, (which comes at thirty), a woman is worthless. May be that ghastly wretch, with toothless skull, more like a fiend's than a woman's face, once smiled in a merchant's face or wore the pretty necklace of a pasha. With used-up pipes and slippers, she has been cleared out to make room for new ones. The Moor is a hideous hot-bed of sensuality. He believes in the bottom of his heart that in his relation to woman he was created to be first a beast, then a brute. Under the curse of such a character, his land is a waste, his manhood a ruin. What the European owes to the now attained creed about woman, a glimpse at the empire of the Moor may help us to conceive.

THE BLUE GLASS THEORY.

Professor Schlager, director of a noted insane asylum at Vienna, announces the result of experiments made by him in relation to the blue glass healing theory, which at one time attracted so much attention in America as well as abroad. He had a room furnished with windows of blue grass, and had the walls painted of the same color. He then selected sixty persons who were more or less deranged mentally, and made them subjects of experimentation for a period of three years, placing them at selected times in the blue room and carefully noting the apparent effects upon them. He discovered that the abnormally aroused and excited temperament experienced a remarkably soothing and quieting influence. In the blue light, and he expresses the conviction that with persons thus mentally deranged, with whom every other method of treatment has failed, this should be tried. He does not report any complete cures made by this means alone, but says that in most cases the treatment has proved beneficial, and that if continued systematically and persistently, the indications are that it will lead to complete restoration. In no case did it work injury. He expresses the intention to continue his experiments, and calls upon all associates and colleagues in the treatment of the insane to do the same, and make careful notes of their observations. Professor Schlager has also made valuable and interesting experiments in treating deranged persons of abnormally depressed or sluggish and apathetic temperaments by exposing them in a similar manner to red light. His conclusions seem to be based upon careful and scrupulous study and observation, and are attracting deserved attention.

DYNAMITE.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: Dynamite is too dangerous an agent to be sold as freely as sealingwax, yet it seems to be procurable without any difficulty in all parts of the country. Hardly a month passes in which cases are not reported of poachers using dynamite as a means of catching fish, and and the dynamite grenade used to kill trout in a pool might just as easily be employed to destroy human life. So familiar are some people with the explosive that it is even being used as a means of suicide. A Yorkshire correspondent sent to the British Medical Journal of a recent date an account of an extraordinary case, in which a drunken well-sinker put an end to himself by exploding a dynamite cartridge in his mouth. Strangely enough, although his tongue, teeth, palate and maxillary bones were blown to pieces, the skin of the cheeks and lips remained intact, and, except for extravasation of blood about the eyes, there was little to show externally the cause of his death.

Never speculate deeper than you are able to lose, if you lose at all.

READ THE PROOF:

Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.

The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.

The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.

This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.

TESTIMONIALS from well known people near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible destroyer, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.

We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well-known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

"Almost at Death's Door."

I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, as strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.

Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.

Mrs. N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician, who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.

Vacation Saunterings.

BY REV. L. L. WOOD.

I shall not soon forget the ascent of Mt. Washington. Often had my eyes turned towards that loftiest summit of our Atlantic coast; much had I read of its sublime visions and exalted prospects, but never before had my feet rested on its cloud-girdled top; never before had my eyes swept the fields of its exalted landscape views, too grand and beautiful for adequate description.

As we drew near its base, our eyes continually glanced up along that straight and narrow path over which we were to be carried to the height of our expectations and the goal of an oft-time ambition. As we begun to rise into the sky, thirteen hundred feet to the mile, we looked with different views than ever before, upon the low grounds left behind. As we continued to rise the vision broadened and deepened until all the earth seemed to live far beneath us. The hour and a quarter occupied in the ascent seemed crowded into a few brief minutes, as amid such exclamations as the situation naturally drew from the tourists, we gazed upon such a scene as no mortal artist can ever paint and no human lips can justly describe.

We passed up and on, by the monument of Lizzie Bourne, who perished so near the summit, many years ago, reminding us that others had long since preceded us there. But as we neared the summit the cloud we had watched with anxiety began to settle and we entered into it. The mist, and rain, and cold, and wind, immediately necessitated the closing of every window of the open car in which we were ascending.

Disguise it as we might, we were disappointed in the prospect we had been waiting life-time to enjoy. The cheerless storm and darkness continued during all the hours we remained on the summit and we descended the other side of the mountain in a cloud so dense that only two of the six horses were visible, as they plunged downward in a descent so steep, at first, that we involuntarily clutched the seats with the sensation that we were sliding down the mountain. The drenching storm of wind and rain was so fierce that the wagon covers were removed and ambrellas were an impossibility. Not until we had descended miles did we emerge from the cloud and the storm into the soft sunlight again, and behold the peaceful valleys lying beneath us like a beautiful painting.

May we not discover in this an illustration of the possible disappointment of our heavenly prospects? Often have we cast longing eyes heavenward and when we leave this world of sense, new visions will come to us. Should the christian hopes of a life-time disappear, should the bright vision of heaven fade away just as we thought ourselves entering it, should the blackness of darkness fall on our souls, what should we do? Would we say that our opportunity was unpropitious, but we would make the best of it now it was at hand? Would we offer ourselves such poor comfort? Nay, friend, your entrance and mine into the heavenly world depends upon our taking heed, while here below, to the "sure word" of prophecy which leads us to Him who alone "dwelleth in light" and with whom "is no darkness at all." "And there shall be no night there and they need no candles, neither light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever."

Rev. M. J. Masterson in Ireland.

On Sunday, Sept. 19, a meeting was held at Granard, Co. Longford, to hear Justin McCarthy, M. P., the celebrated historian, on the Land Act. Rev. M. J. Masterson of this town was present, and at the conclusion of Mr. McCarthy's speech cries arose for the American priest, when Father Masterson came forward; when he appeared the vast throng uncovered, and gave deafening cheers for America and Old Ireland. He said: "My dear friends, I thank you deeply for your kind reception. I am an Irish priest, an American citizen, and happy to see you all here to-day with a calm, cool, stern resolve to assert your rights, to sustain the banner of Michael Davitt, 'The Land for the People' (cheers). An alien, hireling press often strives to misrepresent you even in my free adopted land, but here to-day I see that you are what we, the Irish in America, wish you to be, self-reliant and confident in the issue of the struggle in which you are engaged. I would say to you, take a lesson from what occurs in war. When two States buckle on their armor and engage in deadly combat they use on either side to the best advantage every inch of ground every moment of time. Now, by your sterling efforts, with the assistance of your leaders, you have already carried by assault the Land Act, a point of vantage on which you can plant your cannon for the last final assault on landlordism. I have been absent from amongst you, but I was delighted to see that low crouching of man to man disappearing on this my visit, and the only true reverence is for the soggarth aroon who stands and stood by you in this your battle for the land (cheers). Some may say—the wish is father to the thought—that the chain binding priests and people is growing rusty, but this I do say, that to-day the priests are as ready to oil that chain with their blood as in the days of Oliver Cromwell (cheers). I come from a place called New England, but it is at present a misnomer; it should be called Old Ireland. We are true to one another in the land beyond the sea; let you watch and keep away traitors; close your ranks against them and you are bound to succeed. Rely then, on yourselves, on your own right hands, and we, the Irish in America, millions in number, with dollars plenty, will stand to you and support you even were the rest of the world against you. You cannot tell what comfort and consolation it is to me to see what a moral revolution has occurred for the better among you. Often did I see, when driving by the road, not only fine stalwart men, but young fair Irish girls, pure as the sun that shone on them, toiling from early morning till late at night, for what? Was it to clothe or feed themselves decently? Was it even to earn enough to carry them over the 'pond'? No; but to pay a rack-rent to some spendthrift to squander in Rotten Row or some Paris boulevard (cheers and cries of 'True, true'). There they were exhausting for his benefit their labor, sweat, and toil, and year after year would find them in old age as in youth, poor and penniless. Why, to such even death is a relief; and the poet's words are but too true, when applied to them:

"I could lie down as a tired child
And weep away the life of care
Which I have borne, and yet must bear
Till death like sleep might steal on me,
And I might feel in the warm air
My cheek grow cold, and hear the sea
Breathe o'er my dying brain its last monotony."

(Cheers, and cries of 'True.') Keep to the League; don't forget the house in College Green; rely on your banded strength, for were I or you to ask Gladstone why he passed the late act, if he answer truly he must say, as Wellington said of Catholic Emancipation, 'Because I couldn't help it.' Do not listen to any political tricksters; confide in yourselves; select for leaders such as you can trust, then will you conquer and America stand by you.

BOSTON THEATRE.—"Michael Strogoff" has entered upon what is certain to be a long and very prosperous run at this popular place of amusement. The dramatic strength of the play, the general excellence of the acting, the beauty of the scenery, the startling realism of the effects, the brilliancy of the ballet and processions, and the sumptuousness of the costumes excite admiration in all who attend the performances.

This is the same drama that has just finished a four months' run at the Adelphi Theatre, London. The cost of producing this play was more than double that of any of the great productions with which this house has been identified. Some idea of its immensity can be formed from the fact that there are eleven scenes, many of them of the most elaborate description; six hundred new costumes are used; twenty horses, drum and fife corps, a troup of trumpeters, mounted; nearly three hundred auxiliaries, and a ballet of seventy-five. Senora Amalia Lepri, the great Spanish Assoluta, from the principal theatre of Madrid, leads the ballet. The new leading man of the Boston Theatre, Mr. William Redmund, makes his first appearance in America as "Michael Strogoff." Mr. R. is from the Princess's and Olympic Theatres, London, and was principal support to Mr. Edwin Booth during the past season at the Princess's; and in many instances the London press spoke of him as fairly dividing the honors with Mr. Booth.

THE NEW BOAT of the Norwich Line of steamers between New York and Boston is indeed a palace steamer. No boat on Long Island Sound can compare with her in speed and elegance.—She is called the "City of Worcester," and a trip to New York by that line on one of the nights on which that boat runs, is a pleasure which those of our readers who contemplate a visit to that city should not miss. The elegant dining hall in the main saloon, the elaborate decorations, the electric lights—all remind one of a first-class hotel, rather than a steamer. An electric annunciator connects with every state room, of which there are 175, besides twelve large bedstead state rooms. Everything that can conduce to the comfort and pleasure of the traveller has been provided for, and the boat is in command of Capt. H. C. Lamphear, of New London, the oldest captain on the Sound, he having followed the sea forty-four years, and traversed the Sound thirty years, never meeting with an accident. The boat is run in connection with the New York and New England R. R., the trains for which leave the depot at the foot of Summer street, Boston, at 6.30 P. M., daily.

An artless young lady reader wants to know what the young men mean when they call a young fellow a "muff." A muff, sweetest one, is something that holds a girl's hand without squeezing it.

A GOOD WORK.—All who have had occasion to consult the ancient Probate Records of Massachusetts, have been subjected to a vast deal of unnecessary labor in looking up titles to real estate, or in ascertaining the results of the settlement of estates of deceased persons—the labor of such researches being greatly increased on account of the faulty system, or, perhaps, more accurately speaking, the lack of system in indexing the records and arranging the papers on file. The matter has been considered by the County Commissioners, and they have authorized the thorough revision of the Probate Records. Mr. Wm. P. Upham of Peabody, has been engaged to perform the exacting labor of this revision; and when he shall have accomplished his patience-trying task, the papers in each individual estate will be in such condition that the work of confirming a title will be reduced to the minimum of labor.

The index will at a glance show the number and character of papers filed upon each estate, so that the record can be found in a moment, and, in addition to this, the original documents on each estate will be filed together. Not only will the legal profession appreciate this great reform, but every real estate holder will be able to ascertain for himself whether his title is clear to the property he believes his own.

The County Commissioners are entitled to the gratitude of the people of the county, for having authorized this important revision. It will take some time, but when completed the records and files will be reliable and of inestimable value. In this work, Mr. Upham has the active co-operation of Judge Choate, Mr. Mahoney, the Register of Probate, and Mr. Hines, his assistant.—Lawrence American.

A SERENADING CATASTROPHE.—Those of our readers acquainted on Monson street will remember that the roof of Mr. Forceps' saloon adjoins his house, and is approached by two windows. One of these windows is in Mr. Forceps' bedroom. On this roof Mrs. Forceps has spread hesitating tomatoes with a view to hastening their ripeness. Last Wednesday she put five more with their fellows, making thirty in all.

The Forceps have a niece visiting them—a young lady named Hall, of Thomastown. She had made the acquaintance of many of our young people; and on Wednesday night several of them got together to give her a serenade. Providing themselves with requisite instruments, the young men took up their position near this addition we speak of, and struck up their instruments.

Mrs. Forceps was first awakened by the music, and nudged her husband.—He also awoke. The music was grand—not loud and coarse, but soft, low, harmonious. Mr. Forceps was very much pleased, and got up to the window to listen to it. Then Mrs. Forceps got up also, and, re-tying her night-cap, stood beside Forceps.

"They're serenading Ellen," said she.

"I know it," said Forceps.

"Who can they be?" she asked.

"I don't know, I'm sure," said he; "but I suppose I could find out if I could creep out on the roof and look over."

"Why don't you?" said she, her curiosity increasing.

"I'm afraid they might see me," answered he.

"I don't think they would," said she. "They wouldn't be looking up on the roof, would they?"

Mr. Forceps thought a moment and then concluded that no one could see him, as the moon had gone into a bank of clouds, and objects were quite dim. And then he softly opened the blind, and cautiously crawled out on the shingles, completely incased in red flannel under-clothes and a night-cap of the same rich material.

The music still continued, coming up through the night air in waves of ecstatic harmony. Mr. Forceps sat down on the roof, and laboriously worked his way to the eaves. Then he lifted himself up to turn over and look down; and just then he stepped on something soft and yielding, felt his feet give away, made a desperate clutch at the shingles, was too late, gave a piercing shriek and shot off the roof, and went revolving and howling in among the band, followed by the tomatoes, and madly cleaving the air with his red-flannel limbs. He struck on his back on the bass viol, and with one leg tore the entrails from an accordeon, and with the other knocked all the keys from a silver mounted flute. The man who played the bass-viol was driven senseless into a pile of pea-brush. The flute player, with his mouth full of blood and splinters, jumped over the fence and fled.

What became of the others Mr. Forceps does not know, he being too busily engaged in getting on his feet, and into the house, to make a critical examination of the field. It is presumed the bass-viol man died on the spot, and was surreptitiously removed and buried by his companions, as there was no sign of him about the premises in the morning.—Danbury News Man.

Genevieve Ward has written a letter complaining of the shocking custom of men and women sleeping in the same sleeping car, with only thin curtains for a partition. We can assure Miss Ward that the men feel as bad about it as she does, and we trust that the day is not far distant when there will be female sleeping cars and male cars. No man likes to go to bed in a sleeping car compartment, next to a single lady twenty nine years old, when there liable to be a collision that will fire him through the partition and stab him to death by striking against the lady's shoulder blades. There should be a system of cushions arranged to break the force of the shock.

BOYS' AND CHILDREN'S SPECIAL DEPARTMENT.

We never forget the little folks, as they grow up to be men. This department is stocked to its utmost with all the novelties of 1881. Mothers who desire to dress their little ones in handsome and stylish garment should call and examine our immense stock of Boys' and Children's Clothing, as we have many styles which cannot be found elsewhere. Our unparallelled success in Salem is due to the following facts: 1st. We manufacture our own Clothing. 2d. We never are undersold and never will be. 3d. No misrepresentation of goods. 4th. All garments guaranteed to fit. 5th. No extra charges made for alteration. 6th. Courteous Treatment. 7th. Strictly one price and no deviation. Our Motto: "SQUARE DEALING, STRICTLY ONE PRICE."

Mesmerism.

NUMBER ONE.

The first question, we suppose, that will break upon the readers of the above title will be, "What is this science, and where did it originate?" These inquiries we shall attempt to answer. The term, "Mesmerism," was taken from the name of him who brought up this subject, wrote and lectured upon it some years ago. A true definition of the term is, the effect produced upon a man or animal, a kind of sleep that is called "sleep-walking," a state in which the external senses are closed, while the mind is awake. There is really no difference between Mesmerism, Magnetism, Spiritualism and Clairvoyance, each meaning a power attributed to persons in a singular state, working wonders and discovering objects that are not present to the senses; therefore we shall only use one of them, the above caption, as including the whole. These terms are like the "four elements that furnish forth creation." This wonderful science emerged from the darkness in which it had long been enveloped, and it was by Mesmer laid open to the view of the public. It seemed, as first lectured upon by him, to burst forth upon the minds of most people as did those "palaces of Nature," the Alps, from original chaos.

Some have thought it a wonderful discovery, or have been willing to embrace it, if, upon thorough investigation, it is found to stand upon its own bottom. Others have regarded it with terror, or started back with their hair on end, as if it came forth from the mouth of perdition. Others still, (like the young birds spoken of by Bunyan, upon whose heads the shell of the egg continues), have regarded it as ephemeric—something, like Jonah's gourd, has come a night, to perish in a night. But a candid investigation of the subject may tend to soften the rank prejudices of some, banish the fears of others, and confirm the skeptical in a full belief of it. We shall, therefore, give a brief examination of its origin and history—offer a few remarks on the practical utility, and the sublimity of this science, and describe the qualifications requisite in order to be a successful practitioner.

Speaking of its origin, we must say, that it is no "new thing under the sun;" nay, it is as old as creation itself, for it begun with Adam, our first progenitor. "A deep sleep fell on him," we are told, "and he slept." During his slumbers his side was opened, a rib taken therefrom, and the wound closed up. All this was done without Adam's being conscious of pain, or even having his slumber broken. Now, does any one suppose this to have been natural sleep? Let him who thinks thus allow the dentist to extract one tooth while he is asleep, and see if the crash of broken bones will not compel Morpheus to relinquish his grasp upon him, and extort one shriek of pain. Would Adam have survived this surgical operation, much less have remained undisturbed, unconscious of distress, had it been only sleep? Is not this, therefore, the conclusion, that Adam must have been mesmerized?

But is the question asked, "who operated upon him?" We answer, one of the animals by which he was surrounded may have taken that office for the time being, as there was no other man on the earth's face—just as Balaam's ass assumed the office of reprover, and "rebuked the madness of the prophet." Perhaps an ape, or a guacharo, placed himself before Adam, and fixing his fire-darting eye upon him the effect was to wrap him in such profound slumber that the mere taking out of one of his ribs did not disturb him. This, then, according to our reasoning, is the origin of Mesmerism. In our next number we shall trace its history down to the present age.

"And this is not a theologic tract,
To prove with Hebrew and with Arabic
If Job be allegory or a fact,
But a true narrative; and this I pick
From out the whole, but such and such an act,
As sets aside the slightest thought of trick.
'Tis every tittle true, beyond suspicion,
And accurate as any other vision."

The Ladies' Furnishing and Trimming Store of JOHN P. PEABODY is unusually stocked with all the rich and novel goods in his line this fall. Our readers have become so accustomed to making a visit to this establishment to supply their wants that it is almost a second nature to them, and they certainly could not find a better place to trade. Mr. Peabody has been so long in the business that his experience enables him to judge, the moment a novelty is presented, whether it will be a success or not, and his judgment rarely deceives him in this respect. The consequence is that while some dealers have their shelves loaded with goods, bought on an experiment and which have already become out of style, he is enabled to keep his stock fresh and clean, and he can always be relied upon to give the public the newest and best styles at the prices many other dealers have to pay to get them. He also buys all his goods for cash, which is a very important item at this time; and as he also sells for cash, he is enabled to put himself beyond competition in the different lines of goods at his store.—Mr. Peabody has a high reputation among importers and jobbers, and his reliability as a business firm has always been unquestioned. We were interested to take a casual glance at the different departments in his well-lighted store, and were pleased to find all the best and finest goods on his counters, and displayed in the tempting way which Mr. Peabody so well knows how to arrange them.

As we entered the store our attention was at once directed to the handkerchief department, which is in the front end of the store. Here were shown the newest style in fine linen hemstitched handkerchiefs, with dark colored borders, at the surprisingly low price of 25 cents each. We saw in some of the large Boston stores the same goods advertised at 37 cents—and they are certainly cheap at that price—and selling very rapidly; and we wondered how it was that Mr. Peabody was able to sell them so much cheaper. But this is one of the secrets of the many bargains to be found there, and we beheld the large line of silk handkerchiefs, ladies' and gents' white and colored bordered handkerchiefs, all the finest and choicest goods, at about the same prices. Just across the passage way, in the front and side of the center counter, is the lace department. Here are all the novelties for neck wear, in fichus, ties, real and imitation laces, in all grades and all prices. Some of them are hand made, some of them interwoven with silk, and at prices suited to those who wish the more expensive, as well as the cheaper grade of goods. The millinery department is also in the front of the store, and here is one of Mr. Peabody's strong points. All the new shapes and styles in hats and bonnets are received as fast as out; his counters are loaded with a profusion of feathers, fancy and watered ribbons, including all the newest plaids and stripes, and no lady can fail of being suited in his stock, either for herself or children. Further along is the housekeeping department, where are bargains in linen damask, linen diaper at 88 cents per piece, linen towels, napkins, etc. All the grades are new and fresh, and of superior quality. Next in order are the dress goods. This department was started with the idea of keeping nothing but black goods, of which a specialty is now made, but the sales have become so large he has extended it to other dress goods, and bargains can be found in this department equal to any. The black silks shown are manufactured expressly for Mr. Peabody, and a look at them would surely be advisable to any of our readers desiring such goods.

On the other side of the center counter, at the front of the store is the dress trimming department. There are all the irridiscent fringes, gimps and buttons in use this fall, as well as the beaded ornaments and other novelties. The line of goods which he displays is certainly creditable to Mr. Peabody's excellent taste, and he has many goods which cannot be found elsewhere. In notions, all the little staple articles to be found at such a store are arrayed in order on his shelves and counters, and it is found that they can always be purchased as low at his store as elsewhere. Soaps, inks, pocket-books, combs and brushes, and everything in the toilet line, are to be found here. In the rear of the store is the silver department, attracting by its brightness every visitor. No lady can pass by these goods without a casual glance, and in many cases this is all that is necessary at the prices made, to ensure a sale. Of course in a short article like this, we can only enumerate the special points that attracted us. The hosiery and underwear at this store is replete with the newest and best goods, as well as the cheaper grades; in children's woolen goods the beauty of the styles are beyond description, and a personal visit by our lady readers to this elegant store is needed to complete the picture. In the course of our stay, we noticed that there were still people interested in the cash railway in use at his store. It was expected that before this goods could be hung over and around it, but the large number who every day desire to witness its workings, has compelled Mr. Peabody to keep it in plain sight of his numerous customers.

LYNNFIELD.—The annual Harvest Festival by the ladies' Sewing Society of the So. Cong. Church, was held last Wednesday evening in the Church, and was a grand success. The patrons were highly entertained by choice vocal and instrumental music and select readings. The following named persons took part in the exercises: Miss Lizzie Goodrich, Miss Grace Goodrich, Miss Carrie Palmer, Miss Nellie Monroe, Mr. Long, Mr. Henry Law, Mr. Herman Campbell, Mr. Harry Richardson and Mr. Arthur Littlefield. Mr. Littlefield presided at the organ, and the fine selections were very highly appreciated by those present. A duet by Mr. Law and Miss Lizzie Goodrich was particularly fine and elicited much applause. One of the features of the evening—and the most exciting one—was the voting on the quilt which was to be given to the best looking farmer receiving the largest number of votes. Mr. W. J. Monroe and Mr. David Wallace were the leading contestants, and the friends of both parties worked hard for their respective men. Mr. Monroe's friends finally succeeded, and he was presented with the quilt, having received 96 votes, to Mr. Wallace's 71. The total amount realized on the quilt was $17.20. The donation of vegetables sent in by the farmers were sold at auction. The receipts were $50, which will be used for the aid of public worship. The evening was a pleasant one, and well spent, and those who were in attendance were amply repaid.

A MEETING of gentlemen in favor of a World's Fair in Boston in 1884 or 1885 was held in Hotel Vendome Monday evening. From the encouragement they received it looks more than probable that the Fair may be put down as one of the events of the future. A sterling active committee, was appointed to still further canvass the matter, and report within 90 days. It looks as if this project given up as not feasible by New York, will be wrested from her grasp. That Boston will make a success of it, when in earnest, no one doubts.

MISS MARY B. WILSON has long been favorably known to the ladies of Peabody for her choice and elegant styles in Millinery. This year is no exception to the variety on her counters, and the windows in her new store were never so tastily arranged as this season. It is a well known fact that all the work at her establishment is first-class in every respect, and an early call at her store is desirable in view of the many novelties to be obtained there.

It must be amusing to the readers of the Reporter as they notice the envy of the proprietor of that paper, who don't "catch on" to all the latest items. It shows itself in his attempting to discredit such items as he is behind on. Now, neighbor, brace up, and if you get a good item we will give you credit for it, and we won't apologize for our lack of enterprise by trying to make the public believe there isn't any news except what we get.

The late Dean STANLEY was not very acute either of taste or smell, so that all he ate was much the same to him if it was only tender. Thomas Hughes first met the Dean when a lad at a Rugby breakfast, where he and six others were plentifully regaled. Mr. Hughes gives many pleasant glimpses of Arthur Stanley, as he liked to be called, in the November Harper. A full page portrait of the late Dean will adorn the same Number.

One of the highest tributes (although paid unconsciously) ever paid to the Irish race was the recent declaration by a Mormon bishop that there are no Irish men or women among the Mormons.

"Traveler" has an article which we publish in another column, contrasting the rates on the Eastern R. R. at an excursion to the "Fairs" in Boston with some others. This objection can be raised against the Boston and Maine R. R. as well, which road runs an excursion at about the same rate from the towns in this vicinity. In all these railroad excursions the distance seems to be the main point in making up the rate, an excursion for a long distance being run cheaper in proportion than a short one. This is the case on the Fitchburg and Boston and Albany, to which our correspondent refers. We have not heard of these roads running any excursions within 20 or 25 miles from Boston at any such proportionate rates as to North Adams or Springfield. We are in favor of cheap transportation, but the custom of the different roads does not vary much in the matter of special trains.

The Autumnal meeting of the Essex Liberal Conference occurs to-morrow (Thursday) at Gloucester, which will probably be attended by delegates from the Unitarian Church here. A discussion in the afternoon will be on the subject "How far is it possible and expedient to ignore sect in selecting teachers for the Cambridge Divinity School?" In the morning a sermon will be preached by Rev. Francis B. Hornbrooke of Newton. Train leaves Salem at 9.30 A. M., and free return tickets will be given by the Eastern R. R.

The Century Magazine (Scribner's Monthly) will continue the series of illustrated papers on the scenes of Dickens' novels, and has entered upon the work of illustrating the scenes of the stories of Thackeray, Hawthorne, and George Eliot.

The Soldiers' Monument.

The sentiment of our citizens in favor of the dedication of our Soldiers' Monument with appropriate ceremonies has taken form in the issuing of a warrant by the board of Selectmen calling for a special town meeting next Monday evening. We trust it will be largely attended, and that our citizens will show their interest in it by giving their aid and votes in favor of an immediate dedication. It is not for our people to stand back now. By their appropriation, and by the careful work of the Committee, we have in position one of the finest monuments in the State. Let us show that we appreciate their labors. Let us show that we do not forget the brave comrades in arms who died in defence of this nation.

We desire to say that the petition in favor of the town meeting is signed by some of our most patriotic citizens and tax payers, and that it is a movement entirely independent of the Monument Committee or our Grand Army post. While they, as a body, are in favor of a dedication, they have wisely held aloof from taking any initiatory steps in this movement, in which we think all our citizens will commend them. We are strongly of the opinion that the large body of our tax paying citizens are in favor, and will show it on that evening, of a reasonable appropriation for its proper dedication. As far as the Post are concerned, they do not think a large appropriation necessary. A sum of money, in the neighborhood of one thousand dollars, will carry out a programme that cannot fail to be satisfactory to every one, and be an honor to the town and the soldiers. It will provide for all necessary parade, music and other expenses.

Granting that the sentiment of the majority of our citizens is in favor of such an appropriation for dedication, we would strongly urge upon them the feasibility of its being done this fall. There is yet time, before the cold weather, to make all needed arrangements. Next spring it will be an old story, and the present is surely the proper time for it. We think it would be advisable that a Committee of citizens should be appointed in connection with the Post to take control of the exercises, and carry out whatever plan may be agreed upon. Rev. J. F. Lovering, the Chaplain of the Grand Army of the State, had already been invited to deliver an address when the exercises were postponed. It is probable that he has it all prepared. There need, therefore, be no delay in this part of the programme, and with a live and interested committee, the Monument can be dedicated in two weeks from the time of the meeting next Monday evening. Let us have a good, full, enthusiastic meeting, and show by our interest that we are in sympathy with the movement which has originated and brought to a completion, the Monument which is surely an ornament to our Square and the town, and which will be regarded with still further pride as the years roll on.

OUR neighbor says, in regard to the liquor law, "A stand has been taken by a large number of men to enforce the law as it is applied by our Selectmen." The italics are ours. He also speaks of objection being taken to their application of it, and in several previous articles has referred to the "Peabody plan" as he calls it, and has used other vague expressions which we interpret as meaning that the Selectmen of this town have not enforced the liquor law as it stands on the statute books, and that they have interpreted and applied it differently from other towns and not as was intended by its framers. Does our neighbor mean this, and, if so, will he inform us wherein they have made a wrong interpretation? He also says, "The plan of this year may, with a change of town officers, be another plan in the future."

Now, we will not insult our readers by publishing the law, as amended by the last legislature, thus assuming that they are as ignorant on the subject as it is very evident our neighbor is, but in order to bring the point clearly before them, we quote a few sentences from chap. 54, sect. 1, of the Laws and Resolves of 1881:

"It shall be the duty of the aldermen of cities and of the selectmen of towns to insert in the warrant for the annual municipal election or annual meeting an article providing that a vote shall be taken as hereinafter provided, on the question of granting licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors. The check list shall be used, and the vote shall be by separate ballot; and ballots shall be 'Yes' or 'No' in answer to the question, 'Shall licenses be granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors in this city (or town)?'"

This law was approved March 3, 1881 and inasmuch as it also provided that licenses might be granted "without such a vote during the present calendar year" because the warrants had already been issued in most of the municipalities before the secretary of the commonwealth could notify them, it may be said that the law as passed has not had a trial yet, and we do not think it will be repealed or amended in any way by the coming legislature—certainly not in time to make any change. It will be seen that it will rest entirely with the citizens of the town, in regular town meeting, to say whether licenses shall be granted or not. The Selectmen will have no discretion or voice in the matter. They will have only to carry out the wishes of the town, as expressed by them in the meeting. It will thus appear that it can make no difference as to the views of the board of Selectmen on this issue, to be chosen next March, and the only "elephant" in regard to it in "March politics" will be the vote of the citizens "Yes" or "No" in regard to license; and if, as our neighbor says, the majority of our citizens are in favor of license, we shall have it.

For these reasons, we are still of the opinion that the liquor question is not the issue in choosing a representative to General Court this fall. In our judgement, the Republicans of Peabody will place a man in nomination without reference to this question. Through the state, we do not note any particular interest, of an exceptional character, on the subject. The Selectmen of Peabody, however, by only a partial enforcement of the statute against the violators of the law, have prosecuted some of the friends of our neighbor, and he would therefore have us believe that the whole state is as much agitated as he appears to be. We think it would be wise in our Legislature to allow some law on this subject to remain long enough on our statute books, without change, to admit of a fair trial. We also believe that the present law, giving as it does the authority to each city and town to manage its own affairs, is as wise and liable to give as good general satisfaction as any that can be framed. We shall, therefore, advocate the election of the Republican nominee, whatever his views on the liquor question, and consider that the interests of the town in this, and all other questions of interest to them, will not suffer in his hands.

THERE has been a tendency in some directions, of late, among the clergymen of this country, to step aside from the duties and responsibilities usually expected of them, and mingle in politics and many other things not generally considered of a spiritual nature.—There may be many cases when this is perfectly justifiable and proper, but we sometimes see instances where it looks entirely opposite. An instance of this kind occurred last Saturday night, when Rev. A. A. Waite appeared at Town Hall, in company with professed jugglers, as an exposer of Spiritualism.—Not that we object to the exposition of its falsity. But many of these traveling "exposers" are men and women whose object it is to obtain the most money in the town where they exhibit; in some places they are "mediums" and in others "exposers," according to the sentiment of the community. Rev. Mr. Waite was formerly an evangelist, but has recently been called to the settled pastorate of a church in Lynn.—His people must have been highly flattered at seeing him advertised in company with such jugglers as were with him, to appear in this town. And what a fitting preparation for the work in which he expected to be engaged on the following Lord's day!

We had the pleasure of a visit from Rev. C. V. Hanson, of Damariscotta, Me., who is spending a few weeks in town. He occupied his old pulpit last Sunday forenoon, and preached an able and interesting sermon. A rumor current that he will preach there next Sunday is incorrect.

A horse-car conductor was before the court a few days ago, charged with assaulting his wife. It was shown in the evidence that he had struck her with his fist and knocked her down. He acknowledged the assault, but pleaded in extenuation that his calling led him into habits of punching the fair. The judge said it was all right as long as he confined himself to punching the fair but he would fine him for knocking down the fair.

Those who have had occasion to visit the Salem street cemetery during the past week must have noticed the plain but rich and massive marble stone which marks the last resting place of the late Bishop Gilbert Haven. It is of unique design, elegantly finished, the work of Wm. Harlow & Son, of Malden, and weighs over two tons. The base is of Vermont marble, five feet long by three feet wide, and nine inches thick, chamfered around the top. Upon this is a block six inches thick, surrounded with six pillars bearing a beautiful slab of Italian marble, laid horizontally, four feet six inches long by two feet six inches wide and eight inches thick. On one side of the middle stone, between the pillars, are the names Gilbert, Mary,—the bishop and his wife. On the other side Georgie, Bertie,—their children.—Malden Mirror.

Some old farmer sent to the clergyman a request that he would pray for rain, and he did so. And after meeting Mrs. Putnam spoke to Mrs. Jenkins about it; "Why, land o' gracious, what's the minister thinking of. The Sunday school picnic is to be to-morrow and here he goes and prays for rain." "Well, I guess it won't make much difference," replies Mrs. Jenkins.

The scoffers are pointing to Guiteau as one of Mrs. Van Cott's converts, and say if he is a specimen brand that she has snatched from the burning they do not want any of her work in their behalf. We do not consider the position well taken, as it was only a circumstance that the villian attended her meetings, as he did other meetings, and there is no telling where he got the venom that worked so that he shot the President. It would be just as reasonable for a person to say that because Guiteau is a lawyer he does not want any lawyer to even prosecute him for horse stealing.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Our readers will not fail, both old and young, to visit the Bohemian Glass Blowers, exhibiting at Upton's Hall every evening this week, and a Saturday afternoon matinee. The pieces of work which they manufacture are truly wonderful; and they are made in view of all the audience, and then distributed free at the close of the entertainment. A beautiful piece of glass work, valued at $50, and on exhibition in the window of Mr. George Stevens, is to be presented to the handsomest baby in town, each visitor being allowed to vote, and the voting to continue every evening, including Saturday, when it will be decided by the baby who receives the largest number of votes obtaining the prize. A novelty in the way of a glass engine in full operation is shown. It is a model of a Corliss steamboat engine, every part being perfect, run by steam, the boiler being of glass, and well worth the study of an entire evening. It is composed of several thousand pieces, and in it is shown the several kinds of glass work and coloring, and this alone is worth the price of admission. The glass blowers are very dexterous in the handling of the glass, are minute in their explanations, and a visit there by all cannot fail to be of profit as well as interest. Go early in the week, as they will undoubtedly fill the hall to overflowing when it is known that the beautiful presents made by them are distributed, as they are, by drawing at the close of each exhibition.

About the same number gathered at Town Hall last Wednesday evening as the previous Wednesday, to hear Mr. T. A. Devine speak under the auspices of the Greenback party. Mr. Devine "sat down" mildly upon the railroads, manufacturers, national banks and corporations in general, and succeeded in entertaining his hearers throughout. We believe their next meeting will be held next Friday evening, when ex-Congressman Gilbert De La Matyr will speak and Rev. V. M. Simons of Woburn, will preside.

Mr. Stephen Fernald met with a narrow escape from a serious accident one day last week. He was rendering some assistance to the masons at work on his new house on Tremont street, in drawing water to make their mortar, and was about to get on the wagon, when the horse became frightened, and started, throwing him off under the wheels, both of which passed over his legs, besides injuring him in the shoulder. No bones were broken, and he is able to walk around some, but it was a narrow escape.

The railroad war has reduced the fares from Boston to New York on the Sound lines to $3. We presume the combination entered into in the fall of last year has therefore come to an end. We shall not be surprised to see still further reductions before the winter is over. We advise our readers who contemplate a trip to New York to go, if possible, on the new and magnificent steamer "City of Worcester," of the Norwich Line.

A call has been issued for a special town meeting at Town Hall next Monday evening, at 7 o'clock, to act on the following: "To see what action, if any, the town will take in regard to dedicating the Soldiers' Monument in the Square, and appropriating a sum of money for the same; agreeably to the petition of Chas. D. Howard and others."

We call the attention of our townspeople to the advertisement of Mr. William Donnell, announcing his proprietorship of the boarding house in Sutton Block, from Nov'r 1st, to be known as the "Donnell House;" also to make it a place of welcome to all who wish transient board. We wish Monsieur Donnell complete success.

The residences of Mr. Daniel Woodbury on Lowell St., and Mr. Samuel Brown on Lynnfield Street, are being painted—the former by Mr. Benj. F. Woodbury. Mr. George F. Ward is painting Mr. Geo. A. Whitney's new house, and Mr. Wm. Blaney the new residence of Mr. Thos. E. Wilson.

At a meeting of the Republican Town Committee, last Saturday evening, it was voted to call a caucus to nominate a Representative to General Court next Tuesday evening, Nov. 1st. A letter was read from Mr. Bowman Viles, declining to serve on the Committee.

A Fair and Harvest Festival commenced in the South Peabody Chapel to-day, and will continue through to-morrow afternoon and evening. This evening there will be readings and tableaux, and to-morrow evening an entertainment by the Peak Family.

Mr. W. B. Richardson and Mr. A. L. Ames, who are stopping in Chicago, are expected home next Saturday.

We regret to learn that Mr. Joseph N. Burbeck met with a severe accident last Thursday morning. One of his men at the factory was engaged in splitting wood when a piece flew against the saw, glancing off and striking Mr. Burbeck in the right eye. He was taken at once to the office of Dr. Geo. S. Osborne, who, assisted by Dr. Coggin of Salem, dressed the wound, and did all that was possible for his comfort. Mr. Burbeck has been unable for some time to have the use of his other eye, and the misfortune is deeply to be deplored in consequence. It is to be feared that he will never recover his sight from the eye which was injured, and he has the sympathy of all our citizens in his double affliction.

Rev. James H. Conlon, who has been located at St. John's Church, in this town, during Rev. M. J. Masterson's absence, left here this week for Gloucester, having been appointed assistant at the Catholic Church in that place. The Catholics of Gloucester have reason to feel glad of this appointment, for they will find Father Conlon a kind and generous man, a devoted priest, and an eloquent preacher. He carries with him the best wishes and good will of both priests and people of Peabody, and his sojourn here will ever make pleasant reminiscences among the parishioners of St. John's Church.—Reporter.

At a caucus of the Democrats of Peabody, held in Town Hall, Monday evening, the following delegates were elected to attend the Senatorial, county and councillor conventions at Salem to-day: W. F. Pingree, D. P. Grosvenor, Jr., T. H. McGrath, T. J. Relihan, Frank Winchester, M. W. Cummings, N. H. Bushby, Levi Preston. A town committee was chosen as follows: T. H. McGrath, W. F. Pingree, George Wiggin, S. C. Hewitt, S. S. Littlefield, D. P. Grosvenor, Jr., S. A. Southwick, R. H. Brown, Frank Winchester, W. F. Clark, T. J. Relihan, N. H. Bushby.

Spaulding's Bell Ringers appear at the Peabody Institute this (Wednesday) evening. The entertainment which they give is well known to most of our readers as being first class in every respect, and the combination is headed by Georgie Dean Spaulding, the most accomplished artist in her specialty in the country, if not in the world. They will be assisted by Maud and Edward Werner in their society sketches, Miss Esther R. Stratton, elocutionist, and others. Dont fail to hear them.

Last Thursday evening, a party of young people left the square in the "Belle of Peabody" to visit Miss Eva D. Raddin, in So. Peabody. The party consisted mostly of her former high school classmates. Miss Raddin, although surprised, was glad to see her friends, and the evening was very pleasantly spent with games, music, etc., till eleven o'clock, when the company were invited to partake of a supper, to which all did justice. At a seasonable hour the company returned, having thoroughly enjoyed their visit.

Mrs. Lynch, the mother of the Albino children, on Harris street, says she has had several tempting offers to travel and exhibit her children. She often has been invited out to exhibit them at private gatherings and to families since the notoriety given them in the PRESS. Among other things about them we did not mention at the time are that their eyes are open when they are asleep, and their pink eyes, which can hardly see in the daytime, can find a pin in the darkest night.

We have often heard our grand-parents speak of the old fashioned quilting parties, but they are not very common now. Such a party, however, was held last Friday, at the residence of Miss Nancy Twist, on Lynn street. A number of ladies were present and put things together lively, after which an old-fashioned supper was served.

The enterprise of our neighbor in furnishing his readers with a cut of the monument at Yorktown is to be highly commended. These things are very expensive, and we trust it will not be so serious a drain on his treasury as to deter him from showing a like liberal spirit when our own monument is dedicated.

Charles O. Stone, proprietor of the coach line between Peabody and Lynn, has recently purchased a young and thorough-bred stallion, from Lewiston, Maine. The horse is from the Mambrino dam, and sired by Lewiston Boy, half-brother to Dispatch. He is in fine condition, and very speedy.

A lad named Hammond was nearly buried alive last Thursday, by the caving in of the side of the trench on Lynnfield street, that was being dug for water pipes.

Dr. H. P. Fairfield of Worcester, will occupy the rostrum at Ashland Hall, on Sunday, Oct. 30th, at 2.30 and 7.30 P. M. Do not fail to hear him.

Our thanks are due to Hon. Geo. B. Loring for valuable Congressional documents received this week.

Mr. Isaac Fellows is about to build a house on Endicott street, on some land purchased of Mr. John M. Berry.

Anecdotes.

MAINE SARDINES.

If Connecticut is the land of wooden nutmegs, Maine must be the land of herring sardines. There are said to be twenty-two establishments on the Washington county coast, whereof two-thirds are in this town, in which herring are put up as sardines in tin boxes made here in imitation of those used by the French, bearing French labels, preserved in cotton-seed oil, which is asserted on the cans to be choice olive oil. "No admittance" is notified at the entrance, but the rule is not enforced. Herring are brought in from the bay in large quantities, and are unloaded at the several wharves where the factories are erected. They are carried in baskets into a large room provided with rough tables, where a gang of boys from ten to fifteen years of age are waiting for them, each armed with a knife. Some of these children are dexterous. A single cut removes the head and from one to two inches of the shoulder of each fish, and at the same time draws the greater part of the "innards." The tail is more or less removed by another cut.

The extent of the business done is indicated by the fact that the rejected parts of the herring at a single establishment frequently amount to several hogsheads a day. These parts are boiled, pressed for their oil, and the refuse is sold for manufacture into dressing for soil. It is not yet possible to manufacture olive oil and anchovy paste out of the heads of herring. The bodies and tails of the herring are washed, laid upon wire racks, baked in a great oven, packed in tin boxes by girls, covered with cotton-seed oil, the boxes are soldered, heated again in the oil, and finally packed in wooden boxes for shipment. The process need not be described at great length. It does not appear to be a very cleanly process, but very likely it is as much so as that of putting up veritable sardines. The larger fish are put up in oval tin boxes and are called "sea trout." Still other herrings are dubbed "eagle fish," and, finally, there is a process of putting up the fish in a spiced preparation which gives them the name of "mustard sardines."

Makers of oleomargarine, I believe, sometimes eat their product on warm brown bread, and profess to like it. So some of the sardine canners here eat their herring, and declare that it is good. Perhaps it is. But it is not sardine. The labels upon the boxes are all lies. The word Paris upon them and the head of the late Emperor Napoleon suggest a falsehood. The assertion that the contents are sardines, put up in the best olive oil, is a direct and unqualified misstatement. If herring, put up in the oil of cotton-seed, make a palatable dish, very well. Let those eat it who wish to do so. To put it up in imitation of something else is a barefaced fraud, which the law should forbid and punish.—Eastport Cor. Boston Advertiser.

A LAND OF PERPETUAL SALUTES.

A grievance which I, in common with a majority of foreign residents in Yokohama complain, says a correspondent of the St. James' Gazette, at Yokohama, is the extent to which the practice of firing naval salutes is carried. Yokohama is not a Japanese port merely, the treaties having opened it to nearly all of the principal nations of the world; and the body of residents is composed of some fifteen nationalities. It is not, therefore, one port, but fifteen ports in one. The national anniversaries of fifteen nations are celebrated; the fleets of many of them assemble in these waters; ceremonial calls are made upon Japanese officials and between the men-of-war, and are politely returned; the ministers and consuls of fifteen powers interchange calls, and the flags of admirals and commodores, and the port itself must be treated with due attention. These events are celebrated, visitors are honored, and the flags are saluted, by firing a certain number of rounds of blank cartridge; the consequence being that from 8 a. m. to sunset—Sunday included, in the case of ships other than British—there is a species of continuous cannonade. Many vessels have no saluting battery, and fire heavy guns which shake the houses, and occasionally break windows and do other small damage. One Sunday recently the settlement was disturbed at 5:10 a. m. by a furious and long-sustained cannonade, the cause of which was unknown. Russian, French, German and Japanese vessels were engaged in offering a parting salute to Admiral Lessoffsky, who was leaving for home in the corvette Europe. This is but one instance of many of almost daily occurrence.

FINE FLOORING.

The finest floors are said to be seen in Russia. For those of the highest grade tropical woods are exclusively employed. Fir and pine are never used, as in consequence of their sticky character they attract and retain dirt, and thereby soon become blackened. Pitch pine, too, is liable to shrink, even after being well-seasoned. The mosaic wood floors in Russia are often of extraordinary beauty. One in the summer palace is of small squares of ebony, inlaid with mother-of-pearl. A considerable trade is done in Dantzic and Riga by exporting small blocks of oak for parquet floors. There is an active demand for these in France and Germany, but none in England.

There is a growing sentiment in favor of making burglary a capitol crime, punishable by hanging.

We say this because we believe that the health, happiness and prosperity of the people depend upon the proper use of these medicines, which have proved so successful in eradicating disease and defeating death. TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

NECESSITATING A SURGICAL OPERATION—LOVING MOTHER ATTEMPTS TO TAKE A PAIR OF SHEARS FROM HER CHILD.

Parents Be Careful.

Domestic accidents are common to women, and some of them are very serious. Mrs. Warner, of South Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., some weeks ago attempted to take from her child a pair of shears with which it was playing. A slight struggle ensued, in which the point of the shears entered Mrs. Warner's left eye, entirely destroying the sight. Her family physician did what he could, but intensely painful inflammation arose, which, by sympathy, threatened the loss of the other eye. Total blindness to a woman having the care of a household is an irretrievable calamity. In this strait Mrs. W— applied to the well-known and skillful surgeon. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who removed the injured eye by a very successful operation, setting aside all danger of further harm to the sight of the other eye. But, owing to pain and mental distress, her system needed a tonic and restorative medicine. To do this work the Doctor prescribed "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which sustained its reputation and laid a sure foundation of health.

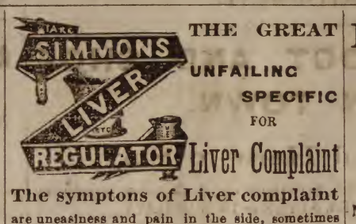
Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy removes all impurities from the blood, regulates the Liver and Kidneys. Cures Constipation, and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to Females. It is for sale by all our druggists at ONE DOLLAR a bottle. oct5—1m

DIRECTIONS

For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c, insert with little finger a particle of the balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane.

For Deafness.

Apply a particle into the ear.



ELY'S CREAM BALM

Having gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone, recognized as a wonderful remedy. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head and snuffles it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeabld. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

Worldly Trifles.

It is very mean to ask a man whose wife is a shrew if it is hot enough for him, or if it's scold enough for him.

Where pangs the mortal flesh assail,
And give a bitterness to life.
Making the cheek with anguish pale,
And the fierce internal strife;
Then Sanford's Ginger soothes the pain
And smiling Health looks up again.

"Do you like philology?" asked the scientific gent of the pink damsel who sat opposite to him at dinner. "Ye-es rather," she answered slowly, "but father thinks we'd better confine ourselves mostly to fish this season."

A good Baptist clergyman of Bergen, N. Y., a strong temperance man, suffered with kidney trouble, neuralgia, and dizziness almost to blindness, over two years after he was told that Hop Bitters would cure him, because he was afraid of and prejudiced against "Bitters." Since his cure he says none need fear but trust in Hop Bitters.

A coal merchant was discharging a man who had been working for him, when the employee said: "Well I've learned one thing while working for you." "What is it, you scamp?" "I've learned that 1700 pounds make a ton.

A fashionable paper says: "Gathered waists are much worn." If the men would gather the waists carefully, and not squeeze so like blazes, they would not be worn so much.

Long indulgence in over eating or drinking produces a disorganized Liver, and all the evils attendant upon such derangements; depression of spirits, habitual costiveness, nervous exhaustion, indigestion; pain in the head, with nausea; fullness of stomach after meals, chillness, general debility and languor. Seek relief from Simmons' Liver Regulator.

"It is a very valuable remedy for dyspepsia, sick headache, torpid liver and such like diseases.
"W. S. Holt, Pres. of S.W.R.R. Co. of Ga." oct12 1m

It was a little hard to say of a doctor who was taking a stroll in a churchyard, that he had gone to pay a visit to some of his old patients.

Why don't you try Carter's Little Liver Pills? They are a positive cure for sick headache and all the ills produced by disordered liver. Only one a dose.

In reply to the question, "Will the coming man be bald," the Norristown Herald affirms that "he generally is when he first comes."

Invigorating food for the brain and nerves is what we need in these days of rush and worry. Parker's Ginger Tonic restores the vital energies, and brings good health quicker than anything you can use.—Tribune. See adv.

A young lady with a big volume of household recipes is anxious to know the ingredients of making a sacrifice.

Backache is almost immediately relieved by wearing one of Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Backache Plasters. Try one and be free from pain. Price 25 cents.

Whittier tells the story of a certain Quaker "meeting" in New England, which was troubled by a brother who was "moved" to speak oftener than was for their best edification, and so passed the following resolution:—"It is the sense of this meeting that George C—— be advised to remain silent until such time as the Lord shall speak through him—more to our satisfaction."

ITCHING PILES—SYMPTOMS AND CURE.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes for $1.25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price in currency, or three cent postage stamps. Prepared only by Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, Pa., to whom letters should be addressed. Sold by all prominent druggists.
Wm. T. Lee, Agent, Peabody.

Burglars went through Henry Faxon's house Wednesday night and stole a lot of jewelry. It is a wonder they were not blinded by the glare of that diamond pin. Perhaps they were former customers, who have heard him denounce the nefarious business of liquor selling, and were anxious to take a load off his conscience by repaying themselves what they spent at Henry's bar when he was engaged in dragging men down to perdition at 10 cents a pull. Brace up, Henry! Rum did it.—Boston Globe.

If any invalid or sick person has the least doubt of the power and efficacy of Hop Bitters to cure them, they can find cases exactly like their own in their own neighborhood, with proof positive that they can be easily and permanently cured at a trifling cost—or ask your druggist or physician.

GREENWICH, Feb. 11, 1880.
Hop Bitters Co.—Sirs—I was given up by the doctors to die of scrofula consumption. Two bottles of your Bitters cured me. LEROY BREWER.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.
For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.
I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.
My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted. I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence. Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.
The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.
I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.
I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston
Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.
Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.
Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
Certainly Cures Consumption!
FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
ALWAYS CURES NIGHT SWEATS
FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
CURES DYSPEPSIA.
READ THE PROOF:
Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.
The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.
The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.
This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.
TESTIMONIALS from well known people near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible destroyer, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.
We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.
J. W. Manning the Veteran Nurseryman, says: Having over-exerted myself in my nursery giving me a weakness of the Stomach and Kidneys, I used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam—which has given me an appetite and proves better than any bitters, and is the most pleasant preparation to the taste that I have ever used.

FAITH WHITCOMB.
"It Cured Mother."
Winchester, Mass., July 12, 1881.
My mother came very near dying from pneumonia last winter, and her lungs were left in a weak condition. Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has stopped the cough and has cured her dizziness. It is the only medicine that would help her. Yours truly, B F Holbrook.
A Boston Merchant's Testimonial.
No 27 Court street, Boston, March 13, 1881.
My daughter was prostrated with a terrible cough, after other remedies had failed, and my daughter had become so much worse that we were all completely discouraged. She commenced the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam and after using it less than one month she is well. Shall be glad to answer all enquiries. B A Clark.
Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.
"Almost at Death's Door."
114 Shawmut street, Chelsea, March 1, '81.
I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, as strange as it may seem a fifteent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.
Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs. N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.
Write or call upon Mrs. Russell, and also upon her family Physician for further particulars.

Saved! Saved! Saved!
I am happy to say that Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has cured my cough, of which I had despaired of ever being cured. I can now sleep without coughing at all, all of which I owe to Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. I only now need strength.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM,
IS SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
PRICES, 50 CENTS AND 1 DOLLAR.

Peterson's Magazine for November is on our table ahead of all others, and better than ever. It leads off with a charming steel engraving, after Meyer Von Bremen, "Half Afraid." This is followed by one of those double-size, steel fashion-plates, superbly colored, only seen in this unrivaled lady's book. Then comes another engraving, "Lacy Hall," illustrating an exquisitely told love story; and then some fifty woodcuts of dresses, patterns in embroidery, etc., etc. There is also a superbly colored slipper-pattern, for braiding, in crimson and gold. The principal article is "A Day at Canterbury." With this number appears the Prospectus for 1882, when six original novelets will be given, and, in addition, a hundred shorter stories. A series of brilliantly illustrated stories, and articles like "Canterbury," will also appear. The price of "Peterson" is but two dollars a year, postage free. To clubs, the terms are even lower, viz.: two copies for $3.50, with a superb engraving (size 20 inches by 16), "Hush, Don't Wake Them," or a handsome Photograph Album, as a premium. Or four copies for $6.50, and an extra copy of the magazine itself as premium. Or five copies for $8.00, with both an extra copy and either the engraving or album for premium. For larger clubs, the premiums are still more tempting.—Now is the time to get up clubs for 1882. Address, Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The International Review for November has a table of contents of six articles of solid and enduring merit. The second part of M. August Langel's "Victor Hugo" completes one of the best critical estimates of that great French man of letters that has recently appeared. J. Brander Matthews is peculiarly at home in a critical article upon "The Plays of M. Octave Feuillet." The discussion by so high an authority as Dr. Wm. A. Hammond of the question of "The Punishability of the Insane" will be sure to attract attention from the medical profession and laymen alike. "Our Exports of Bread Stuffs," by Richard M. Edmonds, is specially timely in view of the discussions of the tariff now going on in England and the United States. Mr. James Grant Wilson brings the number worthily to a close. A. S. Barnes & Co., Publishers, New York.

The contents of the November number of the Popular Monthly are exceedingly interesting and entertaining, and afford much valuable information. Mr. Ackroyd's article on "The Photophone," with its eleven illustrations, "Amy Robsart," by N. Robinson, "The City of Rouen," by Prof. C. A. Joy, and other valuable papers make up its contents. In the department of fiction are the conclusion of Benedict's serial, "A Late Remorse;" a charming story by Jane G. Austin, "The Countess's Diamonds;" "Her Secret," by Walter E. McCann, and others. There are admirable sketches, thrilling adventures, some very excellent poems, and a miscellany embracing all sorts of subjects, entertaining and instructive. For comprehensiveness, excellence and cheapness, this publication is unrivaled. Address, Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The November number of The Sunday Magazine affords a literary and artistic treat; the articles possess great merit, and the embellishments are fine. The opening article, entitled, "Some American Theological Seminaries," by James L. Bowdoin, LL.D., is exceedingly interesting, and is the first publication of the kind that we have met with. The Rev. Dr. Deems continues the admirable essays entitled "Only," and sketches by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., who, it is announced, assumes editorial charge of The Sunday Magazine with the December number. His fine literary taste and great popularity will not fail to increase the already large circulation of this periodical Address, Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

To those who send three dollars for a year's subscription (beginning with the September number opening a new volume) to the office at Springfield, Mass., Good Company will send for seventy-five cents additional the twelve numbers for the past year, containing besides many short stories a serial in six installments by Ellen W. Olney, six articles on Arctic experiences and adventures by Frederick Schwatka, U. S. A., commander of the late Franklin expedition, an anonymous serial in six parts entitled "Mildred's Caprice."

Those who have not seen Good Company can send twenty-five cents for the September number, containing a twenty-two page story by Constance Fenimore Woolson; a twenty page story by Ellen W. Olney; a New England story entitled "Squog;" "The Atlanta Cotton Expositon," by Edward Atkinson, its originator.

The November number of Ballou's Magazine is issued, and has such a table of contents that we do not wonder the publishers are proud of their work, and that the people are eager to read it. The first article is an illustrated account of an American family's tour through Switzerland in which is woven a thread of romance, love, and adventure; and then follows a Thanksgiving story that will meet with approval as it is different from the general run of such tales. The variety is great, and the magazine will satisfy the tastes of all classes of people.

Published by Thome and Talbot, 23 Hawley Street, Boston, Mass., at only $1.50 per annum, postpaid, and for sale at all the news depots in the country at 15 cents a copy.

Speak to your neighbor about it, and get up some clubs this fall. Now is the time to start clubs for the new volume.

With the next number, the title of Scribner's Monthly becomes The Century Magazine. The first issue of the Century Magazine will have the general appearance of the old Scribner, but the page will be larger and without "rules," so that about fourteen pages of matter is added by the new arrangement. The publishers intend to emphasize the new series by a number (for November) of peculiar pictorial beauty and literary interest. One of the principal features of this number is the portrait of George Eliot, by Burton, which Mrs. Cross's family put forth through the Century Magazine as the authorized likeness of the great novelist.

The discussion of "The Christian Religion," by Col. Ingersoll and Judge Black, which was commenced in the August number of the North American Review, is continued in the November issue of that publication. Col. Ingersoll now replies to the strictures of his opponent and presents more fully than he has ever before done the logical reasons for his opposition to Christianity. An early number of the Review will contain an exhaustive reply. In a Symposium on Presidential inability, Judge Thomas M. Cooley, the Hon. Lyman Trumbull, Prof. Theodore W. Dwight, and Gen. B. F. Butler, discuss the several weighty problems arising out of Article 2 of the Constitution, and the Marquis of Blanford and Senator Geo. F. Hoar have articles.

The Art Amateur for October contains a great variety of designs for china painting, art needlework and general decoration. The frontispiece is a Deck plaque with a charming border of doves, drawn by Camille Piton. Sketches of paintings by G. H. Boughton and J. J. Cusachs, and two pages of portrait sketches by Emile Bayard, full of chic and spirit, form specially attractive features. The practical instruction in this number relates especially to harmony in colors, monograms, needlework, china painting and painting in water colors. Price $4 per annum; 35 cents a number. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

The Century Co., formerly Scribner & Co., have taken possession of their new quarters in the fifth story of No. 33 E. 17th street, North Union Square. A more delightful place of business it would be hard to imagine. The view from the front windows is far-reaching, overlooking Union Square, and extending over the house-tops down Broadway. In the front part of the floor are the desks of the clerical force, and over in the south-east corner is the private office of Mr. Roswell Smith, the president of the company.—Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

The Score for October is full of timely articles on musical subjects, besides containing some excellent music. The series of articles on "German songs and song writers," by Louis C. Elson, is continued, and an interesting sketch of Schubert is given. A strong article against the doggerel and "popular" songs about the President appears. The paragraphic department is especially well filled. The Score is published by J. F. Perry & Co., 13 West Street, Boston.

Mr. Editor,—I see an article in the Salem Register announcing that there is to be an excursion over the Eastern R. Road to Boston from Salem and the surrounding towns—fare from Peabody, Salem, etc., up and back, 70 cents; two cents a mile; about the same price that the Lynn people pay for single tickets, and not as cheap as the commutation tickets from Lynn, and no cheaper than the regular commutation tickets from Salem and Peabody. If the E. R. R. wish to get up a rush they ought to put the tickets at a price that will induce the people to ride as other roads do.—The Fitchburg has two excursions this week at one cent a mile from Boston to North Adams. The Boston & Albany have had several from Springfield to Boston at about one half of a cent per mile. The New York & New England R. R., and the Old Colony, at about the same rates. Why is it that the E. R. R. advertise excursion trains when the rates are not as low per mile as the regular rates from Boston to same cities or towns on the line of their road?

A $10.00 Bible Prize.—The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly in the prize puzzle department of their Monthly for November offer the following easy way for some one to make $10.

To the person telling how many times the word Abraham is used in the New Testament Scriptures (not the New Revision) by Nov. 10th, 1881, we will give $10.00 in gold as a prize. The money will be forwarded to the winner November 15th, 1881. Those who try for the prize must send 20 cents with their answer, for which they will receive the December number of the Monthly, an excellent Magazine of 32 pages, in which will be published the address of the winner of the prize, with the correct answer. Address, Rutledge Publishing Company, Easton, Pa.

A GIGANTIC FALL AND WINTER OPENING!

BY A BRANCH OF THE LARGEST CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT IN AMERICA.

$80,000!

EIGHTY THOUSAND Dollars' worth of Men's, Youths', Boys' and Children's Fine and Medium Clothing to be placed on exhibition by one of the Largest Clothing Manufacturers in the United States.

ON THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1881,

WE SHALL HAVE PLACED UPON OUR COUNTERS THE

Largest and Most Elegant Display of Fine and Medium Clothing !

That it has ever been our pleasure to exhibit to the citizens of Essex County. We have taken especial pains this season in selecting our Domestic Goods from the most popular woolen mills in the United States, such as the Globe, Sawyer, Assabet, Eddy's, Broadbrook, Middlesex, Norwalk, Riverside, Harris, &c., &c. We KNOW our Garments are right as we manufacture them ourselves and employ none but first-class workmen. We boldly assert that we can show the finest assortment of Young Men's Dress and Business Suits and Overcoats ever seen in any retail establishment outside of the cities of New York or Boston. It is conceded by our Patrons and by many of our Competitors that our Garments are made and trimmed much better and fit better than the ordinary custom work,

AND ARE SOLD AT A MUCH LESS PRICE.

We give below a list of our FALL AND WINTER GARMENTS, made from Foreign and Domestic fabrics :—

1000 Men's Business Suits,
1000 Men's Dress Suits,
2000 Boys' and Children's School and Dress Suits. (3000) Three Thousand Men's, Youths', Boys' and Children's Heavy Overcoats.
5000 Men's Pantaloons,
500 Men's Fall Overcoats,

HEAVY WEIGHT OVERCOATS

Receive the first attention of buyers of Winter Clothing, and we have prepared such a line of them as cannot fail to interest the most critical. Every grade of these goods, from the lowest to the most expensive, are confidently recommended as sustaining the specialty of style, cut and workmanship which we have initiated. Our Heavy Overcoats represent the following different styles: 75 Different Styles Men's Overcoats, 60 Different Styles Youths' Overcoats, 35 Different Styles Boys' Overcoats, 25 Different Styles Chil. Overcoats, making in all 195 Different Styles to select from. Prices of Men's and Youths' Overcoats, $3.00 and $30.00. 500 Men's Extra Heavy Ulsters, made with wide, deep collars, just the thing for men who are exposed to the cold weather. Prices from $6.00 to $25. Prices of Boys' Overcoats, $2.50 to $10. Prices of Children's Overcoats, $1.50 to $10.00. Our Young Men's Suits are made up in the following styles: Plain Cutaway Sack, Double Breasted Sack, Derby Frock, Plain Cutaway Frock, Four Button Cutaway Frock, and Paris Derby Frock.

BOYS' AND CHILDREN'S SPECIAL DEPARTMENT.

We never forget the little folks, as they grow up to be men. This department is stocked to its utmost with all the novelties of 1881. Mothers who desire to dress their little ones in handsome and stylish garment should call and examine our immense stock of Boys' and Children's Clothing, as we have many styles which cannot be found elsewhere. Our unparallelled success in Salem is due to the following facts: 1st. We manufacture our own Clothing. 2d. We never are undersold and never will be. 3d. No misrepresentation of goods. 4th. All garments guaranteed to fit. 5th. No extra charges made for alteration. 6th. Courteous Treatment. 7th. Strictly one price and no deviation. Our Motto: "SQUARE DEALING, STRICTLY ONE PRICE."

NAUMKEAG CLOTHING COMPANY, 179 ESSEX STREET, SALEM.

☞ REMEMBER! Our Headquarters, Manufactory and Wholesale Rooms, 395 to 403 Washington St., Boston are the largest in the United States.

Enthusiastic Town Meeting.

Soldiers' Monument to be Dedicated.

NO POSTPONEMENT UNTIL SPRING.

The Desired Number of Votes Obtained.

A town meeting, called for last Monday evening, to see what action, if any, the town would take relative to appropriating a sum of money for the dedication of the Soldiers' Monument, was well attended, in spite of the stormy weather, and a very enthusiastic meeting was held. It showed by its spirit and by the prompt response to whatever was said in favor of the object of the meeting, that the majority of our citizens were in favor of completing the work begun by the Monument Committee, when they gave to the town the product of their labors in the enduring granite which adorns the Square. The meeting was called to order and the warrant read by N. H. Poor, Esq.—Isaac Hardy was chosen Moderator. Mr. Charles D. Howard offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of five citizens be appointed, and instructed to to take action for an immediate dedication of the new Soldiers' Monument, in connection with a committee from Post 50, G. A. R., and that it be authorized to draw upon the Town Treasurer for a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars: all bills to be approved by the chairman and secretary.

Mr. B. M. Hills moved that the resolution be adopted. Mr. Randall suggested that fifteen minutes be allowed for discussion, and that then an informal ballot be taken. No one appearing to have anything to say in opposition to the resolution, an informal ballot was taken, resulting in 49 voting in the affirmative and none in the negative. On motion of Geo. F. Barnes, the meeting proceeded to a formal ballot by each person passing before the Moderator and being counted. Mr. John Pinder suggested that the dedication be postponed until next spring, which brought up Mr. Jas. P. King, who, in a short, ringing speech, advocated the immediate dedication, showing that it would be impossible to dedicate it Memorial Day, and that the proper time to do it was now. He was applauded at every point, and it became evident that the sympathy of the entire meeting was with the speaker. The ballot at once commenced and 101 men passed in front of the desk voting in the affirmative, and there being no opposition. A committee of three, consisting of Jas. P. King, D. P. Grosvenor, Jr., and John J. Bartlett, were appointed to retire and present to the meeting the names of a committee of five citizens, who were to act in conjunction with a committee from Post 50, G. A. R.—They reported the names of the following gentlemen who were accepted by the meeting: C. W. Osborn, S. F. Blaney, Jas. Fallon, Mayhew S. Clark, Isaac Hardy. After a motion that the committee be empowered to fill their own vacancies, the meeting adjourned at an early hour.

PEABODY, Oct. 17th, 1881.

MR. EDITOR, — I would inquire through your columns of our citizen lawyers, if a bankrupt street railway is common nuisance? If so, the modus operandi of getting rid of said nuisance. It seems to the writer of this that tax paying citizens ought to be protected from such irresponsible nuisances.—Have the Naumkeag Street Railway a right, legal or moral, to run their street cars through our streets to-day? By the courts of Massachusetts they are owing a tax paying citizen of Peabody, one thousand dollars to-day, and refuse to pay said sum, therefore, they are either bankrupt, or can pay the bill; if the former, they are a nuisance to our harm, if the latter, the town of Peabody ought to clean every rail they use from our streets. Should the citizens of the town be bulldozed by a defunct lawyer on quibbles and put-offs? What a delightful feeling that man must have as men, women and even little boys and girls point him out as the one who is responsible for such mean, dirty, contemptible squirming.

N. B. Since the above was written, the town having voted to dedicate the new monument, I move that five citizens wait on the President of the N. S. R., so this grand opportunity for proving their solvency should not be lost.

Yours, in confidence,

JUSTICE.

The Second Essex Senatorial Convention was held at the Essex House, Salem, last Friday afternoon. Robert S. Rantoul called to order, and Amos Merrill of Peabody was elected President and Wm. H. Coates of Marblehead Secretary. On motion by Jas. P. King of Peabody, Nathaniel A. Horton of Salem was nominated by acclamation for the Senate. A committee of three was appointed to wait upon Mr. Horton and request him to come into the convention. Joseph W. Lefavour of Salem was elected a member of the State Central Committee. It was voted that the chairmen of the town and city committees of the district, together with the member of the State Central Committee constitute the District Committee. The committee to wait upon Mr. Horton returned with the candidate, who accepted the nomination with appropriate and fitting remarks, after which the meeting adjourned.

The Democratic County, Councillor and Senatorial Conventions were held last Wednesday at Salem. Mr. George W. Brown, of Marblehead, was nominated for County Commisioner, and Mr. Leverett S. Tuckerman, of Salem, for Clerk of Courts. The same County Committee were re-chosen. Mr. Forrest L. Evans, of Salem, was nominated for Councillor, and Mr. Joseph Gregory of Marblehead, for Senator. Mr. James L. Murphy of Salem, was elected a member of the State Central Committee.

THE NOMINATIONS OF THE PROHIBITORY PARTY.—Governor, Hon. Chas. Almy, of New Bedford; Lieutenant Governor, T. K. Earle, of Worcester; Secretary of State, Solomon F. Root, of Dalton; Treasurer and Receiver-General, T. J. Lothrop, of Taunton; Auditor, Jonathan Buck, of Harwich; Attorney-General, Samuel M. Fairfield, of Malden.

A valuable horse belonging to C. O. Stone, while being driven from Peabody to Lynn, on Sunday, was considerably injured by stepping on a large nail, which penetrated the foot the entire length, and disabled him from work. The nail was extracted as soon as possible, and a change was made on the return trip.

The Lawrence Soldiers' Monument is to be dedicated in that city this evening. As the city government could not agree on an appropriation, the monument committee, who have about $400 remaining in the treasury, decided to have some simple exercises at the site of the monument. The people were invited to be present.

The Rehearsals of the Salem Oratorio Society for the present season will be held on Tuesday evenings and not on Thursday evenings as some have supposed from a notice recently published. Next week, however, the rehearsal will take place upon Friday evening, as Mr. Zerrahn will not be able to conduct on Tuesday evening of that week.

Rev. H. S. Hastings of Boston, delivered a lecture on temperance at the Cong. Church last Sunday. The speaker used copious quotations from the Bible, and contrasted the punishment of intemperate people of those days with the light punishment they receive at the present time. As a whole the lecture was quite interesting. A collection was taken.

Now is the time to prepare yourselves for the cold fall and winter weather. Overcoats and winter suits should be provided, and the conundrum as to where to buy is answered in the following: Mr. Winslow has as fine a line of ready-made clothing as can be found anywhere, in fact, his stock was never more complete than at present. Don't put it off, but call at once, at Winslow's.

The Spauldings, with their bells and other musical novelties, gave one of their fine entertainments in Peabody Institute, last Wednesday evening.—Georgie Dean Spaulding was at her best with harp, bells and cornet, the Werners were amusing in the character sketches without being being coarse or vulgar, and Miss Stratton showed, in the single selection rendered, that she is a superior elocutionist. A fair audience was in attendance, and showed their appreciation by frequent applause.

Our readers will bear in mind that registration of voters will cease Saturday evening, Nov. 5th, and that it will be necessary to have their names on the voting list before that time in order to vote at the election next Tuesday. The list was published in our last issue, and unless their names are there persons desiring to vote must present themselves for registration before Saturday evening. We trust no voter will be debarred from the privilege by neglecting to comply with the provisions of the law. We desire to see a full and fair vote.

J. Jay Watson's entertainment company will give an entertainment consisting of an attractive and varied programme, at the Institute, Nov. 17, under the auspices of Union Post, G. A. R. Tickets will be for sale at B. F. Stevens', on Nov. 10.

Autumn Days.

BY LYDIA DAVIS THOMSON.

Early the Spring bade us adieu,
And quickly passed the Summer, too—
Both vanished like a dream.
And now the Autumn days we greet,
The time when earth and heaven meet,
And grandeur reigns supreme.

I watch the leaflets coming down,
The sturdy oaks, so sere and brown,
The maple's red and gold.
And as they fall they singing say,
Chanting their requiem all the way,
The year its tale has told.

The winds take up the sweet refrain,
Singing it o'er and o'er again,
Throughout the livelong day;
The sun withdraws his scorching rays,
Behind the autumn's purple haze
Hiding himself away.

Afar I hear the woodland rills
Sing low behind the quiet hills;
The reaper's harvest song
Commingles with the falling leaves
The while he busily binds his sheaves,
Dreamily, all day long.

And apples rosy as the morn,
With heap on heap of golden corn,
Await the harvest home;
Now children change their summer play,
And through the flaming woods all day
Afar they love to roam,

In search of nuts all ripened brown,
Returning when the sun goes down.
While evening shadows fall;
With sleepy hum of insect life
The slumbrous air all day is rife.
And quiet reigns o'er all.

Dear, dreamy days, I love thee best
When tired Nature goes to rest,
Sung by the winds to sleep.
Oh, when life's days for me are told,
When like the year I'm growing old,
The shadows o'er me creep,

May I, glad year, have lived like thee;
That when stern Ayarel calls for me,
I've something more than leaves;
May it be mine these words to say,
When I from earth have passed away,
"Master, behold my sheaves."

Imaginary Evils.

Let to-morrow take care of to-morrow:
Leave things of the future to fate,
What's the use to anticipate sorrow?
Life's troubles come never too late!
If to hope overmuch be an error,
'Tis one that the wise have preferred;
And how often have hearts been in terror
Of evils that never occurred.

Have faith and thy faith will sustain thee,
Permit not suspicion and care
With invisible bonds to embrace thee,
But bear what God gives thee to bear.
By this spirit supported and gladdened,
Be ne'er by "forebodings" deterred;
But think how oft hearts have been sadden'd
By fear—of what never occurred.

Let to-morrow take care of to-morrow:
Short and dark as our life may appear,
We may make it still shorter by sorrow—
Still shorter by folly and fear.
Half our troubles are half our invention,
And often from blessing conferred!
Have we shrunk in wild apprehension
Of evils—that never occured.

The Family.

The family is like a book—
The children are the leaves.
The parents are the covers, that Protective beauty gives.

At first the pages of the book
Are blank and purely fair,
But Time soon writeth memories,
And painteth pictures there.

Love is the little golden clasp
That bindeth up the trust;
O, break it not, lest all the leaves,
Shall scatter and be lost.

Miscellaneous.

Reasons for Trust in God.

BY REV. L. L. WOOD.

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble; therefore will not we fear though the earth be removed and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea."—Psalms 46: 1-2.

When we read the history of ancient empires which once gave laws to the world and trace them to their decay, or when we visit the site of their imperial powers for successive ages and find only sad monuments of their decayed greatness, the melancholy question arises, which the desolation of the places suggests, and we inquire, "Why are these mouldering ruins and these departed glories?" No one wanders among the crumbling vestages of ancient grandeur without saddened thoughts. But when we see written on these scenes of desolation, and hear in the voice of the wind sighing through these ruins of fallen empires, that God wrought this, we get a new and startling view of Deity. "Come behold the works of the Lord what desolation he hath made in the earth. He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; He breaketh the bow and cutteth the spear in sunder. He burneth the chariot in the fire." And then the Psalmist sung, "The Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge."

It was in the protection of such a God that the sweet singer of Israel could take courage. God's children are safe under Divine protection. This is the thought of the Psalmist, enforced by many a miraculous intervention of God, on behalf of his people in older times, and a thought fitting to be sung (as the dedication of the psalm informs us) "To the sons of Korah," who were either its authors or performers "upon Alamoth," which means, by the young women in their soprano voices, for Divine worship. The Psalm suggests

REASONS FOR CONFIDENCE IN GOD.

1. And first because God has power to destroy his enemies.

We are accustomed to contemplate the mercy of the Deity. We behold him descending in compassion, heralded by heavenly choirs and attended by angel cohorts; encircling the earth in his Infinite compassion; bridging the awful abyss of death; restoring the lost harmony to nation's universal discord; coming through all the immensity of the spheres, like the radiance of the sun, and impressing upon man his own, Divine image; placing the scepter of power in his hand and a crown of glory on his head, and constituting him creation's lord. But we are not accustomed to contemplate our God as the offended majesty of heaven, terrible in fury, dreadful in power, taking vengeance on his adversaries and pouring the thunders of his wrath upon the guilty nations of a sinful world. And yet this is our God, for "Our God is a consuming fire." We forget that God is as Infinite in wrath as in love, that his justice is commensurate with his mercy and that otherwise he would not be Deity. "Be still and know that I am God. I will be exalted among the heathen. I will be exalted in the earth."

Yes, there is something for us in the eternal power of God. "The eternal God is with us and underneath are the everlasting arms." I do not wonder that Luther, in his long struggles with the papal darkness of the sixteenth century, used to say when his heart was sad, "Let us read the 46th Psalm:" "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear though the earth be removed and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea.—Though the waters roar thereof and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swellings thereof. There is a river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the most holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High. God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved. God shall help her and that right early. The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved, he uttered his voice, the earth melted. The Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge."

2. A second reason is that God alone can save us.

The individual soul sometimes feels the force of this solemn truth when overwhelmed with a consciousness of its guilt and sin before the searching eye of God; or when suddenly thrown into some desperate extremity and it cries in despair to Heaven, saying, "All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me;" or when beneath the sinking frailties of dissolving nature, the trembling soul goes down into the gathering shadows and darkness of the valley of death.

But it is in the light of the nation's safety and hope that I would use my text and improve this occasion. Indeed, I should feel guilty of recreancy to my solemn duty did I not call your attention, dear friends, to our beloved country's weal in this hour. For there was scarcely ever an occasion on which a matter of deep, political interest was so blended and joined with an event concerning which we feel such a deep and affecting tenderness. What mean these emblems of mourning that meet our eyes to-day on every hand and that drape our whole land from ocean to ocean and from the northern lakes to the Southern gulf? It is because an event so sad and so utterly without provocation—as it seems to us—has desolated all our hearts, called forth the touching sympathies of an observing world and hushed those political factions whose work ended more suddenly and dreadfully than they ever dreamed. Is there not in this a voice that speaks to our whole land?

This, therefore, is all the apology I have to offer for the improvement of this occasion to lead your thoughts in a more public and political avenue than (in the minds of some of you) may be suited to the ordinary Sabbath ministrations.

When the immortal Lincoln fell by the assassin's hand, though the event came, like a wrathful thunder bolt, through the breaking clouds of national gloom, it was, after all, but the natural out-come of that dreadful strife of which it was the end, and the chief magistrate of the nation was to be added to that awful holocaust which immolated 400,000 of America's sons upon the altars of our country's freedom. But when the illustrious Garfield, whose generous qualities of heart and whose unusually brilliant powers of mind made him so distinguished, fell, stricken by the hand of a dastardly assassin, the event seemed so unprovoked and the stroke seemed so misdirected that the whole nation like "Rachel, weeping for her children, refuses to be comforted." And however much we may seek to account for the event as the work of a poor wretch whose brain was unsettled, we cannot disconnect this result from the causes which produced it. The conviction will thrust itself upon us that if it were not for the quarrelling factions in the council halls of the nation the country would not be in mourning to-day. And then, when we go a link further back in the chain of connections, we are still more humiliated with the smallness and unworthiness of the issue which divided these factions of the once great political party of this land. It was not a strife between the two great parties which have hitherto confronted each other, on the field of political strife—it was not a conflict between Democrats and Republicans. It was an internecine strife between factions of one party who, because the great issues which once gave them prestage had long since been settled, have dropped themselves down to wrangle over the honors and emoluments of office. And when our attention is called to the extent and magnitude of this factious spirit permeating all ranks of politicians, as we are taught it by this event, we may well call upon God to purify our politics and save our nation before it is too late. In our extremity we may well lift our eyes to the Heavens whence cometh our only help and say, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." If this dreadful event had been the result of the adjustment of that great evil which causes nine tenths of the crime and pauperism of our land and which some of our national legislators have called the "gigantic crime of crimes," it would have seemed less humiliating, but even then the dreadful cost of the sacrifice would have been too great to bear. But to sacrifice the noble and valuable life of our President to this insane lust for power and party spoils shows, as perhaps nothing else could show, the woefully degenerate state to which our politics are fallen.

'I doubt not this is an unwelcome theme to some of you, my dear friends, and I know full well that the propriety and wisdom of presenting it to-day will be questioned. It is an unpleasant theme to all of us, most certainly. But friends, that day may come, in the not far distant future, when God's children and all law-abiding citizens will see eye to eye in regard to the political importance of intemperance and all that system of wrongs and evils of which she is the foul nurturess. And when that day comes we shall regard no time too sacred for the consideration of this subject and possibly we may look back to this day as more sadly ominous of the future than we now dream.

Our nation is peculiar to all others in its political institution. The ballot of a naturalized citizen who knows just enough to spell out his own name and to sell his vote for a glass of rum, counts just as much towards the election of a politician to office as the vote of a millionaire, and is much more easily obtained. This class of citizens, which we might be justified in terming the drinking and criminal class, the Democratic party bids for openly, and the Republican party covertly; and this with the knowledge and sanction of the party leaders.

So long ago as 1872, when the Republican party met in Philadelphia, in the month of June, to nominate candidates for President and other national officers, it put forth this statement in its declaration of principles, viz.: "The Republican party propose to respect the rights reserved by the people to themselves as carefully as the powers delegated by themselves to the State and to the Federal Government. It disapproves of a resort to unconstitutional laws for the purpose of removing evils by interference with rights not surrendered by the people to either state or national governments." This was the 16th resolution of the platform—so called—and was prepared by Herman Raster of Chicago, the editor-in-chief of the German Republican newspaper of the great North West. The language is ambiguous, and does not strike the casual reader as otherwise objectionable. But wide-awake temperance people believed it was a bid for the whiskey beer-drinking and Sabbath desecrating vote of the country. Accordingly Mr. J. M. Miller, of Portsmouth, Michigan, wrote Mr. Raster the following letter of inquiry:

PORTSMOUTH, MICH., July 8, '72.
MR. RASTER: Dear Sir:—
You are credited with the authorship of the 16th resolution of the Philadelphia platform, and as there is some difference of opinion in reference to what evils are alluded to, if you would condescend to write me a line of explanation, it may serve the cause of truth and free government.
Yours, etc.,
J. M. MILLER.

The following was Mr. Raster's reply:

CHICAGO, ILL., July 10, '72.
J. M. MILLER: Dear Sir:—
In reply to yours of July 8th, I have to say that I have prepared the 16th resolution of the Philadelphia platform, and that it was adopted by the platform committee with the full and explicit understanding that its purpose was the discountenancing of all so-called temperance (prohibitory) and Sunday laws. This purpose was meant to be expressly with reference to those rights of the people which had not been delegated to either state or national governments.
Very respectfully yours,
HERMAN RASTER.

This statement of Mr. Raster has never been denied by the authorities of the Republican party, for the simple reason that they can not deny it, for it is the truth. This but too truly shows the class of citizens who hold the balance of power in this country, and who rule our politics, a class of citizens constantly being fed by the vast number of emigrants from the old world—last year 600,000 emigrants landing on our shores. These bring to us the whiskey and beer-drinking and Sabbath-desecrating propensities in which they have been reared, and become an easy prey to the politicians. And unless our franchize laws are elevated above the reach of this class of voters, the very weapons by which the American nation has achieved its present standing before the world, will be turned against itself and will prove its ultimate destruction.—And when we remember that the population of this country is doubling about once in every twenty-five years, we may well say that God alone can save this nation from that destruction which has marked the history of all ages of a godless humanity.

3. A third reason for confidence in God is because He is willing and able to save us.

Friends, I am not a pessimist, nor an alarmist, nor a croaker. But I believe that our trust must not be in political organizations, however essential they may be to counteract each other, in a free government. I find on investigation that fifteen of the United States have at some period, for a shorter or longer time, had on their statute books a law prohibiting the liquor traffic. Of these fifteen states, five of them, at the time of enacting the law, had Democratic Governors and legislators; six of them were under the old Whig administration; one American in the days of the Know-nothing party; one Fusionist; one—Kansas—prohibition; and one Republican. It only teaches us the folly of putting our trust in any political party in the work of moral reform. Certainly the records are very adverse to our committing the temperance reform to that great party for which the greatest moral purity is so flippantly claimed. It is the teachings of history that no political party ever reforms, or goes beyond the specific purpose for which it was organized, or rises above the average sentiment of its membership. So, too, we are taught not to put our trust in princes. Our hope is not in great statesmen, is not in Governors and Presidents. And when we elect our political leaders we do not elect men but we elect parties to office; we elect parties who turn more than 80,000 men out of governmental positions, once in every four years, to make room for a host of friends and constituents who are scrambling for the smallest crumbs of political preferment; we elect parties whose political factions wrangle over the ins and outs of office and with what humiliating and fatal results the last presidential election has shown to a gazing world. We must follow higher foot-prints than those of human governments, we must obey the guidance of nobler hands than those of earthly leaders. "God is our refuge and strength; a very present help in trouble." "The Lord of hosts is with us: the God of Jacob is our refuge."

It is this thought which affords us comfort in a time that would otherwise be a time of encompassing gloom.—"There is a river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God. * * * God is in the midst of her: she shall not be moved: God shall help her and that right early." It is this thought which encourages God's people to pray when others stand aghast or spend their strength for naught. As slavery never went down until God's children voted, yea, and fought as they prayed; so I believe the great political evils that confront us to-day, and especially that greatest of all evils of modern time, will not be removed until the christian people of this land shall rise to a higher and broader conception of their responsibility, and lay hold of the Omnipotent arm of Him who is "our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." This was the distinguishing feature of the woman's crusade a few years ago, when the pious women of America, girded with divine strength, entered hitherto untrodden paths of public conflict and lifted their work so high in its moral dignity as to overawe the opposition of their enemies and the fears of the faint-hearted, and carried their holy warfare into the camp of the enemy, into the breathing-holes of perdition.

"They prayed them and they sung them out,
Those spirits dark as hell,
And holy words and prayer and shout
Were heard where demons dwell."

Why might not public sentiment also have been elevated to sustain that work by a well-executed law, that it might not soon have been lost and forgotten? "Is not the Lord in Zion? is not her king in Him?" "Is there no balm in Gilead? is there no physician there? Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?"

Ah, friends, God has both the disposition and the ability to help his people. It is this thought that encourages us to believe that He will bring good out of this national calamity that saddens all our hearts to-day. As pure and sparkling springs of water gush up from the desolate expanse of yawning fissures and masses of scoria that surround burning mountains, and then wend their way amid the blasted waste, glinting joy and brightness with their soft belts of living green and blooming flowers, so God can bring out of moral volcanoes, more wrathful than Vesuvius, refreshing lessons of joyous confidence to his people—lessons which shall be all the more impressive from their ghastly surroundings. A few years ago dreadful war converted this continent into one "vast crater spouting fire and blood." But while it developed the fiercest passions of strife on the field of battle, it no less powerfully developed the tenderer sentiment of personal kindness in the home life of the nation, that found their out-lets in the Sanitary and Christian Commissions and organized systems of comprehensive munificence that were without a parallel in the annals of ancient and modern warfare. So out of this dark event which has sent a pang of sorrow, as acute as though it were a domestic visitation into every family in this nation, God can bring blessings not otherwise attainable. Already these are appearing in the expressions of sympathy from all lands and in the silencing of all the factious elements in our own country. We may rest assured that the Eye which gages the sparrow's fall will not suffer this event to pass unnoticed, nor its lessons to be wholly lost.

Our President has fallen by the hand of an assassin, who should be judged by his responsibility rather than by his sanity or insanity. As a disappointed office-seeker, he is a type of a vast army of political vampires who would suck the life of this government, which has the elements of the best government the sun shines upon in all his journey. As such a character he ought to be made an example of in these days so rife with the spirit of communism and regicide. But back of all this comes the conviction that our President has fallen a victim of the spoil system of our government, a system which gave indications of making his term of office as turbulent and unhappy as any presidential term in a time of peace, and in his sad and untimely death there is a voice we must not ignore, a lesson this nation cannot forget. The government of ancient Rome became so corrupt that its moral bands fell apart with their own weight. Society became disintegrated and her emperors were elevated to their high position only to become prominent marks for the assassin's knife. We believe God has spared this government for a better use and a nobler end than this, and, with that bereaved family to whom our Chief Magistrate was more and dearer than a President, we will say, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."

And, as if prophetic of the good that may yet accrue, I was struck with the closing newspaper account of the funeral cortege. As the train of cars passed from the depot at Washington, bearing away the remains of our dead President with its mournful company, the rain drops ceased falling from the weeping skies, the clouds broke and the rainbow arched the cerulean dome of the heavens. It seemed as though God was reiterating his ancient covenant: "And it shall come to pass when I shall bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud: and I will remember my covenant which is between me and you." It suggested, also, Mr. Garfield's own words when he quielled the riotous throng which had gathered in the streets of New York city on reception of the news of President Lincoln's assassination, as he suddenly stepped forth, as if inspired of God, and uttered those words which have become classic: "God reigns, and the government at Washington still lives." Yes, we believe it still. God reigns, and the wheels of this great government move onward without a jostle and we will still trust God for His providence.

"Truth forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne,
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow
Keeping watch above his own."

As an exhibition of the intrinsic worth of St. Jacobs Oil, we think the case referred to, of Mrs. O. W. Hubbard, of this town, cured of Sciatic Rheumatism of long standing by the Oil, is certainly striking, and beyond all doubt, conclusive as to its efficacy. The remedy has our indorsement.—Sparta (Wis.) Herald.

THE WORLD of ART.—Art has a large place and a great influence in the world, and it is an undeniable fact that progressive civilization may be gauged by the degree of attention paid to objects of refined beauty and pure, elevating loveliness. It is not many years since, that good pictures could only be afforded by the very rich, but now all this is changed, and works of art of real merit are within the ready means of all, and few homes there are in which are not to be found evidences of culture in the right direction.

Home should be and can be made the most desirable place for all members of the family, and not least among its attractions can the pictures with which it is adorned be regarded. In no way can the attractiveness of home be increased so cheaply and effectively as by the addition of beautiful pictures. Pictures that but a few years since cost large sums of money may now be purchased for the veriest trifle, and if the purchaser has no taste in such matters, all that is necessary is for him to be sure that he purchases them of a reliable house. In this connection it may be proper for us to mention the Art Publishing firm of Messrs. George Stinson & Co., Portland, Maine, who during the last year, have sold over ten millions of pictures. It is believed that they pay more for postage stamps than any other house, not only in this country, but in the world at large. During the year 1880 they paid over $122,000 for postage stamps, and this year their postage bill will amount to about $150,000. Thus it will be seen that Messrs. Stinson & Co., pay at least the three hundreth part of all the postage collected by the United States government, and it should be remembered that we have nearly fifty thousand post-offices, and ten thousand newspapers. While such great sums are paid for postage, the fact should not be lost sight of that only the smaller packages are sent by mail all large orders being sent by express or freight.

We have lately received four elegant steel engravings, published by Messrs. Stinson & Co., and a dozen beautiful chromo flower panels. The steel engravings are very large—size of each 30 by 40 inches. The plates were engraved in London, and cost, when they me into the owners hands in Portland, custom duties paid, some $32,000. These engravings are of the class that sell in Europe for three guineas per copy, which is over fifteen dollars. To engrave a single plate of this size, requires the labor of a most skillful artist from one year to two years, and often longer. These elegant engravings are "Choosing the Wedding gown," "The Prayer for Health," "Tending Goats," and "The Highland Hearth."

It is believed that these engravings make up the finest set of works of high art ever brought out by American publishers. American homes should be made beautiful by refined works of art, and prices are now so low that there can be no excuse for the walls to remain gloomy, unadorned, and cheerless. American homes should be made beautiful, and the tendency of this will be to make more refined and beautiful the lives of all dwellers therein.

From the above some idea of the immense business can be formed. Messrs. Stinson & Co. are not behind the times in properly understanding the great power of the judicious use of printer's ink and in this connection we wish to state that in less than a dozen years past they have expended for newspaper advertising over $300,000. Enterprise, industry, and good judgment will accomplish great things, and now they may, we feel sure, fairly claim to stand at the head of the art publishing business in this country.

BROWNE'S PHONOGRAPHIC MONTHLY for September contains a portrait of the late W. F. Duffield and a sketch of his life, with a specimen of his shorthand reporting. An extended account of the meeting of the International Association of Shorthand Writers at Chicago is also given; besides other entertaining matter. D. L. Scott-Browne, publisher, 23 Clinton Place, N. Y.

The Madison (Wis.) Democrat in endeavoring to treat the wounds received by the candidates for the presidency, wisely prescribes St. Jacobs Oil. Of course we could not expect our worthy contemporary to do otherwise than recommend that famous Old German Remedy,—which "heals all wounds but those of love" and soothes all pains,—save those of political disappointment. —Galveston News.

The White House is to be remodeled and refurnished. But the most important article of furniture is to be made by President Arthur himself, a new cabinet. The correspondents have already got the stuff.

TRIAL BY JURY. — Some believe that even this form of trial is not perfectly free from prejudice. But in our section, St. Jacobs Oil has been tried by that jury—the public—and been judged the infallible cure for Rheumatism and all painful diseases.—St. Louis Chronicle.

MANHOOD
HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

DIRECTIONS
For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c, insert with little finger a particle of the balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane.
For Deafness.
Apply a particle into the ear.
ELY'S CREAM BALM
Having gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone, recognized as a wonderful remedy. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head and snuffles it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

Wednesday Evening, Nov. 2, 1881.

ALBERT VITTUM, Manager.
JOHN P. FERNALD, Editor.
CHAS. D. HOWARD & CO., Proprietors.

On account of the dedication of the Soldiers' Monument, which will occur on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 10TH, we shall delay the issue of our next paper till after that event. It will be issued as soon as possible thereafter, and will contain a full account of the exercises. It will also contain a list of the Soldiers and Sailors who served our country from this town in the war of the Rebellion, and will be a very valuable copy for reference. We shall print a large extra edition, many orders for which we have already received. It will also be a valuable medium for advertising, and our patrons are requested to send in their favors in season for insertion.

The Soldiers' Monument.

By the enthusiastic vote of the citizens at the town meeting last Monday evening, it was fully decided that our Soldiers' Monument should be dedicated with appropriate ceremonies as soon as arrangements could be made.—The committee chosen by the town met last evening in conference with the committee appointed by Post 50, G. A. R., consisting of Geo. Randall (chairman), Wm. H. Hildreth, E. Herbert Davis, George O. Peirce, and Wm. W. Reed. Messrs. C. Warren Osborn and S. F. Blaney having declined to serve on the Citizens' Committee, and the vote of the town having authorized the committee to fill their own vacancies, Messrs. James P. King and Charles D. Howard were elected in their place.—The committee then organized as a whole by the choice of Mr. Isaac Hardy as chairman and Mr. Chas. D. Howard secretary. It was decided that the dedication should take place Thursday, Nov. 10th, and that the original programme should be carried out, as far as practicable and possible. Rev. J. F. Lovering, Chaplain in Chief of the G. A. R. of the State, has been invited to deliver the address, and has signified his acceptance.

It was voted to hire the Salem Brass Band, and the following sub-committees were appointed:

To notify Rev. J. F. Lovering—Randall; the Chief Marshal—Hardy; the G. A. R. Posts—Hildreth; to procure Carriages—Fallon; to build platform around the monument and in tent—Clark; on Caterer—Peirce; to locate Tent—King, Reed and Clark.

It was voted to invite Dr. George S. Osborne to take the position of Chief Marshal, but we regret to state that he declines serving in that capacity. It is probable that an invitation to be present will be extended to the National Commander Geo. S. Merrill, Department Commander Creasey, and Gov. Long and staff. A mammoth Yale tent, capable of seating in the vicinity of 1200, will be erected during the day, and a substantial collation will be provided, after which speeches may be expected from distinguished guests and others, as far as time may permit.

It has been suggested that in place of a platform being built around the Monument, for the delivery of the address, the oration be given in the Old South Church, which has already been placed at the disposal of the Committee for that purpose. This would be more agreeable for the speakers, and in case of stormy weather would be no impediment to the satisfactory carrying out of the exercises determined upon. The galleries could then be reserved for ladies, who are equally interested in the dedicatory services. Of course it will be necessary to have the formal exercises of transferring the Monument done at the base in open air, but in regard to the other memorial exercises we think it would be proper, fitting, and under certain circumstances, very advisable, that they be held in the church. An invitation to the several Grand Army Posts in the county has been sent out this morning, and it is expected that a hearty response will be the result. The committee are thoroughly in earnest, and will use every effort to make the event worthy of the occasion and long to be remembered in this vicinity.

We fail to find, in the remarks of our neighbor in regard to the action of our Selectmen on the liquor question, any reply to our query as to how the Selectmen have not made a proper application of the law, as we thought our neighbor hinted. Neither do we find anything in the law contrary to their action. If they are not in the right, legally, it would be fitting and wise in our neighbor to show, in plain and distinct language, wherein the law differs from their action, instead of indulging in such high flown expressions, meaning nothing and saying less, as "there would be many combinations at March meetings to capture the lucrative sinecures." We are perfectly aware that there are, in the Republican party and out of it, those who believe license to be the best method of regulating the liquor question. There are also in the Democratic and Greenback party those who are in favor of prohibition. We have taken the ground in this town in favor of an enforcement of the law, and believe that the Committee chosen by the citizens have acted as well as they were able to do. We know there is plenty of intoxicating liquor sold by unlicensed dealers here, but that there has been no restriction of the traffic here we doubt. It is shown plainly by the howling of our neighbor and his friends that the enforcement of the law has had in some measure the effect desired by its advocates. To all intents and purposes, we have a license law in this town, only the Selectmen have restricted the license more than the liquor sellers would desire. That is all. The advocates of a license law, when claiming that it would regulate the sale of liquor, and not hiding behind the free rum argument, have always advocated certain restrictions in granting them. Does our neighbor advocate free rum?

WE PUBLISH, by particular desire, in this issue, a sermon preached in the Baptist Church soon after the death of President Garfield, by Rev. L. L. Wood. It is an able sermon, and will be read with interest by our readers. We think he makes too strong a point on the assumption that it is to the wrangling after the spoils of office in the Republican party that the death of our late President is due. Neither do we see the pertinence to his subject in dragging into it the question of intemperance, and his arraignment of the Republican party because it does not, as a body, hold the extreme views on this question which the Reverend gentleman does. We yield to no one in our realization of the sorrow and evil caused to our state by this destroyer, but we are of the opinion that Rev. Mr. Wood will find in our own Commonwealth enough of labor, enough of vigilance, to keep him active in his efforts in behalf of prohibition, without making a national issue of it, and raking the statistics of the different states in the Union, to show that prohibitory laws were originally enacted by other than the Republican party. In this state, nearly, if not all, the efforts in favor of prohibitory laws have been put in operation by the Republican party, and he must know that the Democratic and also the Greenback party are openly in favor of license. The views of these radical prohibitionists remind us of the extreme hostility and bitterness displayed by the very radical anti-slavery men like Parker Pillsbury, Wm. Lloyd Garrison and others against the same party. Yet the steps which were taken resulting in the actual emancipation of the slaves were by a Republican president, and a Republican Congress and party. It is certain that these reformers have nothing to hope for from any other party than the Republicans. That they have not accomplished all they desire may be from the fact that instead of trying to reform what they term abuses in the party, they get outside and attempt to villify and destroy it.

WE are authorized to state that the name of James P. King would not have been used at the caucus last evening had not the friends of C. Warren Osborn been informed at the last moment that he would not allow his name to be used. We are also authority in saying that Mr. King was not aware that his name was to be used until the voting commenced. As far as he was concerned it was a complete "surprise party."

It is safe to say that the PRESS will be a number of years older than it now is, before such an amount will be appropriated for that purpose. $500 will dedicate the monument as well as $1000; if it will not, the structure had better not be dedicated at present. $1000 can be spent to better advantage in this town than putting it into brass bands and collations.

There will be considerable opposition to a large appropriation, and a racy time can be expected.

The Alms house is getting to be a second Westboro reform school.

The above are a few samples of the kind of "items" (?) appearing in the paper called the Salem News, under the Peabody column. We could publish an indefinite amount of these, not only from this paper, but from other sheets in Salem, showing how unreliable is such correspondence. As far as noting items of actual occurrence, boys will do very well for correspondents, but when they try to weave editorials, or express the sentiments of the community, and "soar," so to speak, they are out of their latitude, and the paper publishing them only shows its weakness in so doing. Our readers need no remarks from us to show the unreliability of the above quotations. We never had a more enthusiastic town meeting, and if $1500 had been asked for it would have as easily been obtained. The latter item is an unwarranted and uncalled for reflection on a gentleman who has the confidence, not only of the citizens, but of the board of overseers, and we have no hesitation in pronouncing it false in every respect.

IT IS NOT anticipated that a large vote will be cast in this State at the coming election. Many citizens, on so called "off years," when political excitement does not run high, are in the habit of staying away from the polls on election day. This ought not to be.—Every voter should consider it his duty as well as privilege to give that day at least to his country and state. It is on such years that political demagogues are in the habit of carrying their pet schemes, relying upon the absence of those who would rebuke them if present to vote. We strongly urge upon every citizen the wisdom and importance of voting next Tuesday, and we hope to see a large vote polled. It is beyond question that the Republican candidates will be elected by a good majority. Gov. Long has made an excellent and able magistrate, and his popularity among all classes of citizens has been steadily increasing. For Senator from this district, Mr. N. A. Horton is re-nominated, and will receive the hearty support of the Republicans of this town, and we confidently predict his election. The deserved popularity of A. A. Abbott is such that no other nomination, save in form, has been made. For the position he holds, he is the man, in all respects. For Representative to General Court from this town, Mr. John Pinder was nominated last evening. Mr. Pinder is a sterling Republican, has long been identified with the business interests of Peabody, and is a representative business man.—He will command the support of the business men of the town, as well as others, and will make a faithful and able representative. We trust every Republican voter will do his part towards making the majority in favor of our candidates a sweeping one. Vote early and for the right men.

We have received from S. Edson Cassino, publisher, Boston, a copy of a work, entitled "Beautiful Wild Flowers of America," illustrated from original water-colored drawings after nature by Isaac Sprague, with descriptive text by Rev. A. B. Hervey, formerly pastor of the Universalist Church in Peabody. It is beautiful beyond description in typography and design, and is meeting with a large sale by subscription. For a Christmas gift, nothing more appropriate could be selected.

Last Monday evening a young lad named Hayes, about 13 years of age, was practicing with a revolver in the vicinity of Dalton's Court. Tiring of this sport, he deliberately aimed his weapon at a second story window in a tenement house in the vicinity and blazed away, the bullet breaking the glass and entering the wall opposite. This boy seems to be possessed of a large amount of deviltry for one of his years and if the lady who occupied the house could swear to his identity he would pay dearly for his little circus.

The Eastern Railroad have issued a five trip commutation ticket to Salem, which can be purchased for 25 cents. Our readers will bear this in mind. It is a convenience that will be appreciated. The trains run at frequent and seasonable hours on this road between Peabody and Salem, and are much to be preferred to the horse railroad.

Last Tuesday evening, the hall of the A. H. B. Association, on Foster street, was filled to repletion, by devoted friends of the Land League.—A large delegation from Lynn was present, including ex-Mayor James N. Buffum, and other distinguished men. —Reporter.

Thanksgiving, Nov. 24, 1881.

Mrs. Mason has an interesting notice to the ladies in another column.

The Lynn Land League have invited Rev. M. J. Masterson to address their next meeting.

The drinking fountain in front of the flag-staff was cleaned out this forenoon and about half a bushel of sticks, old iron hoops, stones and gravel, were removed, dropped in by Young America on his way to school.

Holten Lodge, I.O.O.F. have added a piano to be used at their meetings in Masonic Hall.

Any of our readers desiring the services of a good nurse, can be furnished with the address of a lady of large experience and with the best of references, by applying at or addressing our office.

Mr. Joseph P. Rogers of Salem, father of Mrs. Starr C. Hewitt, died very suddenly of apoplexy last Friday. He was attacked early in the forenoon and died before ten o'clock the same evening.

As will be seen by his advertisement, Mr. Winslow will open next Saturday, at Salem, a first-class clothing store, in the store recently occupied by Mr. A. A. Smith. Mr. W. is an upright business man and we wish him the success his enterprise deserves.

The extensive works known as the Malden Dye House, that Fernald & Sawyer are agents for, are soon to be removed from that city to East Somerville, where two large buildings 100x 40 feet, three stories high, are being erected. Those needing anything done in this line will see the advantage of patronizing a first-class house.

The firm of Begg & Cobb, manufacturers of grain leather, in the Crowninshield Building, are about to remove their business from this town to Woburn, as it will be better for them financially to be there. We regret that this is so, because we feel that our town needs just such enterprising men as these gentlemen to insure future prosperity.

The official organ of the Greenback party has the following:

We understand the Greenback Club are about to issue a challenge to either the Proprietor, Manager, Editor, Agent, Devil or Mortgagee of the Press for a discussion upon the political issues of the day. We predict a racy time—are of the opinion that the Press folks will find a pretty lively corpse for a "dead party" if they accept the challenge.

The Devil of the PRESS office extends his thanks, and requests the agent, manager, official organ, or writing-master of the Greenback Club, to wait on him at an early day.

Workmen have completed the job of laying the new water pipes, and Mr. Lord has the larger part of the 200 new supply pipes in. There are to be 65 new hydrants placed. The foundation of the standpipe is in readiness, and workmen are now engaged in blasting the ledge for the main to and from the standpipe. A gang of men have been at work at Spring pond raising the embankment at the foot of the pond so as to give an additional foot of water over the 52 acres. The embankment is now ten feet in width on the top and the earth was taken from the lower basin. A building has been erected at the pond to keep their boat in, and for a tool-house and shelter.

The warrant for the Town Meeting, to be held Tuesday, is out. Our citizens will bring in their ballots for the usual State officers chosen at the November election, a Councillor from the 5th district, a Senator from the 2d Essex Senatorial district, a Representative for the 12th district Essex Co., also a Clerk of Courts and County Commissioner; also, will give their ballots, yes or no, on the ratification and adoption of the following amendment of the Constitution:

"No person having served in the army or navy of the United States in time of war, and having been honorably discharged from such service, if otherwise qualified to vote, shall be disqualified therefor on account of being a pauper, or if a pauper, because of the non-payment of a poll-tax."

The Republican caucus last evening at town hall was largely attended. The meeting was called to order by Mr. H. H. Proctor, chairman of the Republican town committee. Mr. Henry Wardwell was chosen chairman and Mr. Chas. D. Howard secretary. An informal ballot was then taken, resulting as follows: C. Warren Osborn, 8; Jas. P. King, 19; John Pinder, 21; with several scattering. The caucus then proceeded to a formal ballot. There were 66 votes cast; Mr. Jas. P. King received 26 and Mr. John Pinder 37, the latter being declared the nominee of the caucus. A rallying committee consisting of the following gentlemen was nominated from the floor: H. H. Proctor, John S. Torr, F. Osborn, jr., F. P. Arnold, George Randall, Jas. F. Foye, S. F. Blaney, Charles D. Howard, Wm. Pinder, Arthur Elliott, Alonzo Raddin, Bowman Viles, Daniel H. Felton, J. Fred Ingraham, jr., Wm. F. Wiley.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

On Friday evening last, at the invitation of Mr. Samuel Trask, about fifty of our townsmen gathered at his store on Walnut street, and took barges for that gentleman's brick yards in Danvers, there to witness the process of a kiln of bricks. At the time of the visit the bricks of this kiln were at a red heat and presented a novel appearance when viewed from above, as the company were enabled to do from the roofs of the lean-tos which protect the workmen from the weather. The kiln, oblong in form, with its walls plastered, was open only at its upper surface and at the wood holes at the base on either side. These holes, which run from side to side of the kiln, form the furnaces for the whole, and had their openings constantly filled with burning wood by a gang of men under the direction of the veteran brick-burner, Mr. Stephen S. Day, who aided Mr. Trask in making the company acquainted with the mysteries of brick burning. The flames and heat from this wood, working upward through the crevices of the kiln, accomplish, in ten day's time, the work of burning the bricks.—One of the curious facts noticed by the company was that though these holes are scarcely more than a foot and a half in width and three feet apart, yet when viewed from above the whole surface of the kiln was covered by tongues of flame reaching nearly a foot above the crevices, while over this heated floor and through these flames the burners could walk with impunity while examining the progress of the work. In order that the draft should be properly regulated the iron stoppers or doors to the fire holes are opened at only one side of the kiln at a time while at the other they are sealed. While the company were present they had the privilege of seeing the process of dressing the kiln, which consists of opening these sealed doors, stirring the fires with long poles and filling the holes with fresh wood; this is done with the greatest possible speed, and formed one of the most interesting sights of the evening. After seeing this process, another kiln was visited, which was burned several weeks ago, and had been opened, so that the method of packing bricks in a kiln could be seen. At the farm house on the yard Mr. Trask had provided coffee and lunch, of which the company partook before taking barges for home. This kiln required one hundred and fifty cords of wood for burning and contained three hundred and fifty thousand bricks, which number completed the tally of one million bricks made by Mr. Trask at these yards this season, including some four hundred thousand of face bricks.

The Glass Blowers closed their entertainments here Saturday evening, which have been very successful and given entire satisfaction to those attending them. The ornaments made by them have been distributed among the audience, and the novel effects produced by them in the manufacture of the different articles have been witnessed with pleasure by those who were present. The social hops were a pleasing feature and were enjoyed by all who participated. We understand that it is the intention of the Manager to return to Peabody later in the season, giving a hop every night, at a slightly advanced price of admission. We shall be glad to welcome them, and feel confident they will have a large attendance. Its managers are courteous gentlemen, and understand thoroughly the art of making a show attractive, pleasing and welcome to the visitors. Quite a lively competition arose by the voting during the week for the handsomest baby. Each visitor at every entertainment had one vote, and Saturday evening the following Committee were appointed to count the votes, M. A. Hearn, John S. Toby, T. F. Horrigan, Willis McClucus. The vote was as follows: Alice Hargrave, 571; Carrie Weatherbee, 478; Bessie Worcester, 196. Scattering, 250 names, having from one to twenty votes each.

The Murray Association connected with the Universalist church, have arranged a programme for the season of 1881-82, as follows:

November 7. Musicale.
November 21. Readings.
December 5. Social.
December 19. Dramatic Readings.
January 2. Paper.
January 16. Poem in Character.
January 30. Musicale.
February 13. Readings.
February 27. Social.
March 13. Dramatic Readings.
March 27. Harlequin.

No preaching service was held at the Baptist Church last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Wood was out of town and the expected preacher did not put in an appearance, so the congregation adjourned to the vestry and held a prayer-meeting.

The Prohibition Senatorial Convention of the Second Essex District was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms, in this town yesterday afternoon. Delegates were present from Salem, Marblehead, and Peabody. The Marblehead delegates were in favor of Mr. Chas. H. Litchman, the Greenback candidate for Senator, and some favored the nomination of Jonathan H. Orne of Marblehead. The matter was finally settled in this way; the Marblehead delegates will vote for Mr. Litchman, and a committee from Peabody will correspond with Mr. L. and if a satisfactory reply is received, he will be the candidate of the rest of the party, otherwise, Mr. Orne.

The Volunteer Fair Committee report everything progressing favorably. Many of the out-of-town companies to whom tickets were sent are already sending for more. In fact, the demand is such that the committee contemplate adding more prizes to the list and issuing more tickets. The trumpet to be given to the company selling the largest number of tickets is on exhibition at Winslow's, and is a beauty. It is elegantly chased and is gold lined. The company has received a check for $139 from the Milford Fire Department, $100 having been subscribed by the Relief Association and $39 raised by subscription for Mr. Nolan.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union desire to express their thanks to the friends who aided them in their sale. Among the many gifts which they received was a large and elegantly frosted fruit-cake from Mr. F. A. Bragdon, which found ready purchasers. The net proceeds of the sale amounted to $109.

The articles which remain over, including children's socks, and a few other fancy articles, will be offered at reduced prices at the Temperance room at three o'clock on Friday afternoon next.

We hear of one rum seller who invented a neat way to save himself if liquor should be seized from him. This man keeps what he terms a hotel, but lets the upper part of the house to a party we will call Francis Allen, for short. The keeper of the hotel, unbeknown to Allen, had all his liquor casks and jugs labeled with his name. Allen found this out recently, and since that time he has "made Rome howl" in his denunciation of the hotel keeper, and at last account he was hunting up the printer that furnished the gilt-edged label.

The employes at the machine shop of John E. Clement & Co., paid a visit to the residence of their foreman, Mr. Henry Hatch, on Cedar street, Salem, last Wednesday evening, it being the fifty-third anniversary of his birth-day. Mr. Frank C. Ferguson, in behalf of the employes, in a neat little speech presented him with an elegant easy chair. Mr. Hatch, although surprised, accepted the gift with thanks. The evening was socially spent, and at an early hour the company returned to Peabody.

At the Autumnal Meeting of the Essex Liberal Conference, held at the First Parish Church, Gloucester, last Thursday, Mr. A. B. Merrill, of Peabody, was elected a member of the Board of Directors.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

SOFT AND STIFF HATS.

Gentlemen about to purchase Fall and Winter Goods, will find it for their advantage to examine our assortment and prices. Our stock of Stiff Hats is the best in the State, embracing all the leading and best other styles, a great many of which are of our own design, and made expressly to satisfy those of our customers who desire an article of superior quality, elegant style and finish.

Our style of Young Men's Soft Hats is superior to anything ever before shown on our counters. These hats are in all grades from the cheapest to the best, and the styles of cheap hats are equal to those of better grades. The medium and fine grade soft hats have silk bands and bindings, giving them a richer appearance. They are durable and fast colors; they come in Black, Seal Brown, Olive Green, Rifle Green and Nutria, and is undoubtedly the best line of fine hats ever offered.

Children's Hats in great variety. Boys' School Hats, .50, .75, $1.

Cadet Caps, .15, .25, .35, .50, .65, .75, $1.

Our goods come direct from the leading manufacturers and jobbers of New England, enabling us to show you goods at a great discount from regular Hatters' prices. 25 per cent. saved on every article that you purchase at the Shawmut.

Items of Interest.

Knoxville, Tenn., boasts of a woman with a beard 14 inches long.

One of the Rothschilds owns $500,000 for every pound he weighs.

Paris consumes 2,500,000 bottles of wine daily, and is reasonably happy.

Millais, the English painter, has commissions for portraits amounting to $200,000.

A horse in Rock Island, Ill., unused to the sight of a locomotive, stopped, trembled and fell down dead.

There is a German woman in South Bend, Ind., who dresses in men's clothes and goes out as a day laborer.

A Parisian journalist, describing ex-Queen Isabella II. of Spain, says that she is fair, fat, fifty and frolicsome, and is rich despite her lavish expenditures.

There is reason to doubt the sanity of James Turney. He was baptised at London, O., one Sunday, and four days later he murdered a little girl.

A Chester (Pa.) woman wrote a message on the margin of a newspaper she mailed to her friend, and the United States Court has fined her $10 for the offense.

Iron was so scarce in England during the reign of Edward III., that the pots, spits and frying-pans of the royal kitchen were classed among the king's jewels.

Wm. Shannon, a war veteran living at Wiessport, Pa., received a pension of $1,200 some time ago. Now he has nothing left, and has been sent to the Poorhouse.

A young woman living near Greene, Minnesota, while making cake, recently, broke an egg which contained a snake seven inches long and about the size of a pipe-stem.

The Swiss canton of Schaffhausen has followed the example of Germany in publishing a law that no boy under fifteen shall be allowed to use tobacco either in the streets or at home.

Last year Chicago furnished ten divorce suits to every seventy-nine weddings, there being an average of two and one-eighth divorce suits per day instituted in that city throughout the year.

A newspaper man has discovered that the word "spondulix" is not a slang term for money. A spondulix is a gold coin, or substitute for coin, used in Africa, and it is equivalent in value to eight slaves.

American ladies at Parisian and Florentine receptions are shocked by the presence of ladies in the smoking-rooms, twiddling cigarettes and blowing wreaths of smoke with all the ease of practical smokers.

An old lazzaroni has just died at Naples after a most remarkable matrimonial career. He is said to have been married thirteen times, and to have one hundred and twenty-three children, all but two of whom are living.

A Kentucky medical society has discovered that there is white lead in paint that young ladies use for their complexions, and that young men kissing the face of young ladies thus beautified are liable to poison themselves.

The workmen in a Troy knitting mill are paid according to the weight of their completed work. Lately it was found that the product of the concern was much less than the aggregate of the amounts represented by the pay roll. An investigation explained all. The knitters had inserted iron weights at weighing time.

The Princess Dolgorouki has a good bit of property to comfort her in her exile. Besides a large number of jewels and other souvenirs, the Czar left her a legacy of about $10,000,000, which will go to her children at her death. Most of the money came from the Ural and Siberia mines, which belong to the reigning Czar of Russia.

Selina Ditzell, a Chicago domestic servant, being threatened with arrest on a charge of stealing $7 from her mistress, declared herself guilty. She was thereupon forgiven and retained in employment. That night she took poison, and just before her death solemnly protested that she was innocent, having made a false confession to save herself from imprisonment.

Says the Calvert (Texas) Courier:—Captain Johnson, of Reagan, was halted last week between this point and his home by a highwayman, and told to "stand and deliver." The Captain recognized the robber as a man he had formerly befriended, and an amicable understanding was effected that no money should change hands. The outlaw said that stern necessity had driven him to the road.

There is a house building in Des Moines which has a remarkable record of accidents already attached to it. The man who built the foundation, the man who furnished the glass, and the man who did the marble work, have all died since the work began. The man who dug the well met with a severe injury, and the principal carpenter lost a child, while only recently a workman fell from the roof.

A young woman of Springfield, Mass., was determined to circumvent a young man whom she suspected of a desire to escort her home from the Baptist church sociable. The entertainment was held in the basement, and she laid a plan to gain the audience room above by means of the back stairs and to escape thence to the street while her would-be cavalier was preparing to pounce upon her at the basement door. All went well until a false step in the darkness sent her splashing into the baptistry, which had remained open since the previous Sunday.

The men who take the prize are the men who advertise.

"How sensible your little boy talks!" exclaimed Mrs. Smith. "Yes," replied Mrs. Brown; "he hasn't been among company yet."

"Sir," said John Henry's wife to a gentleman treading on her dress. "you are delaying the train." "Madame," said he, "your conductor should pull the belle."

$10,000 AWARDED.—"I was so sick and low-spirited that I thought I would give anything to get well; and if any one had ensured me the good health produced by using Simmons' Liver Regulator, and charged me a thousand dollars, I would willingly have paid it if I had had it; in fact, ten thousand dollars would be worth less to me than what it has done for me.

GEO. F. BARRETT, Macon, Ga."

Here is the account of the shortest courtship on record: "Rachel, the Lord has sent me to marry thee," said the suitor. "The Lord's will be done," was the submissive reply.

ASHBURNHAM, Mass., Jan. 14, '80.
I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made.

Mrs. Julia G. Cushing.

The lawyer is a rising man. When he loses his case he does not despair. He says: "Let us go higher." But you have to hire him to do it.

A small boy made a sensation for a short time by quietly transferring a card bearing the words, "Take one," from a lot of handbills in front of a shop to a basket of oranges.

Nearly all the ills that afflict us can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv. nov2—1m

A Yankee editor in his financial article, says, "Money is close, but not close enough to reach."

A young bride being asked how her husband turned out, replied that he turned out very late in the morning and turned in very late at night.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retiring from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for general Debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. The recipe will be sent free of charge, to all who desire it, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Every patient is also entitled to a copy free of "The Complete Physician," a work of nearly 900 pages, containing over 1000 formulas. The latest and best family Medical work out. Address, with stamp, or stamped self addressed envelope, DR. M. E. BELL, 161 N. CALVERT ST., BALTIMORE, MD.

It is wonderful how circumstances develop unsuspected reaches of thought in minds unaccustomed to philosophical refinements. A gentleman who was walking down Broadway with a simple peasant from Cincinnati, called the latter's attention to an incautiously exposed but lovely female ankle that was daintily picking its way at a street crossing, and asked him what he thought of it. The simple peasant answered that he thought there was just enough of it upon which to base a theory of illimitable progression.

AN INTERESTING ACCOUNT!

STONE IN THE BLADDER EXPELLED BY USING DR. KENNEDY'S "FAVORITE REMEDY."

Mr. S. W. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y., the son of Mr. E. S. Hicks, whose name may have appeared in this journal in connection with an article similar to this, was, like his father, afflicted with Stone in the Bladder, only that his case was more serious than his father's. On the appearance of the disease the father advised the son to write to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who, he said, would tell him what to do. Dr. Kennedy replied, suggesting the use of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which had worked so successfully in his father's case. Mr. Hicks, who had been assured by the local physicians that they could do nothing more for him tried "Favorite Remedy" at a venture. After two weeks' use of it he passed a stone 3-4 of an inch long and of the thickness of a pipe-stem. Since then he has had no symptoms of the return of the trouble. Here is a sick man healed. What better results could have been expected? What greater benefit could medical science confer? The end was gained; that is surely enough. Dr. Kennedy assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the Blood, cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder complaints, as well as all those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists.

"Say," said the city youth to the modest countryman, "hey seed out o' your hair yet?" "Wal," was the deliberate reply, "I jedge not from the way the calves run after me."

However watched by loving care,
Home has distempers lurking there,
And human power cannot defend
From ills that constantly impend;
But Sanford's Ginger bids pain cease,
And home restores to health and peace.

A wag suggests that a suitable opening for many choirs would be: Lord, have mercy on us miserable singers.

"What is the moon good for?" asked the teacher, "what are its principal uses?" And the smart bad boy looked up from the foot of the class and said: "To rest the gas companies."

Long indulgence in over eating or drinking produces a disorganized Liver, and all the evils attendant upon such derangements; depression of spirits, habitual costiveness, nervous exhaustion, indigestion; pain in the head, with nausea; fullness of stomach after meals, chillness, general debility and languor. Seek relief from Simmons' Liver Regulator.

"It is a very valuable remedy for dyspepsia, sick headache, torpid liver and such like diseases.
"W. S. Holt, Pres. of S.W.R.R. Co. of Ga." oct12 1m

The editor of the Kalamazoo Telegraph remarked, in a recent issue of his paper, that "last night was gorgeous—cool, silent, soft, shadowy, superb. A splendid moon strode across the bare blue heavens, flooding the earth with glorious light." Our esteemed contemporary has a very Oriental way of saying that it was bad weather for chicken stealing.

EASILY PROVEN.—It is easily proven that malarial fevers, constipation, torpidity of the liver and kidneys, general debility, nervousness and neuralgic ailments yield readily to this great disease conqueror, Hop Bitters. It repairs the ravages of disease by converting the food into rich blood, and it gives new life to the aged and infirm always.

"That fellow is just like a telescope," said a dashing New York girl. "You can draw him out, see through him, and shut him up again."

The action of Carter's Little Liver Pills is pleasant, mild and natural. They gently stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels, but do not purge. They are sure to please. nov2—2w

Prof: "Which is the most delicate of the senses?" Soph: "The touch." Prof: "Prove it." Soph: "When you sit on a pin you can't see it—you can't hear it—you can't taste it—you can't smell it; but it's there."

Try Carter's Little Nerve Pills for any case of nervousness, sleeplessness, weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia, &c., relief is sure. The only nerve medicine for the price in market. In vials at 25 cents. nov2—2w

The Boston Herald says the Ipswich Chronicle has been enlarged "by the addition of six and one half columns." That's worse than the Irish editor, who "owing to the great press of matter was obliged to leave one column blank."—Newburyport Herald.

It is a foolish mistake to confound a remedy of merit with quack medicines. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Dyspepsia Debility, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times. nov2—1m

A new step called "the glide," is being taught by Boston dancing-masters. Chicago young men have long practised it on evenings when the girl's sire is at home. On a smooth gravel path the glide is all right, but where there is a high gate and a dog in the yard it won't work.

The Ipswich Chronicle comes to us enlarged and improved. It is now one of the best looking country papers in the county. We hope the Ipswich people will see to it that it is well supported. Every family in town should subscribe and every business man advertise, each one making it a personal matter, for if it succeeds, it is a benefit; if it fails, it is a disgrace to all. A town is judged by its local paper.

Fighting is the poorest way to settle a quarrel, because it does nothing to show which is in the right.

ITCHING PILES—SYMPTOMS AND CURE.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes for $1.25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price in currency, or three cent postage stamps. Prepared only by Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, Pa., to whom letters should be addressed. Sold by all prominent druggists.
Wm. T. Lee, Agent, Peabody.

What is home without a mortgage
For three quarters of its worth?
Interest and taxes make it
Quite the dearest spot on earth.
When the bond holder so bloated
Gayly scoops your hard-earned dimes,
What is home without a mortgage
In these hard, precarious times?

During the past five years I have suffered from Catarrh and have used without relief remedies prescribed by various physicians. I was advised to try Ely's Cream Balm; am using it, with beneficial results, and feel confident I shall be completely cured of a disease that has seriously affected not only my nostrils but also my eyes and hearing. W. A. Brintzinghoffer, Jr., Wholesale Tobacconist, Newark, N. J. May 29, 1879.

Ely's Cream Balm for the cure of Catarrh is having large sales with me. I think it the best article I have sold for the treatment of these diseases, and take great pleasure in recommending it to my patrons, as I am hearing the most favorable reports of its benticial effects. A. R. Ferguson, Druggist Lockport, N. Y. Price 50 cents.

"Plenty of milk in your cans this morning?" the customer asked a milkman yesterday morning. And the milkman nodded gravely, as without a wink in his eye he made reply "Chalkfull."

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.
For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.
I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him: his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.
My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.
The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.
I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.
I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston
Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.
Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.
Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well-known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I fe l like a new person I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

"Almost at Death's Door,"

I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam as strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.

Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.

Letter from Chicago.

CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 21, 1881.

DEAR EDITOR,—We have visited several places of note, but what attracted us most were the stock-yards, of which we have all read and heard, and thinking you may like to know something of our impressions of their magnitude, I will try and give you some idea of them from what we saw. We have visited the "Yards" twice, not content with one look at them. We first visited them on Tuesday and again yesterday. We saw we know not how many thousands of cattle, sheep and fat hogs. The papers reported the arrival that day of 7000 cattle; I did not notice the amount of arrivals of other creatures, but there were immense numbers of them, especially of fat hogs. To give some idea of their numbers, the easiest way is to say that we visited the packing and rendering house of Armour & Co., which is the most extensive one in this vicinity, if not in the world, where they are slaughtering and packing 8,000 hogs daily now, and we were told that in winter their average killing is 14,000 daily. These hogs are mostly brought in daily as they arrive, but are not weighed until after they have eaten and drank all they want, corn and water being freely supplied them. After being weighed they are driven into "runs," as they are termed, which are elevated driveways which run over the yards in different directions, and deliver the hogs into the third story of the slaughtering houses, from one pen to another, until they arrive at the one from which they never get out alive; here a chain-loop is put around one hind leg and they are drawn up by power high enough to hang over a platform where they are hung up by that chain. On this platform the workmen are standing ready to receive them, then one man pushes them along while another is "sticking" them; as soon as they have bled enough they are dropped into a tank of boiling hot water for taking off the bristles; in this they are rolled over three or four times, and are taken out from the farther end by machinery (everything is done by power that can be)on to a platform, or "run" as they term it. Here two or three men take off what back bristles are good for anything, while another is hooking the hog by the nose to a chain which draws him through a machine for scraping off the hair, when it is passed along by several men who, as it passes by, are busy scraping and cleansing off what the machine leaves. At the end of this table a man on one side cuts off the head while another is putting the spreader in the gambrels and hanging it on another "run" and dropping it off that table. It is then run along to one who, with a running stream of water, is washing it, another opens it, another takes out the entrails, and another trims off the leaf and loose fat; it is then wiped off with a cloth, and finally slid off to the cooling room where the carcass is split down the back and left until the next day to cool off, when it is taken into a room where are some 30 to 40 men and boys to cut up; some is sold as fresh meat, but most of it is cut into hams, shoulders and sides, when it is salted and smoked and packed into casks and boxes, and a large portion of it exported to England and different portions of Europe. The heads, leaves and entrails as taken off pass into the hands of other workmen, and are trimmed, washed and sorted, and sent to the different departments for rendering, from all of which our nice, steam-refined lard is made; the residue or scrap goes into fertilizers.

At this place we also saw them slaughtering beef cattle, of which they are killing 800 to 900 daily. At this place they kill them by shooting, using a breech-loading carbine, carrying a No. 44 metallic cartridge and conical ball. The first shot seldom fails to drop the creature instantly; it is then drawn into the dressing room, bled, beheaded, skinned, etc., and passed along to the cooling room. The next day it is cut up into such shapes as I suppose will bring the most money. The cattle we saw them killing yesterday were mostly Colorado, with some Texas, steers.—They were all wild, vicious looking creatures, rather thin, and gaunt as a greyhound, and would probably run as fast if they could get away. They seem to be sufficiently fat, but are thin-meated. These are the packers, so-called. The larger portion of this meat is saited and sent east for a market.—But still a large portion of the meat is trimmed off the bones and salted, cooked and packed in tin boxes and comes to us ready for the table as Chicago corned beef. The bones from which this meat is taken are put into rendering tanks and there steamed until they are so soft the grease can all be pressed out of them, which is thoroughly done, and then they are made into phosphates. I assure you there is not a particle of hair, bone, grease, scrap of meat, or anything of the kind that goes to waste. The greases are by means of chemicals all made into nice white tallow in the beef department, and nice steam-refined lard in the pork department.

In the above I have tried to give you an adequate description of the whole thing. It would require a great deal of time, paper and patience, and above all a much better hand at the pen than myself to do justice to the business. As to the dimensions of the yards I was unable to learn, but should think the pens covered an area of nearly a mile in length by half a mile in width, divided into pens of different sizes of from 20 up to one hundred feet square, all numbered and marked off into divisions and drive-ways. There are several large platform scales that will weigh 100,000 pounds each, in different parts of the yard for the convenience of the dealers. These are all busy weighing cattle and hogs from morning until night. The cattle are fed with a nice grade of baled hay, distributed about the pens in cribs for the purpose; also every pen has a watering-trough in it, supplied by pipes from water works on the premises, a stand-pipe 100 feet high being used to give the necessary force for distribution. This stand-pipe is surrounded by a brick tower, between which and the stand-pipe (which is only about 3 feet in diameter) is a circular stairway, to reach the top of which requires you to take 141 steps. We ascended this tower to get a good view of the extent of yards and the creatures in it. From here one could see the innumerable pens of cattle which, if it were possible to count them, could be counted by thousands. Most of the pens containing sheep and hogs have a shed roof over them so that they cannot be seen except by going about among them, which of course is easily done through the driveways, portions of which are in constant use by drovers driving their creatures in from the cars, to and from the weighing scales, to the slaughtering houses here, or to the railroads for transhipment to other markets.

Just after entering the grounds of the corporation (stock-yards) is a spacious building for officers, in which is a bank, an office and directors' rooms of the yards, and innumerable dealers' offices, also a large restaurant and liquor bar, as a matter of course. As one passes through the yards he reaches the slaughtering and packing houses ranged along the outside, all in line, covering a lineal distance of perhaps two miles, and I don't know but more, among which Armour & Co.'s works are said to be the most extensive. We were told they covered an area of 25 acres; at present they employ 2500 men and boys. Later in the season when they are busiest, they employ 4500, the wages paid ranging from $1.75 to $3.50 per day: some skilled men are paid $1000 per year whether there is work for them or not. It is said to require three days in the week to pay off, which is done on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, and requiring from $8000 to $15,000. There are several other very large packing houses here, but none of them compare with Armour & Co. for immensity. One company has all the dead animals in the cars and yards, no one else being allowed to touch them. This business is purchased of the corporation. This company usually gathers up 700 or 800 hogs, some 15 to 30 cattle, and a parcel of sheep and calves; the price paid for these are for all creatures weighing 200 lbs. and over, 2 cts. per lb.; from 100 to 200 lbs., 1 ct. per lb.; everything smaller than 100 lbs., nothing. This company also has a contract with the city of Chicago to take away all the dead horses from the city limits, getting an average now of 40 horses daily. Their rendering works are out of the city some 21 or 22 miles, and my companion has gone out there to-day to see the sights and learn what he can about the business. He will probably conclude the hearse of the works in Peabody would not be enough to keep the place going, but that it would take a whole funeral procession. This would be a grand place for its proprietor, but we trust Peabody will not soon lose so good a citizen. One thing I must not forget to mention: that is that we saw 21 fat cattle, which are being fatted for show by a party who has ample means, and who means to do his best with them. They will average some 3000 lbs. each. One of them now weighs 3500 lbs., and is a massive fellow. One of the herd has three horns, the third one growing up from the top of the head, just between the two ordinary ones. This third horn is about 12 or 13 inches long. I think I had better stop now, as I shall be wearying your patience. Yours truly,

W. B. R.

Dedication Lines.

BY GEORGE RANDALL.

O Thou, who wast our Fathers' guide
Across a wide and wintry sea,
For all they did and dared we now
Would humbly offer thanks to Thee.

We thank Thee that the seed they sowed,
With anxious thought and earnest prayer,
Has ripened into precious fruit
For us who follow them to share.

To-day we thank Thee that their sons
Were prompt like them, to do and dare
When Treason reared its ghastly head
And war's wild clamor filled the air.

And as with loving hearts and hands
This votive shaft we now upraise
To tell to future years the tale
Of how they won our love and praise.

Grant us the wisdom to complete
The cause for which they gave up all.
Give us their courage still to work
E'en to the end at duty's call.

Grant that this land for which they died
No further discord aye may know,
But closer knit in bonds of love
In peace and union still may grow.

Grant that the poor of every land
Who come to us through fear or need,
May find a hearty welcome here,
What e'er their color, race or creed.

Grant that the banner which they loved
Through all the coming years may be
Emblem of freedom to a race
Still prospering and serving Thee.

And while with reverent faith we say
Thy will and not our will be done,
Hasten the time as pleases Thee
When all mankind shall be as one.

On the tenth day of November, 1880, the first ground was broken for the erection of the monument, which we now, just one year from that day, dedicate to the memory of the brave men whose names are recorded on its tablets. It is a significant fact, and worthy of mention. Notwithstanding the croakings of the prophets who have foreboded unpropitious weather for the occasion, the day dawned bright and clear, and was all that could be wished for. Early in the day the bustle and hurry in our usual quiet streets betokened an occasion of unusual interest, and the strains of martial music heralded the approach of the different military organizations who had been invited to participate in the parade. At an early hour the headquarters of the Chief Marshal, in the vestry of the Old South Church, became a scene of unwonted activity, as the different G. A. R. posts and invited guests began to arrive. But Col. Batchelder, with his well-appointed staff, was equal to the occasion, and everything moved in perfect order. The fine weather brought all our citizens out, and business was entirely suspended. At about 10 o'clock the line was formed, with the right resting in front of the Universalist Church, and at precisely 10.20 o'clock the procession marched up Central street, in the following order:

The South Church was opened for ladies, the left gallery of which was reserved for them, at 11.15, and was quickly filled. As the procession neared the Square, the military organization formed in line and saluted the committee and distinguished invited guests, as they passed the line in their carriages. The procession entered the church at 12 o'clock, where the dedication exercises were held, viz.:

Music by Salem Brass Band.

Prayer by Rev. W. G. Sperry.

Mr. Isaac Hardy, chairman of the Dedication Committee, spoke in substance as follows:

This occasion is of no little moment, and we reflect that there have been but two such occasions since the Declaration of Independence, one hundred years ago. There went forth in '76, immediately after the signing of the Declaration, a call for liberty and freedom from the British yoke, and a call for soldiers. There went from this town seven heroic sons, that fell at Lexington, which was a seventh part that fell. Sixty years after there gathered on this spot our townspeople to dedicate a monument to those men, who died to give this country liberty and make us a nation among the nations of the earth. In 1812 there was some skirmishing, but nothing to call out the nation's impulses till Abraham Lincoln's administration, which settled the question of slavery. After his election the South rose to protect its idol, and undertook to trample our precious flag in the dust. And they didn't do it.—Lincoln issued his call; men rushed to defend the capitol, and among the thousands that went forth, Peabody furnished her full quota. On that great battlefield died 70 of her good and true; and in honor of that event and of those noble men who sacrificed their lives, we, as citizens and soldiers, assemble to dedicate this monument. May God bless us and inspire us to maintain and preserve inviolate the duties of citizenship.

Mr. Hardy then introduced Mr. C. Warren Osborn, chairman of the Monument Committee, who, he said, did more than any one man to give us that beautiful monument. Mr. Osborn spoke as follows:

Peabody, Nov. 10th, 1881.

TO THE SELECTMEN OF PEABODY,
Gentlemen,—The Committee chosen by the town, Aug. 24, 1880, to take charge of building a Soldiers and Sailors' Monument report as follows:

Soon after the appointment of the Committee a contract was made with the Hallowell Granite Co., of Hallowell, Me., to build the monument, to be completed so as to be dedicated the following 19th of April, 1881. About the same time a contract was also made with Scott Bros. to put in the foundation. The flagstaff being in use by two of the political parties, it was not thought expedient to commence operations until after the election in November, when it was removed, together with the hydrant and fountain. Work was begun on the foundation and nearly done, to be resumed in the Spring, when, finding its immediate completion unnecessary, it was not finished until July of the present year. Owing to unforeseen circumstances the Hallowell Co. were unable to fulfill their engagement and the time was extended to the 1st of September. Other delays took place which still further deferred its completion until the beginning of October, when the structure was finished and accepted by your Committee.

The cost of the work has been as follows:—

Moving flagstaff,	$126.12
Moving fountain and hydrant,	276.24
Building foundation,	592.00
Monument,	6575.00
Grading,	115.49
Incidentals, such as advertising, surveying, lighting, etc.,	105.14
	$7789.99

making the whole expenditure seven thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine 99-100 dollars.

Gentlemen,—The labor of the Committee is now done. The Soldiers and Sailors' Monument is finished and complete, and, as they believe, a graceful and beautiful work, worthy of the town, and a fitting memorial to preserve to future generations the names of the honored dead.

They now transfer it to your care, to be dedicated to the purpose for which it was erected,—dedicated for all time, to the brave men whose names are inscribed thereon, citizens of the town, who died in the War of the Great Rebellion. We leave it in your hands to be consecrated to the memory of the dear ones—friend, brother, father, son, husband—who died on the field of battle, and on the sea, and in the hospital, —who starved at Libby and at Andersonville; in that terrible struggle, which left our country a nation, undivided, and destroyed slavery forever.

Mr. Levi Preston, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, replied:

MR. CHAIRMAN,—In behalf of the Selectmen and for the town, I have the honor to receive your report and accept the monument. No word of commendation is needed from us, for the beautiful memorial speaks for itself; and we have one here with us to-day, who will do full justice to the memories of those whose names are inscribed upon it. With the completion of the monument your duties as a committee are ended, and accepting your report, I now receive you from further responsibility.

Music by Salem Cadet Band.

The oration was then delivered by Rev. J. F. Lovering, Chaplain-in-Chief of the G. A. R., of Worcester. It was an eloquent and thrilling address, and was listened to with marked attention, and interrupted by frequent applause. It will be found in full in another portion of our paper. At the close of the address, the audience united in singing "America," when the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. W. Hudson.—Shortly after two o'clock the line was reformed on the Square, and the march was resumed down Main street to Salem line, then countermarched to Washington street, where the line was drawn up to receive Gov. Long. He arrived in Salem at 2.30, and was driven, in a barouche waiting to receive him, to Peabody. He was received at the Peabody line by the Salem Cadets, and escorted to the procession which was in waiting, when the march was at once taken up towards the tent, which was reached shortly after three o'clock. After all had been seated, Rev. Mr. Harmon invoked a blessing, when full justice was done to the wants of the inner man. The lateness of the hour and the march of the comrades had sharpened their appetites, and the liberal collation provided by Mr. Ira A. Burnham speedily vanished. It is but justice to Mr. Burnham to say that the spread was worthy of the occasion, and words of commendation were heard on every hand. After all were satisfied, Mr. Geo. Randall, as toast-master of the occasion, rose, and, after alluding to the fact that it would be impossible to have responses from all whom he had hoped to call on, gave as the first toast:

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts:
Rough in soil but fertile in good works; variable in climate but steadfast in love of liberty; however she is surpassed in other productions she points with pride to her sons and daughters.

Mr. Randall in introducing Gov. Long to respond to this toast, alluded to the number of Johns who had been Governors of Massachusetts, and introduced him as John the Tenth.

Gov. Long, in opening, said that it would be necessary to divide him into about ten parts to enable him to perform all the services required on different occasions. He regretted to have been delayed so as not to be present on the day which has been observed and made sacred to the heroes and martyr dead, observances which are necessary to stir our lives and lift us above the ordinary observances of common life.—This monument is not alone to the dead, but to the firm and esthetic qualities which mould our state. History is not the mere history of events; history and poetry and art are of the soul, and prove immortality. This monument is not merely stone. That is ideal; the base represents freedom, the citadel patriotism and the decorations and figure chivalry. In conclusion the Gov. said that he came in behalf of the Commonwealth to extend his hearty thanks for the cordiality with which they had received him, and to extend in her behalf his benediction.

At the close of Gov. Long's remarks, which were frequently applauded, three cheers were given for him.

The second toast was:

Our Honored Dead:
Sleeping beneath familiar skies, laid to rest far from home and dear ones, buried in unknown sepulchres—their heroic sacrifice shall inspire to patriotism through generations yet unborn.

Weave fresh flowers into garlands,
Strew them o'er each lowly grave,
Deck the stately column with them,
Honor pay the true and brave.
Peace shall wave her white wings o'er them
History for her own now claims,
For they are not ours only,
They are Freedom's now and Fame's.

It was expected that Gen. Horace Binney Sargent would be present to respond to this toast, but in his absence Mr. Randall called on our Lynn friends to respond with music, which was done by the Lynn Brass band in their usual fine manner.

The next toast was:

Our Country:
May it ever be a land of justice, the home of freedom, a refuge for the oppressed, a bulwark against tyranny; its future brilliant like the crimson of its banner, peaceful as the white that tempers it, its glorious galaxy of stars increasing until all the world shall know that to be an American citizen surpasses all the grandeur of wealth or relation.

Hon. Eben F. Stone, our representative-elect to Congress, was called upon to respond to this toast. Col. Stone said that he noticed on the invitation he had received the motto: "Ubique patriam reminisce," everywhere remember your country. He inquired how it was that to the soldier the idea of country is paramount to others? In other vocations the idea does not occur, but with the soldier this idea is always associated, and it is because the citizen soldier is needed when the interest of the committee is at stake. It is the love of country which causes his services to be regarded with honor by his fellow men. So it was in the war, when our heroes were slain in fighting not for Massachusetts, but for the Union. The war of the Revolution was a war of the United Colonies for the sake of Massachusetts; in the war of the Rebellion it was Massachusetts fighting for the Union.

The next toast was intended for a response from the Commander in Chief Merrill, but as he was obliged to leave, Mr. Randall said that he should combine two toasts in one and call on Comrade Gibbs, of Department Commander Creasey's staff, and gave the following:

The Grand Army of the Republic:
May its fraternal feeling grow warmer and warmer as its ranks grow less; its charity be like a never failing spring; its loyalty a fitting complement in peace to its services in time of war.

Our State Department of the G. A. R.:
The centre from which radiates an influence which inspires the Grand Army under it to continue in its mission of good fellowship and of good deeds.

Comrade Gibbs said that the services recalled a scene as we fell into line and enlisted in the service of our country, and marched and countermarched, so now we have done to-day; we have been called upon to stand at an open portal; and it is no more than our duty as soldiers to pause at this noble monument and solemnly re-consecrate ourselves to the interests of the G. A. R., and under our flag to the duties of an enlarged citizenship; and that beneath the shadow of the monument we again-say we are once more upon the highway of duty and peace. In conclusion, he proposed three cheers for the State of Massachusetts, which were given with a will.

Two toasts were then read to which responses would have been made had time permitted, viz:

Our friends who aid:
Thanks to the second division. We remember with gratitude how Irishmen shed their blood for their adopted country; may the rights they fought for then, be theirs, in the land of their nativity.

Mr. P. H. O'Conor was expected to reply.

Our Fire Department:
May prosperity stream upon it, without a break, may it never receive the fire of unjust criticism, but each member rise upon the ladder of fortune until life is played out.

Mr. D. S. Littlefield was expected to reply.

The Town of Peabody:
Faithful in the hour of trial, lavish of its treasure in time of need, showing its gratitude by our beautiful monument, it supplements all by the services of to-day.

Mr. Amos Merrill responded in his usual happy manner, giving numerous interesting statistics as to the early history of the town; which, being of some length, we will publish in our next issue.

At the conclusion of Mr. Merrill's remarks, owing to the lateness of the hour, the other toasts were obliged to be omitted, but through the kindness of Mr. Randall we are permitted to give them entire, and the names of the parties who were expected to respond.

The Press:
A power ruling more territory than the largest army, exerting a greater influence than the thunder of the mightiest cannon, may it ever speak for freedom, justice, and the rights of man.

Hon. N. A. Horton, of the Gazette.

The Committee on Erecting the Monument:
Frank in speech, Wiley in council, we feel Warren-ted in saying that each including Mr Proctor has done as well as though he Osborn to the position and the Hardy structure which is the result of their labors is Reli-han some.

Mr. F. E. Farnham, of the Monument Committee.

The Ladies:
Whether as sisters of charity on the battle-field—angels of mercy in the hospital—or friends working lovingly at home the thought of them was an inspiration to duty, a support in time of danger, and the cause of many a prayer for a blessing upon them.

Mr. Isaac Hardy.

Our Orator of the Day:
"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver;" able, eloquent, and instructive, our orator is ever prepared to illustrate the text.

Rev. J. F. Lovering.

Our Friends at home:
With the rear well guarded, an army fights well—while we tried to do our duty in the field, we knew that those at home were watching over our interests in a King-ly manner.

Mr. James P. King.

Our Escort:
Last in this list but first in our line—excellent in its discipline and appearance may its presence be everywhere as welcome as it is here.

Lieut. Col. Samuel Dalton of the Salem Cadets.

SCENES AND INCIDENTS.

A number of residences, etc., were appropriately decorated, and several citizens kept open house. The residence of Hon. A. A. Abbott was neatly trimmed with the national colors. A window at the residence of John Pinder was appropriately arranged. G. A. R. Hall showed the skill of the decorator in the fine arrangement of bunting entwined with the stars and stripes. At the top was the motto "Gather from the graves of honored dead increased devotion to the cause for which they gave their lives." There were besides the seal of the G. A. R., three shields with the words, "Fraternity," "Charity," "Loyalty." Between the flags was the motto, "Charity never faileth."

Mr. P. H. O'Connor, Chief Marshal of the Second Division, as he dismissed his command in front of Hibernian Hall, thanked them for their courtesy and complimented them on their appearance in a neat little speech.

The Abel Proctor H. & L. entertained members of the Fire Department of Beverly, in the room over Caskin's stove store. Refreshments were served, and a royal good time enjoyed.

As the procession was passing through Endicott street the horse rode by Adj. Gen. and Chief of Staff E. C. Spofford threw his rider, who struck on the side of his head making painful but not serious injuries. The horse then trampled on a boy named Lee, who was slightly injured.

Our citizens generally were certainly willing to respond to all calls, and those who were favored feel greatly indebted for the use of horses kindly tendered for the use of the Marshal's staff by Mr. Geo. Upton.

No arrests were made during the day, but in the evening seven "beauties" made their way under escort to the station-house.

HISTORY OF THE MONUMENT.

The idea of the erection of a Soldier's Monument originated with Post 50 G. A. R. and on Nov 24th, 1879, Comrade W. F. Sumner made a motion "that the Post erect a monument to the soldiers and sailors of this town who died during the War of the Rebellion, and that an executive Committee of fifteen be appointed to build the same." These motions were laid on the table for three weeks, at the end of which time, Mr. Sumner being absent, they were continued on the table until Feb. 9th, 1880, when the subject was taken from the table and it was voted that a Committee of seven be appointed as a Committee of Conference to consider the subject of a Soldier's Monument, and to act to the best of their discretion on the subject. The following Committee were chosen: Commander C. T. Batchelder, Past Com. W. M. Ward, F. Osborn Jr., W. F. Wiley, Frank E. Farnham, W. F. Sumner, W. W. Reed. On the 10th of Feb. they reported to the Post that they had been instrumental in causing an article to be inserted in the town warrant for the approaching annual meeting. At the annual town meeting held March 3rd, 1880, under article 28, in relation to a Soldier's Monument, the following Committee of five was appointed to confer with a committee from Post 50, G. A. R., H. H. Proctor, S. F. Blaney, C. Warren Osborn, J. P. King, Wm. H. Little. The Committee appointed by the Post were the same as mentioned above. At the adjourned town meeting March 17, Mr. C. W. Osborn, in behalf of the committee appointed, made a report that the following vote be adopted: "That a committee of seven be appointed by the town to select a site for a Soldier's Monument, and examine plans and estimate expense of the same, to report at some future meeting of the town."

This vote was passed, and a committee of three was nominated to present the names of seven citizens for the Committee, and later in the meeting they presented the following names, which were accepted: C. W. Osborn, Isaac Hardy, H. H. Proctor, T. J. Relihan, F. E. Farnham, Wm. F. Wiley, F. Osborne Jr.

This Committee organized by the choice of C. W. Osborn as President, and Frank E. Farnham as Secretary, and advertised that they were ready to receive plans and proposals for building the monument. They received in the neighborhood of thirty designs, from which a selection was very difficult, and among them were four designs from the Hallowell Granite Co. one of which incorporated some of the points of the present monument. After much deliberation, the Committee, from the different designs presented and their own ideas, suggested some alterations and which Mr. George F. Bodwell, Supt. of the Hallowell Granite Co., undertook to embody for them in a new and different design, and the present draft was presented to the Monument Committee. This plan with a few alterations was accepted, and a special town meeting was called in the evening of Aug. 24, at which Amos Merrill was chosen Moderator. Mr. C. W. Osborn presented the report of the Monument Committee, which was in substance a recommendation that $8,000 be appropriated for a monument and preparing the foundation and other expenses, and the Square be the place for its erection. The report was divided, and after earnest and patriotic speeches by Mr. C. W. Osborn, Richard Smith and Stephen Blaney, it was voted to adopt the report and the recommendations in regard to it, 107 voting in the affirmative and no negative being declared. There was a difference in opinion in regard to its location, but it was voted with a slight opposition that it be placed on the Square. It was also voted that the committee have entire charge of the matter. A picture of the monument was submitted to the meeting, and was the subject of very favorable comment. After the meeting the contract was placed with the Hallowell Co. for $6,550 and work was at once begun on it. The foundation was laid early in the fall of 1880, the first ground being broken Nov. 10th, and it was expected that it would be ready for dedication in April at the anniversary of Fort Sumpter. But owing to unforseen results, chiefly an accident to the stone from which the figure was to be made in the quarry it was delayed. The committee awarded to Messrs. Scott Bros. the work of laying the foundation, which was completed by them in a satisfactory manner; they then decided to put another base on top of the one erected by Scott Bros. and the Hallowell Co. gave them the contract for this also, but finding that they could not do the work to the satisfaction of the contractors, the Hallowell Co. completed the work themselves.

The monument is an honor to the town, the committee, and the dead heroes whose names are on the tablets, and whose memories coming ages will revere. It is the expression of the Supt. of the Company which erected it, that of all the monuments built by them —and some of them costing enormous amounts,—this is the nearest to their idea of what such a work should be. It is fifty feet high from the sub base which is fifteen feet square. It is surmounted by a figure copied from Crawford's statue of America on the top of the Capitol building at Washington with a few changes which the committee regard as improvements. In the left hand instead of a coat of arms is a broken shackle, and the sword is held at a different angle from the original statue of America. On the tablets are the names of the deceased soldiers and sailors, viz.:

ORATION

BY REV. J. F. LOVERING, CHAPLAIN-IN-CHIEF G. A. R.

COMRADES OF THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC;

VETERANS OF THE ARMY AND NAVY;

FELLOW CITIZENS;—I deem it to be an honorable privilege to address you this day. I welcome every occasion which permits me to give reverence to that past in which the destinies of our country were cradled, and to lay however humble a wreath upon any memorial that expresses the affectionate remembrance of a grateful people of that manhood which sacrificed itself on the land and on the sea, in battle or in hospital, for the security of the Union, for the authority of the Constitution, for the honor of the Flag, and for the perpetuity of the Nation.

New England is the home of liberty. It has a hard soil; but no soil upon the face of the globe is fat enough to raise a better harvest than that which comes from our steep hill sides, our narrow valleys and our rocky pastures,—the harvest of virtue and valor, of a pure womanhood and a brave manhood. Its coasts are guarded by rocky cliffs, against which the mighty surges of the stormy Atlantic are dashed into spray; but no less stern and unconquerable have been the hearts that have barricaded those fortresses of national power and life—our New England homes. Its mountains, noble in their contours, picturesque in their forests and ravines, adorned with crystal springs and wild cascades, may not lift such haughty heads into the sky as other mountains in other lands, but nowhere throughout the world can our eagle find a worthier resting-place than on the summit of that mountain which wears upon its forehead the august, the illustrious name of Washington.

But of all New England no State can more justly claim pre-eminence for thrift, for virtue, for intelligence and valor, than that State which on its shores has that altar of freedom and faith on which the unchained waters of the Atlantic have lifted their baptism, and which we call Plymouth Rock—which wears upon its brow that obelisk of granite—that horn of strength and dignity—that exclamation point of patriotism—the monument of Bunker Hill; which holds upon its broad breast as a shield more precious than that belonging to Achilles, those fields once wet with patriot blood—Concord common and Lexington green—on which was first written in your ancestral blood the autograph of American Liberty.

I rejoice with you that this town has a right to participate in the heritage of honor belonging to our beloved Commonwealth, not only because she is embraced within the limits of its territory, but because she has earned a reputation for herself and added her own renown to that of the old Bay State. She has not always had independence, but has steadily grown in that, as in all other respects. She was born of the loins of Salem, and known as the Middle Precinct. For a century she was regarded as an adjunct to Danvers—its South Parish. Yet in the history of that century, without detracting from or obscuring the enduring and illustrious character which the town of Danvers justly claims, let us not forget that in more than one instance we are reminded of what has been true in more than one territory, large and small, that Athens is Greece and Rome the Empire!

Within the limits of this town is that perennial spring of social and spiritual life, the old South Church. Here also was the old Bell Tavern, where Isaac Wilson being caught selling the forbidden tea was obliged to recite—

"I, Isaac Wilson, a Tory I be,
I, Isaac Wilson, I sells tea."

Lines that doubtless make up in truth what they lack in poetry. Here Captain, afterwards General, Gideon Foster called the roll of his company before he set out for Lexington. Here Pickering's regiment halted on its way to Bunker Hill. Here Arnold's men received a hearty God-speed as they "plunged into the wilderness to perish at Quebec." It was on this campaign that Arnold received a wound incapacitating him, for some time, for active service. If it had been his death-wound it would have saved our Revolutionary cause from the smirch of his treason. There is a story told connected with this wound. It indicates the temper of the times. After his treason Arnold was engaged in predatory excursions in Virginia. On one of them he captured an American captain of militia. Arnold asked his prisoner one day what he thought the Americans would do with him if he fell into their power. The captain replied: "They will cut off the leg which was wounded when you were fighting for the cause of liberty and bury it with the honors of war, and hang the rest of your body on a gibbet."

We are justified in such reminiscences. They suggest names and deeds, the patriots and the battle-fields which made not only the days of the Revolution forever memorable but the history of this State forever illustrious. The surges of the Atlantic as they beat upon the shores of Massachusetts Bay sent the message of freedom to the Berkshire hills. They caught the sound thereof and sent its echoes flying throughout the valleys and along the hillsides, and the power of that message has not been exhausted yet. What! are those names to be held cheap that stand for fidelity to principle, resistance to tyrants and yeoman faith in God? What! are those fields once hallowed by the blood of our sires to be as so much barren earth? What! are those rivers whose waves were once reddened by the life of heroes, and that have not yet forgotten the shouts and songs of patriotism, to be as other rivers where souls are numb and hearts are dead to every throb of valor? Forbid it, Almighty God!

Yet a special duty is laid upon us. We are called upon to review, not in words—there is no time for that—but in thought, those days, this generation has not yet out-lived. We may look through a brief space of years and see a mighty people—this nation—throw off its apparent indifference and with indignation resent the insult which was offered to it by those who had been humored as spoiled children, and who, with insolent conceit, thought our forbearance was weakness if not timidity. But the bugle sounded the alarm; the drums beat the long roll; the shrill fife made music in city streets and country lanes; and out from workshops and stores, from counting houses and farms, from schoolhouses and churches, sprang an army, all equipped, with the rallying cry on every lip—for liberty and law, for the rights of man and the union of the states, for God and our country.

Do you remember those days and those armies? I shall not forget them.

"Hark! I hear the tramp of thousands,
And of armed men the hum;
Lo! a nation's hosts have gathered
Round the quick alarming drum—
Saying, "Come,
Freemen, come!
Ere your heritage be wasted," said the quick alarming drum.

"Let me of my heart take counsel;
War is not of life the sum;
Who shall stay and reap the harvest
When the Autumn days have come?
But the drum
Echoed, "Come!
Death shall reap the better harvest," said
the solemn sounding drum.

"What if, 'mid the cannon's thunder,
Whistling shot and bursting bomb,
When my brothers fall around me,
Should my heart grow cold and numb!
But the drum
Answered, "Come,
Better there in death united, than in life a recreant. Come!"

"Thus they answered—hoping, fearing,
Some in faith and doubting some,
'Till a trumpet voice proclaiming,
Said, "My chosen people, come!"
Then the drum,
Lo! was dumb,
For the great heart of the nation, throbbing, answered, "Lord, we come!"

Remember! Who can forget? I have seen mothers embrace their sons, wives their husbands, sisters their brothers, sweethearts their lovers, and so send them to make clean the streets of Baltimore with their blood, to fling back treason into the pit from whence it rose, and to go forth to the battle-field singing—this is gospel truth, I have heard them do it—singing:

"Yes, we'll rally round the flag, boys,
we'll rally once again,
Shouting the battle-cry of freedom."

Remember! Who can forget? When homes were made desolate, and every throb of the telegraph quickened the pulse-beat in every heart.

Remember! Who can forget? When our ears were aching with the groans of the dying and the shrieks of the living; when men prayed in agony for death and found no respite for their tortures but in the grave. Remember! who can forget? When the hospitals were full and the blue-tinted gunshot wound, the red slash of the sabre wound, the ragged wound from broken shell, had an eloquence all their own. Remember! Who can forget the ghastly spectres that trembled and tottered and gazed about with lunatic stare—spectres who went from our homes strong men, and graduated from the chivalrous homes of Southern hospitality at Libby and Andersonville, living skeletons—almost breathless ghosts!

Remember! I see our gallant heroes marching through mire and through dust; I see them shivering about the campfires through winter; I see them exhausted beneath the summer sun; I see them in the fierce pursuit, I see them on the battle-field, I see them with the "army blue," their only coffin, lying in the long trench. Remember! remember!! Who can forget? Let no man who loves his country and human rights forget. Let only those forget who can sell their conscience for a ballot and sell themselves to the—highest bidder!

In my reference to this State of Massachusetts, I spoke of Plymouth Rock as our "altar of liberty." It is an altar because built solidly on principle. The rock as a rock is of no significance. It weighs so much, more or less. But the rock monumenting an unconquerable faith and indomitable resolution, means so much that only as its ledges underly the nation as a foundation can the nation endure. The rock is too large for Plymouth, and, as has been well said, Plymouth has no right to the "whole of it." It only cropped out there.—It has cropped out a great many times in our history. You may recognize it always. Old Putnam stood upon it at Bunker Hill when he said to the Yankee boys, "Don't fire till you see the whites of their eyes." Jefferson had it for a writing desk when he drafted the Declaration of Independence, and the "statute of liberty for Virginia." And going down the years a little, don't we believe that the hero of Harper's Ferry, whose "soul goes marching on," if he did not stand on the rock when he made the soil of Virginia tremble with the tramp of the advance guard of that grand army which struck the shackles from every slave, did have a piece of the rock in his pocket. Did not Lincoln—may his memory never be less!—lean on that rock when he wrote the Emancipation Proclamation? Indeed, I think there must have been a splinter of it in the nib of his pen! Did not that great Captain, illustrious throughout the world, and honored in the heart of every stalwart American, represent that rock when, at the Wilderness fight, with a pen cut out of a sword, he wrote the words, "We'll fight it out on this line if it takes all summer?" Was there not something of that rock in the brave heart and mighty soul and eloquent speech of our hero-statesman, who quelled the tumult of an indignant mob by the impressive words, "God reigns and the government at Washington still lives." Did he not then ascend a throne higher than that presidential chair from which he was thrown down to death by the dastard stroke of an assassin only to be lifted upon the hearts of the American people, so that beside the name of Washington and Lincoln shall be written the honored and beloved name of James A. Garfield? And to-day, though yonder granite shaft be from the quarries of Maine, yet when you set upon it the statue of America it becomes a piece of Plymouth Rock itself. The ledge is under our feet.—The manhood it represents is in our midst, as a memory and as an ideal—a memory and ideal associated with and exemplified by the American Soldier and Sailor.

1. We shall readily acknowledge this if we will consider what it is the soldier and sailor stand for. We shall find, I think, that they stand, first of all, for intelligent citizenship. Not for citizenship without any qualification, for that may be unintelligent, not knowing and not caring anything about the duties imposed by State or Nation upon the citizen, or those duties which immediately exist and devolve upon the individual because of the mutual relations which should govern social and civil intercouse. Citizenship may be imagined to mean only that protection of law which secures immunity from personal harm, and so guards personal, selfish interests. It may be thought to mean the exercise of authority as a right without any adequate understanding of the responsibility associated with such right. Nor are we to emphasize intelligence alone. That may be so abstracted from all active, practical interests as to render the man inefficient so far as the ordinary work of life is concerned. No one doubts the intellect of Sir Isaac Newton; yet Sir Isaac Newton having occasion to call upon a young lady at an interesting climax of of his life, forgot his companion, lighted his pipe and, taking her hand, tried to use her finger as a tobacco stopper.

Intelligent citizenship seeks to know and to express whatever can elevate, guard, and advance the individual, the community and the State. There can be no question that it belonged to the American soldier and sailor. To be born in a land of liberty, to live amidst the habits fostered by liberty, is to give to every one of average intelligence a civil education apart from the advantages of our schools which tends inevitably to encourage an active and thoughtful patriotism, which must be regarded an essential, if not a paramount, qualification for citizenship.

Once, in the army, I was taken to task by a man who had been hastily promoted above the eagle to a "brevet" star, because I defended the rights of a private soldier. In reply to something I had said, the remark was made that for his part he didn't want a soldier to think, that all he was meant for was to obey orders. My answer was that the American soldier understood the cause for which he was fighting; he understood the principles underlying that cause, and that were at stake in the conflict; he knew he was an element in the State itself and therefore was the best defence the nation could have.—The best soldiers were not machines, but "Men, high-minded men! * * *

Men who their duties knew,
Who knew their rights, and knowing dared maintain!"

2. In the second place the American soldier and sailor stand for heroic patriotism. Every name upon that monument means that every son of Peabody whose name is chiseled there, whether native-born or adopted, bears witness to that quality of genuine manhood which must enter into heroic patriotism. Let me not be misunderstood. I do not mean that these men or those who were their comrades in the army or navy, never felt the slightest quiver of fear. Courage does not consist in not appreciating the danger to be met with or in not fearing that danger. "Uninstructed courage," says Plato, "is that of the wild beast or of a slave." (Republic, book 14, page 430.) No! courage does appreciate the danger, courage may even quail before danger; but courage is able, despite of everything, to stand firm and do the duty demanded. Courage is not in physical strength or nervous insensibility, but in moral stamina.

I recall in the army a big, blathering fellow, who in any game of brag could sweep the board every time. Take his word for it, and Alexander the Great, Cæsar, Napoleon and any half-dozen captains most renowned in history were represented in his single person. If he had held the rank his speech might indicate, he should have worn, not the stars of a Major-General, or Lieutenant General, or even General, but he should have been covered with stars and had his head-quarters among the stars. Yet that man was singularly unfortunate in being subject to the most mysterious and unexpected maladies. Did you ever know, in these days of peace, of persons being troubled with the most excruciating and blinding headaches, once in seven days and that day invariably the Sabbath? They express the most melancholy regrets that they are deprived of the privileges of the sanctuary, "but really them headaches! Nobody can tell the feelin' of goneness they do produce." Yes, great "goneness"—away from the meeting-house.

Well, this man was spasmodically affected with the most exhausting sickness. His knees grew weak and shook badly. His face turned pale. He stammered in his speech. He wanted to stay with the regiment. But he was obliged to leave for the hospital. Two strange facts were connected with this sickness; the first was that the surgeon could never find any disease about him, that is, it was very obscure. The second fact was that these periodic attacks always, invariably, recurred on the eve of an engagement. At last, having exhausted every other remedy, the surgeon prescribed this order, which I suppose was intended either to kill or cure, that Thomas Jones, if that were his name, should be compelled to fight through the next engagement. Ah! I shall never forget the result. A bullet struck him, just giving him a slight flesh wound in the arm. He reported immediately at the hospital. There was no delay,

He "stood not upon the order of his going
But went at once."

When he saw me, he rushed up and shouted, "Chaplain, I got hit this time. Almost took my arm off. The worst fight I was ever in, but I gave it to the Johnnies, you bet!"

Another man, one of those little fellows we used to call 'ponies,' was in a sharp fight. He stood his ground; he loaded and fired. He never stirred from his tracks. No one, to see him from a distance, would think he was at all moved by the serious peril in which he stood. But his captain saw him tremble, saw the tears come in his eyes and roll down his cheeks, and his lips quiver. "Jim, Jim," he cried out, in a vehement half-whisper, "what ails you? You look like a baby." "I don't care if I do," said Jim, as he rammed another cartridge home. "I wish I was a baby, and a gal baby, too. But I came out here to fight and, d-d-d-damn it, I'm a-goin' to." There was never any question in the heart of that captain or of any of his company, about Jim's courage. Instances could be multiplied of the most valiant and persistent heroism, and every instance would prove that the incentive was the most self-sacrificing patriotism. After the battle of Chickamauga was three years old, the battle-field was ploughed over. In one part of the field was found a bronze eagle which had once had its perch on the staff of a United States flag; within a very short distance of that eagle were found thirteen skulls. So much life, so much valor, so much desperate heroism, as those skulls represented had been given, even unto death before that eagle touched the ground, and even there it was guarded by the heroic patriotism that had defended it to the last. Let us see that such heroic patriotism be not forgotten. Let us see to it that it become the habit of American citizenship. Let us see to it as we reverence our dead, as we dedicate our monument, as we anywhere salute our flag, that such patriotism shall be honored throughout the nation, from the forests of Maine to the lagoons of Louisiana.

3. In the third place the American soldier and sailor stand for national strength and power, i. e., for achievement and possibility. The achievement has been in the vindication of the nation's right to exist. The possibility is that which opens before the nation an auspicious and continued progress. The strength and power of the nation thus expressed has been by means of the two mighty arms of the nation, the army and the navy. In saying this I would not exalt either or both unduly. I remember that it is peculiarly true that national strength and power are vested in the citizen. The man with a ballot is the final power. But there was a day, remember, when the man with a ballot was a man with a bullet; and the citizenship to-day which is represented by the ballot is good for something simply because our dead heroes and their living representatives had strong hearts and steady nerves to play at toss ball with Minie bullets, mortar bombs and Whitworth bolts. The soldier and the sailor stand for that self-respect which the nation cannot afford to be without. They stand for prompt service in obedience to every call of the nation. Without them, without the manhood belonging to them wrought into the very substance of the citizen, no nation can secure and retain any honorable position or exert any honorable influence. This is no plea for war, or for the spirit of war. It is rather a plea for what may avert war. Victor Hugo says, "The sword is but a hideous flash in the darkness. Right is an eternal ray." It is true, yet "the hideous flash" may be necessary, "in the darkness," and may lead forth the morning when the "right" may "shine" with "an eternal ray." It cleaves through the midnight. It makes way for the shining of the right. "May be necessary!"—it must be necessary—"in the darkness," and when it is necessary the soldier or the sailor who holds that sword has shining upon its blade the light from the sceptre of God Himself!

But, comrades and fellow-citizens, it is time I should close. I will detain you but a short time longer. The honorable service to which you called me, so far as I am able to perform it, is well nigh done. I rejoice with you that the story of those elder days when you were held, as it were, in the womb of our colonial and revolutionary life is not without interest. I rejoice with you that you can rightfully claim direct descent from those who gave to the sacrifice at Lexington in 1775 more than any other community outside of Lexington itself, and that sending forth to the war for the preservation of the Union, for the emancipation of a race, for the establishment of national honor and power seven hundred and forty-four soldiers and sailors—a surplus of fifty-one above your quota—you can engrave seventy names on your roster of heroes who, on land or sea, surrendered their lives "that the Union might be preserved and liberty secured to all." I rejoice with you that of that number are those who represent our gallant sailor boys—the brave Blue Jackets who handled boarding pike or cutlass, and that one of them was of the noble crew of the devoted Cumberland, which, riddled with shot and crushed by the rebel ironclad, sank,—the brave boys firing a broadside as she sank,—sank to her grave beneath the waves of the sea still flying at her masthead the flag for whose honor she had fought. I rejoice with you that, among the gallant soldier boys, you can honor the memory of one of the youngest soldiers of the war, who, wounded at Fredericksburg, lingered for weary months in constant suffering, but never lost his spirit of loyal patriotism. I rejoice with you that having confirmed and made sacred the granite strength of your monumental shaft by engraving upon it the names of your heroes, you have set upon it the symbol of the life of the people—the statue not merely of American Liberty but of America herself.

And, moreover, I rejoice with you that not only the thrift and prosperity, but the very heroism belonging to your town is embraced in that name you have worn for nearly fourteen years—the name of Peabody. It is not that in these modern days that name is the synonym for commercial probity, enterprise and success. It is not that there was a Peabody "with the gallant 1500 on the bloody crest of Bunker Hill," or that the name belonged to one of the Knights of King Arthur in the days made splendid by feats of chivalrous emprise. But the name itself is a pledge of good fortune to this brave, loyal, prosperous community. In it is the kingly title "Boadie," meaning man, while the prefix "Pea" denotes his home—stronger than castle or fortress—a mountain. It is certainly suggestive that the Peabody, your man of the mountain, from whom you take your name, was born within the limits of your township, near what is known as Rock village.

Aside from all such considerations this hour will fail to make the impression upon us that it should, unless it can incite us to respect ourselves, to love our country, to honor the nation, and to revere our flag. The past is secure, we know its worth. The present is ours with its burden of duty and responsibility. The future who can reveal? There is no prophecy of that save only in the fidelity of work and faith exalting the present. Let the principles purchased at large cost by the fathers and defended heroically by their sons, continue to be the foundation stones of our nationality; let the rights of all men be respected; let the sanctities of religion be revered; let there be everywhere among the people the strength that comes of valor, the discipline born of work, the enthusiasm springing from a generous, exalted, commanding hope. Then—I do not need to prophecy. You need not speak. On the granite shaft of yonder monument stands the statue of America. Her right hand, resting upon the hilt of a sword peacefully sheathed, is ready to draw it from its scabbard to quell rebellious insurrections at home, or to resist aggressions from abroad, while her left hand holds a broken shackle that, with impressive eloquence, utters that word which gave manhood to a race—Emancipation. See, on the crest of her helmet an eagle's beak embellished with plumes.—See, bound about her forehead an encircling fillet of stars. And look, the statue kindles into life, the eyes flash, the lips move,—listen!—you may hear these words, perchance:—

My people, look forth with radiant faith. My people, gather up your soul in supreme courage. I have watched the nation in its beginnings. I have walked with it in the way of its achievements. I have surveyed the scope of its possibility. I see villages cluster on the hillsides and on distant prairies. I see lakes and rivers and seas populous with the freightage of states and nations. I see railroads multiply and telegraphs enmesh ths land. I hear the hum of Briareau-armed industries along country streams and within prosperous cities. I see homes bud and blossom and bear fruit; and virtue increase; and intelligence thrive and to all such progress there is no conceivable end.

Before me are the uplifted gates of the future. Rejoice, O my people, rejoice! Go forth into the glory beyond. I have surveyed its promise. The splendor of to-day is but the morning star of the brightness of the day that shall be. I have surveyed its promise; nowhere, in all its firmament, do I see the possibility of a setting sun.

TRIPLE SHEET.

OUR READERS need no apology from us for the space in our paper devoted to the exercises of dedication, and matters pertaining thereto. It is an occasion which occurs but once in a lifetime, and to all patriotic citizens it is the theme of the hour. As years go by, as the number of the roll of the Grand Army of the Republic grows smaller, the memory of our brave sons, whose names are recorded there, will be revered more and more, and the granite erected in honor of their devoted service will become still more enduring in the hearts of those of us who remain. Their services can never be forgotten. And while we remember them with our tribute of to-day, let us not forget that to us it is given to preserve to our descendants, the principles for which they sacrificed their honor and their lives.

The PRESS of this issue contains a roll of honor of the soldiers and sailors who participated in the War of the Rebellion.. As will be seen, it is a very comprehensive list and was prepared at this office, at great labor and expense, by Mr. CHAS. D. HOWARD. It is with pride that we present the names of this long roll; it is a matter of history to the town, and is the only full and complete list that has ever been published. The list is substantially the same as deposited in the copper box in the monument, there being a few additions for which we are kindly indebted to Mr. NATHAN H. POOR. It is not to be supposed that this list is infallible, but we feel that it is the nearest approach to it which has ever been attempted, and shall esteem it a favor if friends of the soldiers will call our attention to any discrepancies which their personal knowledge will enable them to make. In this connection we give place to the following letter which speaks for itself:

PEABODY, Sept. 22, 1881.

Mr. C. D. HOWARD,—Dear Sir,—You have the hearty thanks of the Monument Committee for the preparation and printing of the long list of names of the Soldiers and Sailors who went to the War of the Rebellion from Peabody, deposited in the box placed beneath the monument.

Truly yours,
C. W. OSBORN,
Chairman Mon. Com.

WE PRESENT our readers this week with a triple sheet, containing SEVENTY COLUMNS. The press of advertising, together with the full account of the dedication services, renders this necessary; and it is with pride that we refer to the fact that we are able to give our patrons nearly twice as large a sheet as is published in the county.—Our paper this week contains 34 columns of reading matter and 36 columns of advertisements, either one of which is more than the entire number of columns, all told, of the most of our cotemporaries. The preparation of the paper has necessitated much labor, and we feel confident that our readers will appreciate our labors in their behalf.—We tender our thanks to Rev. J. F. Lovering for his kindness in furnishing us an advance copy of his address, and to all who have assisted us in the preparation of the paper. In this connection we may be pardoned for saying that the PRESS will continue to be all that our united efforts can make it, to the end that it may be worthy of the support of our citizens here and elsewhere.

We find on the record of the School Committee that the following vote was passed at their last meeting, viz.:—"That Mr. James N. Ham's engagement as teacher of the High School of this town expires on or before the 18th day of February, 1882." We understand that this vote was passed unanimously by that body.—Reporter.

The impression intended to be given out by the closing sentence of the above is incorrect, and the entire item was published by our neighbor against the expressed wishes and request of the School Committee. We are assured that the object sought by the passage of the vote was not unanimously approved by the Committee. The crowded state of our columns this week forbids any more particular statement of its purport, which will appear in a later issue of our paper.

The vote for representative from this town was very close, and it appeared doubtful many times during the day which candidate would be successful. Mr. Thomas Carroll, the democratic nominee, is a very popular and able man, and though defeated by the Republicans as we anticipated he would be, he is to be congratulated on the large complimentary vote he received. Were we to have been defeated, we could not have chosen a man whom we would rather see wear the honors than Mr. Carroll.

The thanks of the PRESS office are tendered to Mr. Ira A. Burnham for the generous collation sent to us, in our efforts, by laboring into the small hours, to give to our readers an early account of the dedication services. That it was appreciated, he would have had no reason to doubt, if he had seen us enjoy it.

In our last issue, referring to the change in management of the Lynn Transcript, the types made us say "valedictory" of his interesting salutation to his readers. We trust it will be many years hence before brother Newhall will write his valedictory to the readers of the Transcript.

We shall publish in our next issue a communication from Rev. L. L. Wood, in reply to some editorial remarks we made in our last issue. This courtesy we are happy to be able to extend, in justice to him and ourselves.

The prohibitory men talk considerably about holding the balance of power; 1719 votes in the entire state is a good balance. Republicans and democrats, beware!

The Greenback vote in the entire state was less than 5000.—pretty large for a live party.

On the East side beneath the names are the figures 1861, typical of the beginning of the war and above a figure of the Constitution, which is our civil bulwark and for the defence of the provisions of which the first gun was fired. On the West side the figures 1863, the date of Lincoln's ever memorable Proclamation of Emancipation, and above it in a scroll is the representation of that document. On the North side the date 1865, the year symbolizing the surrender of Lee's army and the end of the war, and above the names the coat-of-arms of our own State bearing this motto so commemorative and appropriate, "Ense petit placidam sub libertate quietem." On the South side 1881 symbolic of the year of the erection of the monument, and on the tablet on this side above the figures the inscription, "The town to her sons who died in the Great Rebellion, that the Union might be preserved, and liberty secured to all."

Immediately below the statue of America on a round ball is the National motto, "E pluribus unum." Previous to the laying of the corner-stone the following articles were deposited in the copper box:

List of Town Officers' for 1881.

As soon as practicable, as the monument neared completion the committee fixed upon Sept. 29th as the date of the dedication, and in connection with Post 50 of the town, arrangements were made for that day. Invitations were extended to the different Posts in the vicinity, and also to the Irish-American Societies, the Masonic and Odd Fellows Lodges, the firemen, the schools and the citizens generally to join in the procession. Geo. S. Osborn M. D. was appointed Chief Marshal. Rev. J. F. Lovering of Worcester was invited to deliver the address and other preparations had been perfected.

As is well known, on the morning of Sept. 20th the news of the decease of our late President Garfield was flashed across the wires, and a sympathizing country stood with bowed heads and reverent faces at the grave of one who had become endeared to all their hearts. It was no time for public display. On the evening of that day the monument committee held a meeting, and after a long discussion, it was unanimously voted:

"That in consequence of the great calamity which has befallen the nation, in the death of President Garfield, we deem it becoming and appropriate that the exercises at the dedication of the Monument be wholly memorial in their character, and everything in the nature of a celebration be avoided, and, therefore, that all parade on that day be dispensed with, and the dedicatory exercises be at the monument at 2.15 P. M. and as follows:

Prayer; Unveiling and Delivery of the Monument; Music; Address; Music."

The action of the Monument Committee in declining to postpone the dedication was not pleasing to the members of the G. A. R. Post, who desired a parade of the different posts, and considerable discussion followed. A special meeting of the Post was called, and they voted to choose a Committee to wait on the monument Committee, to see if a postponement could not be agreed upon. A decision was not arrived at and in the meantime the Post had decided that they would not turn out at the dedication, and had written a letter to the orator, Rev. Mr. Lovering, explaining their action somewhat, and the Monument Committee received a letter from him saying that "he must be excused from taking part in the proposed dedication." The Monument Committee then voted to advise the Selectmen that they "hereby relinquish the duties entrusted to us by the Board of the dedication of the Soldier's Monument of the town", which, of course, resulted in a postponement of the matter until such time as the citizens should elect. Meanwhile the work of cleaning the granite and grading around the base of the monument was carried on, and our people waited: It is no news to the public that this paper advocated a harmonizing of the difference between the old committee and the Grand Army, and afterwards in our issue of Oct. 19, we said, "We see no occasion for the delay of the dedication of our Soldier's Monument until the Spring. * * * * * We feel positive that our people generally will not be satisfied to see it turned over to the town officials without appropriate ceremony. The time for such proceeding is now. We are of the opinion that the Selectmen would be sustained promptly in making a reasonable appropriation and it would be a small matter, if there was any doubt of it, to call a meeting of those in favor of such dedication and take proper action." This article had the effect desired. A petition of citizens signed by Chas. D. Howard, D. P. Grosvenor, S. C. Hewitt, J. N. Ham, Wm. Donnell, Sam'l. Donnell, Jr., B. F. Stevens, C. E. Teague, D. Woodbury, W. F. Sawyer, Geo. Stevens, and C. H. Goulding, was sent to the Selectmen asking them to call a special town meeting which they did for Monday evening, Oct. 31st, "To see what action, if any, the town will take in regard to dedicating the Soldier's Monument in the square, and appropriating a sum of money for the same, agreeably to the petition of Chas. D. Howard and others." In our issue just preceding the meeting we strongly advocated its dedication at once, and the appropriation of $1,000 by the town for that purpose. Some little opposition was developed in the issues of our cotemporaries, but on a damp and very disagreeable evening an enthusiastic town meeting was held, at which in the neighborhood of 200 were present. Isaac Hardy was chosen Moderator. Mr. Charles D. Howard offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of five citizens be appointed, and instructed to to take action for an immediate dedication of the new Soldiers' Monument, in connection with a committee from Post 50, G. A. R., and that it be authorized to draw upon the Town Treasurer for a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars; all bills to be approved by the chairman and secretary.

After little discussion, in the course of which a stirring speech in favor of the resolution was made by Mr. James P. King, and it being evident that the sentiment of the meeting was entirely in one direction, a formal balloting at once commenced and 101 men passed in front of the desk voting in the affirmative, and there being no opposition. A committee of three, consisting of Jas. P. King, D. P. Grosvenor, Jr., and John J. Bartlett, were appointed to retire and present to the meeting the names of a committee of five citizens, who were to act in conjunction with a committee from Post 50, G. A. R.—They reported the names of the following gentlemen who were accepted by the meeting: C. W. Osborn, S. F. Blaney, Jas. Fallon, Mayhew S. Clark, Isaac Hardy. After a motion that the committee be empowered to fill their own vacancies, the meeting adjourned. As soon as possible arrangements were made for the meeting of the Committees, and on Tuesday evening, November 1st, the Committee appointed by the town met in conference with the committee appointed by Post 50, G. A. R., consisting of Geo. Randall (chairman), Wm. H. Hildreth, E. Herbert Davis, George O. Peirce, and Wm. W. Reed. Messrs. C. Warren Osborn and S. F. Blaney having declined to serve on the Citizens' Committee, and the vote of the town having authorized the committee to fill their own vacancies, Messrs. James P. King and Charles D. Howard were elected in their place.—The committee then organized as a whole by the choice of Mr. Isaac Hardy as chairman and Mr. Chas. D. Howard secretary. It was decided that the dedication should take place Thursday, Nov. 10th, and that the original programme should be carried out, as far as practicable and possible.

It was voted to hire the Salem Brass Band, and the following sub-committees were appointed:

To notify Rev. J. F. Lovering—Randall; the Chief Marshal—Hardy; the G. A. R. Posts—Hildreth; to procure Carriages—Fallon; to build platform around the monument and in tent—Clark; on Caterer—Peirce; to locate Tent—King, Reed and Clark.

Dr. Geo. S. Osborne was chosen Chief Marshal by the Committee, but declined, and Col. C. T. Batchelder was appointed to take that position. Invitations were at once sent to the different posts in the county, and it was voted to invite Gov. Long and staff, Adjutant Gen. Berry, Sec. of State Peirce, Commander in Chief Geo. S. Merrill and staff, Dept. Commander Creasy and staff and others of distinction. It was decided to hold the exercises in the South Church, which had been offered for the occasion, and that a parade should precede these exercises, after which the line should reform and march to the tent where a collation would be served. Mr. Ira Burnham was appointed caterer, and Mr. Geo. Randall toast-master. The Salem Cadets were invited to do escort duty, and made a splendid show on the occasion. In another column is found the particulars of the carrying out of the programme of the committee, and it can not fail to be a matter of rejoicing to all of us that the monument has been dedicated with appropriate honors to the memory of our illustrious dead.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The Murray Club met last Monday evening, with a very good attendance. On motion of Rev. Mr. Harmon, a vice-president was added in the By-laws to the list of officers, and Miss Davidson was elected to that office. The entertainment for the evening consisted of vocal and instrumental music, which was given in excellent style, to the great enjoyment of those present. Mrs. A. H. Merrill and Miss Clark led off with a piano duet, following which came a quartette of male voices consisting of Messrs. Taggart, Davidson, F. C. and A. H. Merrill, who sang in a lively and spirited manner. Next came a vocal duet by the Misses Arrington, whose sweet voices blended together in charming unison, to the gratification of an appreciative audience. The piano solo by Miss Eva Raddin was given in a skillful manner, and the quartette of male voices sang again, which finished the evening's entertainment. The club will as usual give some dramatic entertainments and sociables during the coming winter.

In execution of a preconcerted plan the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Draper, to the number of about sixty, gathered at their residence on High street on Friday last, to make merry with that worthy couple, the tenth anniversary of their wedding eve. The visitors came heavily laden with individual gifts —principally of tin—while a combination gift of an elegantly upholstered lounge, testified to the general regard of the assembled friends. A bountiful collation was provided by the host and hostess, and the night until the wee small hours was spent in dancing and merry making.

The anticipated course of entertainments under the auspices of the Odd Fellows Lodge of this town is announced in our advertising columns. It is unnecessary for us to say that the entertainments will be first-class in every respect. The gentlemen having the matter in charge never do anything by halves; and the success of the course is assured from the moment of announcement. The only question is the possibility of securing good seats at the Institute. The sale will open at 9 o'clock, Tuesday morning, Nov. 15th, at the store of Mr. Starr C. Hewitt.

Now that the monument is dedicated and everybody is happy, the correct thing to do is to visit the Norfolk Colored Troubadours, at the Peabody Institute to-morrow (Friday) evening in their version of that popular drama, Uncle Tom's Cabin. There are 21 people in the troupe; they are all colored people, and born singers and actors. Seats are for sale at Stevens', and our people should give them a full house; the entertainment is under the management of A. D. Morrison, who proposes to favor our people with others, should this prove successful. Go and see.

Peabody, Nov. 10, 1881.

The action of the School Committee, published in the Reporter of last week, fixing a limit to the engagement of Mr. Ham, occasions universal surprise and regret. Citizens of the town, having children in the school, feel that they have a right to inquire into the cause for such action, and hereby request the committee to explain through the PRESS, at their earliest convenience.

Remember that all our advertisers have something of interest to tell our readers. They are all honorable firms, and no enterprising business man will fail to keep his name and business before the public, and the best way to do this is through the columns of a well-circulated local paper. That our advertisers know the PRESS to be such a paper is evidenced by their continual favors. Don't omit the advertisements in reading the paper. Depend upon it, you will find something there worth the price of ten newspapers.

With a deep sense of pride in our noble profession do we arise to explain what our neighbor could not seem to comprehend about our item in relation to the De La Matyr "picnic" last week. As tickets were issued and none received at this office, we took it for granted that the affair was private. Do you "catch on," neighbor? The clearness with which you think you understand things and your total inability to express what little you know will make your fortune as a philosopher.

An out-of-town bicyclist, just at dark, riding up Lowell street, last Monday, and when in front of our office, as he attempted to turn out for a team, his machine struck a stone and he was thrown almost under the horse's hoofs. Fortunately he was but slightly injured, but his bicycle was badly demolished.

A nice lot of White Granite Plate, all sizes which we offer at low prices. Bushby & Co. —Adv.

Last Wednesday evening Rev. Father McKenna, O. P., delivered a lecture in St. John's Church, under the auspices of the Holy Name Society. There was a large audience, as the lecturer is a most eloquent and effective speaker. His subject upon this occasion was "Faith." He opened by saying that it is a universal fact that all persons desire happiness, but they differ in their ideas of what constitutes happiness. He most effectively touched upon Ireland, and feelingly described the parting of friends in that unhappy land. The lecturer then passed to the consideration of divine faith, which he said was the most important of all. He then dwelt for some time upon the unchanging creed of Catholics, and closed his discourse about 9.15.—Reporter.

Mt. Vernon street presents a very dismal appearance in the evening, even when the moon is full. While the other streets in the neighborhood have each two new lampposts added, on Walnut street the posts being a few rods' distant of each other, no addition has been made, which, together with Grove street, is but poorly lighted. What lampposts there are in these places have been put up by private subscription, never costing the town a cent.

A friend sojourning in Sandwich last summer, on visiting the cemetery in the western part of the town, found a stone on which was the following:

"Sacred to the memory of —— ——. Aged 85.

"Budded on earth,
Bloomed in heaven."

Another suggests she might be a "century plant."

It has been stated in the Salem dailies that a foot ball match is to be played between members of our two temperance organizations in town. We are authorized by the F. M. C. T. A. Society to contradict this report, as no such arrangements have been made by either society. They have organized a club, however, and are ready to receive challenges.

Last Wednesday, Mr. William H. Brown, the glue man, took the larger part of his employes to Boston and visited both fairs and the theatre in the evening. It was a gala day for the men as Mr. Brown footed all the bills besides paying them their regular wages. Such terms of intimacy between employer and employe can but result in good to both.

The old house on Central street, opposite H. M. Osborn's store, looks deserted indeed. The house has been closed for a number of years, and is fast going to ruin. It is a pity that this valuable estate cannot be put into the hands of some energetic man to be handled to advantage in these times of a scarcity of tenements and high rents.

A party of ladies and gentlemen from Danvers conducted the services at the Alms House, last Sunday. Mr. John H. Derby preached a short sermon, and was assisted by Messrs. Ham, Waite, Fletcher and Kenniston of that place. Miss Kenniston presided at the organ. The services were very interesting.

"Fine weather is indispensable to an out-of-door celebration. We want no Peabody funeral fizzle here."—Reporter.

Our neighbor's great strength, we know, is in his weather prophecies, but they failed him here. Like Vennor, he will probably say they will be right next time.

The patrons of Heylingberg's barber shop have this week found his always attractive shop, neatly painted and newly papered besides other fittings for a comfortable shave or hair clipping. Mr. H. is the senior in his profession in town and is always up with the times.

The Newburyport Germ says of a Peabody gentleman: George Merrill, of the Peabody House, Salisbury Beach, the favorite resort for sportsmen, will close his hotel on the 15th. Upon this occasion he gives a grand banquet to his sporting patrons.

Every one in town will want a copy of this week's PRESS to send to their friends. We have printed a large extra edition, but fear that we shall be unable to supply the demand. Copies can be had of Starr C. Hewitt, or at this office.

At the Alms House, improvements have been made recently. A row of rock maples have been set out on either side of the lane leading to the house. The chimneys on the house have been re-topped by Mr. Alfred Berry.

A Boston party was in town Thursday, endeavoring to find a location for a new hack and livery stable. They think some of purchasing the Burnham stable on Walnut street, as that is the only way they can secure it.

Mr. W. J. Roome has secured the services of Mr. Daniel Verry at his restaurant, on Foster street, as cook. Dan's reputation in that line is well known, and he will be pleased to serve his friends at all times.

The celebration of the dedication of the Monument will be hardly complete if you don't visit the Danvers Trotting Park on Friday afternoon and witness the grand trot between Peabody horses.

Underwear for winter in plain and fancy colors, all sizes, in White, Red, Red Mix, Red Mixed, Brown Mixed, Old Gold, Blue and Blue Mixed, for $1.25, 1.50, 1.75, 2.00, 2.25.

Over Shirts, Hosiery, Cardigans, Gloves, Mittens, Suspenders, Collars, Cuffs, Ties, Scarfs, Umbrellas, etc.

HORSE CLOTHING.

Don't fail to examine the Kersey, Woolen, Mohair and Saxonville Blankets, just opened at the Shawmut. We are determined that this department shall excel, in size quality and prices, all previous assortments. If in want of a Horse Blanket, Japanese Wolf, Buffalo, or Lap Robe, call, and we shall take pleasure in showing you these goods.

Rubber Goods.

For the largest line of Rubber Goods outside of Boston, look at our stock of Men's and Boys' Rubber Coats, Hats, Caps, Leggings, Oil and Rubber Horse Covers, Blankets, Sheetings, etc.

TRIMMING DEPARTMENT.

Everything desirable in Fur Trimming will be found on our counter this season. Fox, Hare, Coney, Chinchilla, Beaver, and other varieties, comprising an assortment equal to any found elsewhere. Qualities and prices to suit every one. oct19

Selected Story.

The Race.

We rode along the sunny heights,
When morn was rosy bright,
And all the trembling dewdrops crowned
The hills with changeful light.
The swelling buds were sweet and fair,
For spring was wide awake,
And gentle breezes coyly kissed
The blue and dimpled lake.

Fair Mildred's palfrey, snowy-white,
Flew o'er the gleaming hill
Like some rare, winged steed of old,
And quick my pulses thrill,
As soft his mistress turns on me
Her eyes of liquid light,
And gayly cries, "A race, monsieur,'
I answer, eager-bright:

"And if I win, your hand is mine,"
She smiles, with blushing cheek,
And answers, "Yea." Then on we fly
Nor pause one word to speak.
"On, on, Sir Raven!" quick I cry.
And, lo! he's past her side;
And then I turn, with bounding heart,
To greet my promised bride.

Unmasked.

"Don't be rash in this, my dear—don't! What will your friends say—what will the world say—when they hear that Ianthe Howard is going to marry her music-master? What do we know of this man? Oh, pause and consider, my darling—my darling."

And gentle, motherly Mrs. Burnham knelt down on the rich carpet, and slipped her pleading arms round the slender figure before her.

"I have considered, Aunt Helen," the girl said, coldly. "You ask me—what do we know of Jean D'Esterre? And I answer—we know he is a gentleman. That is the only knowledge I value. If you will not consent to our marriage now, we shall wait for a year, and then I shall be my own mistress. But, dear Aunt Helen," with a sudden softening in the proud voice, "do be my friend in this! You have been so kind to me all my life, and now—"

The beautiful, dark face grew strangely pleading.

"Now I am kinder than I ever was," Aunt Helen said—"kinder, because of my great love for you, dear. Harshly kind, perhaps, in my anxiety for your happiness. A girl, young, handsome, and an heiress, cannot be too careful in her choice of friends."

"But you know—I love him."

She said the words wistfully, deprecatingly, lifting her lovely, troubled eyes to her aunt's face.

"I know you do not, Ianthe. A girl less than a year out of school—why, you do not know your own mind! Besides, my darling, let me tell you a truth, however terrible it may sound to you—he does not love you! I must speak plainly. He is only a contemptible fortune-hunter, who wants your money."

"Aunt Helen!"

She had sprung to her feet like a young tigress, a red glow leaping boldly to the pale olive of her cheeks, her eyes aflame.

"My dear, it is true. If the man has it in his nature to care for any one but himself, he loves Elsie Gaudet—Sutherland's niece. Wait till I have finished," as Ianthe lifted her head haughtily to speak. "He met her, two years ago, in Paris. She is a compatriot of his. Think a moment, Ianthe! You must have seen how it was. She introduced him to her relatives as an old Parisian friend—he made the most of his opportunity. He has good looks and a plausible manner, through which, aided by the Sutherland's introduction, he secured an entree to our best houses. He is giving her lessons as well as you. He loves her; but you are an heiress, and his avarice predominates. If he cannot win you, he may succeed with her. Oh, my dear one, try and understand."

For Ianthe Howard stood quite still and motionless, looking before her with blind, unseeing eyes. She lifted one hand confusedly to her head; all the hot flame faded from her cheek.

"I don't believe it," she said, slowly, as if too stunned for anger—"I don't believe it."

"My dearest, I have been sudden. Forgive me," her aunt cried, reproachfully, alarmed at sight of that white, wild face.

"No," she said, calmly, though her lips were pallid and trembling. "If you can prove to me that one iota of this miserable story is true, I will thank you for my salvation. But"—in the same strained voice, as though she were repeating a lesson—"I don't believe it."

"I shall give you one proof—the other you shall see for yourself. Yesterday I went to visit at Sutherlands'. They were not at home; but the servant said Miss Gaudet was practicing in the music-room. I went toward it, of course unannounced, expecting to find her alone. The door was ajar, and as I reached it I heard Jean D'Esterre's voice, intense, pleading, 'Tell me how I shall know you?' Then I heard Elsie Gaudet's light laugh. 'If you should meet Parthenia, with a white rose in her hand, how can I tell who it might be?' I knocked, and Elsie sprang to answer, but not before I heard him whisper, 'Love needs not symbols. Ingomar will know.' My dear one, it lies with you to do the rest?"

"How?" drearily.

"Well, of course you know they alluded to Mrs. Kent's bal masque on the eighth. Go as Parthenia yourself."

"I?"

"Yes. Will you let me arrange with the costumer? I shall have that dress sent to you—another to her."

The girl started as if she had been shot.

"No," she cried, passionately—"no! Listen to confidences not intended for my ear! It would be mean, dishonorable, underhand. No."

"Ianthe, you have a mistaken idea of honor. You may save Elsie's happiness as well as your own. Do not misjudge her. She is a good little thing, and thinks he loves her only. Did she know of the double game he is playing, I am sure she would scorn him, as she should. This man asked you to be his wife. Let him prove himself worthy to be your husband. You should stop at no silly society scruples to tear the mask from that which may bring you misery and dishonor. My dear, if I am mistaken. I will beg your pardon and his, and give you to him with all my heart; but I love my child too dearly to risk her young life's wreck. Will you be Parthenia?"

"Yes."

At the door, Mrs. Burnham paused and looked back, with eyes grown suspiciously moist and a great throb of compassion at her heart. For, in the centre of the room, with bowed head and nervously-clasped hands, Ianthe Howard stood, a pitifully childlike figure, despite her heavy ruby-velvet draperies—a girl standing alone under the shivering, tottering ruins of her first love castle:

* * * * * * *

"Are the costumes ordered last week finished?"

"Yes, madam."

The proprietress hastily left less profitable customers to attend Mrs. Burnham.

"As I have the carriage and will be passing Miss Gaudet's, I shall drop hers there, if it will be a convenience to you."

Madam was too kind. They were rushed with work. They would be very grateful.

So Madam's liveried coachman lifted the two long brown paper boxes into the carriage and it rolled away. It was quite dark when it drew up at the Sutherlands' door.

"Just ring and hand this in, John. Make haste—it is late."

She pushed a box toward him. He obeyed her. Then he climbed to his seat, she gave the order "Home" and the carriage drove off.

Mrs. Burnham laughed, a little sadly, to herself, and patted the box which held the pretty Parthenia dress.

"E'sie will think it a mistake. How else could I convince her? Besides, all's fair in love and war."

* * * * * * * *

Parthenia stood alone in the recess of a window, and watched the motley crowd surging through Mrs. Kent's lofty rooms.

Hapless Marie Stuart and a "Heathen Chinee," Sir Walter Raleigh and Red Riding Hood, Richelieu and Little Nell floated serenely by.

"Ah, you have come at last!"

Parthenia started suddenly at the whispered words, and turned to confront a tall, fur-clad Ingomar.

"Have you no word for me, ma belle?"

"Yes; but not here."

She spoke very low, and in French.

She took his arm, and together they passed to a room made familiar to both in their social visits—the library.

The room was long, silent, dimly-lit. As yet, it was too early for the dancers to wander off in search of cooler air, so they were undisturbed.

Once there, he turned and faced her in that mellow half-light which left the corners mystically dim.

He took off his mask, and showed a decidedly handsome, decidedly evil face.

"My Parthenia! how beautiful you look."

The expression was involuntary. Beautiful indeed was the statesque young figure, in that simple, severe, exquisite dress which challenges the many, adorns the few—the Greek costume.

The soft white robe fell in graceful, classic folds to her feet—the heavy staff she takes when she gives her lover the flowers held carelessly in one hand—the helmet, the shield, all glittering in the dim light.

"Why do you not speak to me, Elsie—my love?"

"Keep such a title for Ianthe Howard."

She spoke rapidly, and still in his own tongue, the better to disguise her voice.

"Ianthe Howard," he repeated. "What is she to me? I told you I loved you two years ago. I love you still. Elsie, darling, be sure of that, and do not think too hard of me when you know what an avaricious wretch I am. If only you had her fortune. Take off that jealous mask. You start! Ah, my love, do not blame me too much. Remember, you only hold my heart, if need obliges me to take advantage of Miss Howard's foolish infatuation for me, and marry her—bank account."

"Pray, do not so far inconvenience yourself, Mr. D'Esterre. That foolish fancy is dead forever."

And Ianthe Howard calmly laid down her mask on the ebony centre-table.

"Great heaven—Ianthe!"

"Yes! Permit me to return the pledge of a false vow."

And, in her proud, silent way, she drew off a sparkling solitaire and laid it quietly down.

"And permit me to say you have made more than one mistake to-night, Jean D'Esterre."

And from out of a shadowy corner came the bright figure of a vivandiere.

Then one man felt the full misery his disloyalty and deceit had brought him, as Ianthe Howard and Elsie Gaudet passed together from the room, united in their triumph over treachery—the woman he had loved for her money and the woman he had loved for herself.

And to-day, Ianthe knows that her life and love lie sacredly in the hands of an honest gentleman, and thanks God, from the depths of her true woman's heart, for the happiness that bloomed and blossomed out of her girlhood's sorrow.

So grasping is dishonesty that it is no respecter of persons, it will cheat friends as well as foes; and, were it possible, even God himself.

The men who take the prize are the men who advertise.

MANHOOD
HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

DIRECTIONS
For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c., insert with little finger a particle of the balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane.
For Deafness.
Apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
Having gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone, recognized as a wonderful remedy. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head and snuffles it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.
ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.
For sale by the Peabody Druggists and by Wholesale Druggists generally.

PLEASING AN AMATEUR MUSICIAN.

"I think," said a well-known orchestral leader, "the best joke ever played in this town was on an ambitious amateur pianist when Gottschalk was here. The amateur's father was the owner of a large hall, and he offered the use of it to Gottschalk for his benefit. There was to be a piece for eight pianos, and the amateur was to play one of the instruments. I was the leader. I thought Gottschalk would have a fit when I told him that the amateur couldn't play three straight notes.

"He is sure to throw us all out," said I, "and ruin the performance."

"Gottschalk swore like a Major, but 'twas no good. The bills were out, and he couldn't go back of his programme, even if the gift of the hall for the night was no consideration to him. At last I hit on an idea that fixed the whole business. The amateur came down to rehearsal, and we praised him up until he thought he was to be the star of the night. As soon as he left we took the hammers out of his piano and made it as dumb as an oyster. I guessed he would never know the difference, with seven pianos going at once."

The tuneful convention laughed.

"And just as I thought," said the leader, hammering on the table with his glass, "that amateur or his friends never discovered the trick."

"No?"

"No, sir; he just sailed in and pounded on that piano as if it was the worst enemy he ever had. He was bound to show off among so many good pianists, and hammered on his keyboard until the perspiration nearly blinded him. Now and then I looked at him approvingly to give him fresh courage, and nearly every time that I did he gave the piano a lick that nearly made matchwood of it. His friends all around threw bouquets at him till he looked like a wedding arch, and when it was all over his fond parent fell on his neck in the green room and slipped a check for two hundred and fifty dollars into his hand. The old man didn't know whether he was standing on his head of his heels, he was so tickled, and the way he set up the wine for the crowd was a caution."

"'Didn't he do fine,' said he, to me, 'among so many first-class professionals, too?'

"'I never heard an amateur do so well in public,' said I, and what's more I meant it, eh? Don't you think I was right?"—San Francisco Chronicle.

MATILDY'S VOICE.

There was an exciting scene this morning in the Recorder's Court. The neighbors of Gabe Snodgress, living on Galveston avenue, were compelled to have him arrested. He had whipped his wife, and her screams were so terrific that a crowd at a saloon ten blocks distant put their untouched glasses back on the bar and went to the door to see what was the matter. Both Gabe and his wife Matildy were in court.

"What do you mean, sir," said his Honor, sternly, "by such cruel treatment of her whom you vowed at the altar to love and cherish."

Gabe assumed a persuasive attitude and emphasized every word he said by the most extravagant gestures. He was laboring under intense mental excitement.

"I'll explain it ter yer, Jedge. Foah God, I hardly teched her wid de toe of my boot. I tell yer, Jedge, dat nigger's voice am to blame. When she sings out hit sounds like a hull camp-meetin'. Am I ter blaim bekase Matildy has got a voice like a biler explodin?"

His Honor shook his head, as if to intimate that the theory was too thin.

"Yer don't believe me? Now, Jedge, jess you jedge for yourself," said Gabe, and lifting up a hoof the size of a ham, he gave Matildy a kick that would have jolted an elephant. She threw her hands up and opened a mouth as big as that of a circus hippopotamus. She gave a prolonged yell that caused two teams to run away, and caused everybody in the court room to hold their hands to their ears.

"Dar," said Gabe, triumphantly, when she subsided, "is yer gwine ter punish me bekase she has got a sopraner voice? Is I ter blame bekase she makes a Saengerfest outen herself?"

His Honor saw the justice of Gabe's defence, and told him to clear out.—Galveston News.

A HAWK'S CAPTIVE.

A rattlesnake was seen to stretch himself out near a huge rock in Arizona. A large hawk swept down, nearly catching his snakeship napping. The snake sprung his rattle and coiled ready for a strike, while the hawk hovered round, making a dash first on one side and then on the other. The snake made a spring and apparently failed to strike, and before he could recoil himself the hawk seized him with both talons close behind the head. In fact, he had him on the neck and swept into the air, while the snake struggled and twisted, away up into the blue sky in wide circling sweeps, until the reptile hung limp and lifeless, when the hawk came down to earth again, and alighting on a neighboring tree, began to dine.

Nothing so increases one's reverence for others as a great sorrow to one's self. It teaches one the depths of human nature. In happiness we are shallow and deem others so.—Charles Buxton.

"Did you divide that chocolate with your little brother, Maud?"

"Yes, ma. I took the chocolate, and gave him the label; you know how fond he is of looking at pictures."

$10,000 AWARDED.—"I was so sick and low-spirited that I thought I would give anything to get well; and if any one had ensured me the good health produced by using Simmons' Liver Regulator, and charged me a thousand dollars, I would willingly have paid it if I had had it; in fact, ten thousand dollars would be worth less to me than what it has done for me.

Young man, in a walking match you "go as you please," but in a courting match you please as you go.

ASHBURNHAM, Mass., Jan. 14, '80.
I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I never should die in peace until I tried Hop Bitters. I have taken two bottles. They have helped me very much indeed. I am now well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made.

Mrs. Julia G. Cushing.

"That's what I call a finished sermon," said a lady to her husband, as they wended their way from a chapel on a recent Sunday. "Yes," was the reply, "but, do you know, I thought it never would be."

Nearly all the ills that afflict us can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv. nov2—1m

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retiring from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for general Debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. The recipe will be sent free of charge, to all who desire it, with full directions for preparing and successfully using. Every patient is also entitled to a copy free of "The Complete Physician," a work of nearly 900 pages, containing over 1000 formulas. The latest and best family Medical work out. SAVED BY OIL.—Mrs. Susanna Asmus, No. 11 Bartlett street, Baltimore, Md., had for twenty-two years been a sufferer from sores and pains in her limbs. She tried many remedies without any favorable results. Happening to hear of St. Jacobs Oil, she concluded at last to try it. The result was wonderful. The sore healed, the pains vanished, and she is now well again.—Washington Critic.

AN INTERESTING ACCOUNT!

STONE IN THE BLADDER EXPELLED BY USING DR. KENNEDY'S "FAVORITE REMEDY."

Mr. S. W. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y., the son of Mr. E. S. Hicks, whose name may have appeared in this journal in connection with an article similar to this, was, like his father, afflicted with Stone in the Bladder, only that his case was more serious than his father's. On the appearance of the disease the father advised the son to write to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who, he said, would tell him what to do. Dr. Kennedy replied, suggesting the use of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which had worked so successfully in his father's case. Mr. Hicks, who had been assured by the local physicians that they could do nothing more for him tried "Favorite Remedy" at a venture. After two weeks' use of it he passed a stone 3-4 of an inch long and of the thickness of a pipe-stem. Since then he has had no symptoms of the return of the trouble. Here is a sick man healed. What better results could have been expected? What greater benefit could medical science confer? The end was gained; that is surely enough. Dr. Kennedy assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the Blood, cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder complaints, as well as all those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY—16 PAGES.

Suited to Boys and Girls of from Six to Sixteen Years.

Vol. III. commences Nov. 1, 1881.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE.

The YOUNG PEOPLE has been from the first successful beyond anticipation.—N. Y. Evening Post.

It has a distinct purpose to which it steadily adheres—that, namely, of supplanting the vicious papers for the young with a paper more attractive, as well as more wholesome.—Boston Journal.

For neatness, elegance of engraving, and contents generally, it is unsurpassed by any publication of the kind yet brought to our notice.—Pittsburg Gazette.

Its weekly visits are eagerly looked for, not only by the children, but also by parents who are anxious to provide pure literature for their girls and boys.—Christian Advocate, Buffalo, N. Y.

A weekly paper for children which parents need not fear to let their children read at the family fireside.—Hartford Daily Times.

Just the paper to take the eye and secure the attention of the boys and girls.—Springfield Union.

TERMS.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE, Per Year, Post Prepaid, $1.50

However watched by loving care,
Home has distempers lurking there,
And human power cannot defend
From ills that constantly impend;
But Sanford's Ginger bids pain cease,
And home restores to health and peace.
nov.2—1m.

A landlady was complaining that she couldn't make both end meet. "Well" said a boarder, "why not make one end vegetables?"

Long indulgence in over eating or drinking produces a disorganized Liver, and all the evils attendant upon such derangements; depression of spirits, habitual costiveness, nervous exhaustion, indigestion; pain in the head, with nausea; fullness of stomach after meals, chillness, general debility and languor. Seek relief from Simmons' Liver Regulator.

There was a musician Wilhelmj
Who tried an old fiddle to sellmj;
When I asked him the way
To make the thing play,
The fellow would really not tellmj.

"It is a very valuable remedy for dyspepsia, sick headache, torpid liver and such like diseases.
"W. S. Holt, Pres. of S.W.R.R. Co. of Ga." oct12 1m

Ex-President Hayes had the largest cabinet ever controlled by a chief magistrate of the United States. How many? Why, fifteen.—Pshaw! Not at all, positive fact! Wasn't there eight with Schurz and seven without Schurz?

EASILY PROVEN.—It is easily proven that malarial fevers, constipation, torpidity of the liver and kidneys, general debility, nervousness and neuralgic ailments yield readily to this great disease conqueror, Hop Bitters. It repairs the ravages of disease by converting the food into rich blood, and it gives new life to the aged and infirm always.

"Why is a young man like a kernel of corn?" asks a young lady. "Because he turns white when he pops."

The action of Carter's Little Liver Pills is pleasant, mild and natural. They gently stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels, but do not purge. They are sure to please. nov2—2w

Noah Webster is set down as a pioneer æsthete, because in his dictionary he defines the verb "speak" as "to utter."

Try Carter's Little Nerve Pills for any case of nervousness, sleeplessness, weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia, &c., relief is sure. The only nerve medicine for the price in market. In vials at 25 cents. nov2—2w

"Where is My Daughter To-night," is the title of a new song. We don't know about that particular daughter, but we saw a daughter going down street, the other night, hanging on the arm of a young man who eats cloves.

The Boston Times tells of a man who forgot he was going to be married. We have known of several fellows forgetting they were married.

A Methodist minister being recently asked if he had moved to his new appointment, said, "Yes, but it is a disappointment."

Who says it is unhealthy to sleep in feathers? Look at the spring chicken and see how tough he is.

It is a foolish mistake to confound a remedy of merit with quack medicines. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Dyspepsia Debility, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times. nov2—1m

DID NOT LIKE IT.—The Philadelphia authorities are experimenting with negro policemen. The first arrest made by one of them was that of an Irishman who was laboring under stress of whiskey. On the following morning, when his policeman appeared in court against the prisoner, the Irishman rubbed his eyes as though to clear his vision, and asked, in a tone indicating astonishment,

"Did yez arrist me?"

"Certainly I did," the policeman replied.

"Great hivins!" exclaimed the prisoner, turning to the magistrate. "Here Shquire, take out your foine. To think that one of the Browns should iver come to this, to be arristed by a naygur!"

ITCHING PILES—SYMPTOMS AND CURE.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes for $1.25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price in currency, or three cent postage stamps. Prepared only by Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, Pa., to whom letters should be addressed. Sold by all prominent druggists.

Wm. T. Lee, Agent, Peabody.

During the past five years I have suffered from Catarrh and have used without relief remedies prescribed by various physicians. I was advised to try Ely's Cream Balm; am using it with beneficial results, and feel confident I shall be completely cured of a disease that has seriously affected not only my nostrils but also my eyes and hearing. W. A. Brintzinghoffer, Jr., Wholesale Tobacconist, Newark, N. J. May 29, 1879.

A girl, while at a London ball, strayed from the ball-room. Her mother subsequently discovered her in a remote nook with a gentleman, who had his arm aronnd her waist, while she rested the tips of her pretty little fingers on his manly shoulder. "My dear, what's all this?" exclaimed the irate mamma. "Mamma, allow me to introduce Capt. X. to you. I had promised him a dance but I was so tired I couldn't keep my word, and I'm just giving him a sitting still waltz instead."—Woman's Journal.

The innocent little darling! What could her mother say to this touching explanation?

Ely's Cream Balm for the cure of Catarrh is having large sales with me. I think it the best article I have sold for the treatment of these diseases, and take great pleasure in recommending it to my patrons, as I am hearing the most favorable reports of its benficial effects. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.
For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.
I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms
My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.
The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.
I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.
I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston
Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.
Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.
Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
Certainly Cures Consumption!
FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
ALWAYS CURES NIGHT SWEATS
FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
CURES DYSPEPSIA.
READ THE PROOF:
Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.
The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.
The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.
This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.
TESTIMONIALS from well known people near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible destroyer, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.
We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.
J. W. Manning the Veteran Nurseryman, says: Having over-exerted myself in my nursery giving me a weakness of the Stomach and Kidneys, I used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam—which has given me an appetite and proves better than any bitters, and is the most pleasant preparation to the taste that I have ever used.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I fe l like a new person I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.
"Almost at Death's Door."

I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam is strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.
Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs. N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician, who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.

THE STATE ELECTION.

GOV. LONG, RE-CHOSEN.

A LIGHT VOTE CAST.

Republican Representative from Peabody.

Senator Horton Re-Elected.

As was anticipated, the rainy weather of Tuesday brought out a very light vote in the State. The Republicans have elected their governor, have carried the State by a large plurality, have gained two representatives in the Suffolk district, and have carried the city of Boston by about 2000 plurality. The amendment to the State Constitution is probably adopted, the western portion of the State voting particularly strong in favor of it. The total gubernatorial vote in the State, with one town to hear from, is as follows:

John D. Long, Rep.,	96,302
Chas. P. Thompson, Dem.,	53,506
I. W. Andrews, Greenback,	4,819
Charles Almy, Pro.,	1,741
	156,368

The following is the vote of Peabody:

FOR SENATOR, SECOND ESSEX DIST.

Nathaniel A. Horton,	407
Joseph Gregory,	277
Charles H. Litchman,	163

FOR REPRESENTATIVE TO GEN. COURT ESSEX DISTRICT NO. 12.

John Pinder,	353
Thomas Carroll,	324
W. F. Sumner,	111
Daniel Buxton, 2d,	42

The vote on the Constitutional Amendment was as follows:

Yes,	165
No,	124

The democratic caucus was attended by about 60 voters last Friday evening meeting being called to order by Mr. Nathan Bushby. Mr. Thomas Carroll was elected chairman, and Mr. Wm. F. Daniels, secretary. It was then voted to take a ballot for a candidate for Representative, and ten minutes were allowed for voting. At the expiration of that time the vote was read by the chairman and was as follows;

Thos. Carroll,	26.
S. A. Southwick,	22.
Scattering,	10.

Mr. Carroll said he was wholly unprepared for any such result. He did not think he was the representative man of the party and must decline the nomination. It was immediately voted to make the result unanimous, there being no dissenting votes. Mr. Carroll then accepted the nomination in a short speech, and then said that as the democrats met so seldom it would be well to have a few remarks from some of the grand old democratic orators who were present. Mr. T. H. McGrath was the first speaker. He said it was something new for him to speak at a political meeting, but he had always favored democracy and voted the straight ticket every time, with only one exception, since he became a voter, because he believed democracy was good. The exception was Chas. Francis Adams, and he said he should always go outside the party when it nominated such men as him. Mr. D. P. Grosvenor Jr. was next called upon and referred to the large amount of money which Postmaster-General James had saved for the Government since last March, and all this extravagance and stealing occurred during Hayes' administration, to which republicans point with pride as a "clean" administration. "If this is a thing to be proud of," said the speaker, "God help the pride." He denounced the educational proviso in our state laws, which disfranchised twenty per cent. of our population who were vastly superior in intelligence to the four millions of blacks at the South who are allowed to vote without any restrictions. He concluded by giving the candidate his unqualified endorsement, and urged his hearers to stick to him and see that he was elected. Mr. Martin Brophy rose to say a good word for the candidate and was well received, after which the chairman appointed a rallying committee of ten persons, and the caucus adjourned.

A Greenback Caucus was held at Town Hall last Wednesday evening, Richard Kimball presided and Jas. F. Sullivan was Secretary. An informal ballot was taken and W. F. Sumner received 23 votes, Edward Trask 11 and Otis Brown 10. On the fornal ballot W. F. Sumner received 25, Edward Trask 15 and Otis Brown 11; Mr. Sumner was declared the nominee. A rallying committee was then chosen, and the following town committee elected for the ensuing year: W. F. Sumner, Edward Trask, Richard Kimball, Geo. F. Barnes, L. E. Peabody, Isaac Munroe, Martin Quinlan, J. H. Thomas, Jas. F. Sullivan, Edward Boxwell.

Mrs. N. J. Willis will again occupy the platform at Ashland Hall, on Sunday, Nov. 13th, afternoon and evening, at 2.30 and 7.30. Her lectures are both able and interesting. All are invited.

Improvements are being made at the home of Mr. Sylvanus Newhall on Lynnfield street: large light windows have been put in and a covering built over the front steps. The house is also being painted.

Now is the time to adopt some means for preventing the ravages of the cankerworm next year. We commend to our readers Morrill's Grub Ink, sold only at this office. Common printers' ink is not suitable for the purpose.

A pound party met at the house of Mr. Augustus French last Thursday evening, and about fifty persons, bringing with them nearly as many different articles, were present. The evening passed pleasantly with music, singing, etc.

Mr. B. F. Stevens is sole agent for Peabody of some fine stereoscopic views of the Soldiers' Monument, executed by J. S. Lefavour, of Salem. He sells them for 15 cents each, 2 for 25 cents, and as there are two different views our readers will want both of them.

A man named Regan employed at S. A. Southwick's currying shop, came very near being seriously injured, one day last week, by falling through a trap door, a distance of some eight feet. He was picked up insensible and afterwards assisted home. Dr. Frost attended him.

Last Thursday evening, Mr. John S. Toby and wife entertained their boarders with an oyster supper. The inmates of the house, not to be out-done by this generosity, presented Mr. T, with a silver ice pitcher. The good feelings were mutual and the present will be a pleasant reminder to Mr. T., as he retires to less active duties, of the esteem in which he was held by his boarders.

The explosion, which was distinctly heard in almost all parts of the town last Sunday afternoon, was caused by a party of young scamps who broke into the tool house at Putnam's ledge and stole a keg of powder and making a fuze of hemp rope set fire to it and then retreated to a safe distance and witnessed the explosion. What's to be done with such fellows? "The woods are full of 'em" every Sunday.

MR. JOHN P. PEABODY, of Salem, has just made a large purchase of misses' and children's trimmed felt hats, in all the leading styles, at a great sacrifice. They cost the manufacturer over a dollar each, but Mr. Peabody is enabled to sell them for 50 cents each. He has filled his window with them, and as we looked in it was nearly impossible to get near his millinery counter. He is also selling feathers for twenty-five cents each that are worth at least one dollar. These are two bargains that seldom occur but once in a season, and we advise our readers to take advantage of them at once. The entire millinery department at Mr. Peabody's is very attractive, and he was never able to show a better stock than this season. He has also now a full line of worsted goods, hosiery and underwear at the very lowest prices.—Call at his store and be convinced of the truth of our statement.

FOR SALE OR TO LET.

In Medford; just the spot for any kind of manufactory, only five miles from State street; about an acre and half of land, one minute's walk from the depot in the square, fronting on High street, 136 feet, with a depth to Mystic River of 320 feet, and a river front of over 500 feet, with a rise and fall of tide 10 or 12 feet. This estate was formerly used as a tan-yard and slaughter house; the buildings used for that purpose yet remain on the premises. For the original business the easement and rights in law are quite valuable, with perfect drainage into tide-water, thus avoiding a nuisance. Will be sold at a bargain or rented for a term of years at a low figure. For particulars call at the office of

THE STATE ELECTION.

GOV. LONG, RE-CHOSEN.

A LIGHT VOTE CAST.

Republican Representative from Peabody.

Senator Horton Re-Elected.

As was anticipated, the rainy weather of Tuesday brought out a very light vote in the State. The Republicans have elected their governor, have carried the State by a large plurality, have gained two representatives in the Suffolk district, and have carried the city of Boston by about 2000 plurality. The amendment to the State Constitution is probably adopted, the western portion of the State voting particularly strong in favor of it. The total gubernatorial vote in the State, with one town to hear from, is as follows:

John D. Long, Rep.,	96,302
Chas. P. Thompson, Dem.,	53,506
I. W. Andrews, Greenback,	4,819
Charles Almy, Pro.,	1,741
	156,368

The following is the vote of Peabody:

FOR GOVERNOR.

John D. Long, of Hingham,	426
Chas. P. Thompson, of Gloucester,	289
Israel W. Andrews, of Danvers,	122
Chas. Almy, of New Bedford,	17

FOR LIEUT.-GOVERNOR.

Byron Weston,	422
James H. Carleton,	291
George Dutton,	122
John Blackmer,	18

FOR SECRETARY OF STATE.

Henry B. Peirce,	422
Michael T. Donahue,	290
Aaron B. Brown,	122
Solomon F. Root,	18

FOR TREAS. AND RECEIVER-GEN.

Daniel A. Gleason,	423
William A. Hodges,	291
George Foster,	123
Thomas J. Lothrop,	18

FOR AUDITOR.

Charles R. Ladd,	423
Charles R. Field,	291
Wilbur F. Whitney,	122
Jonathan Buck,	18

FOR ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

George Marston,	423
P. A. Collins,	292
David O. Allen,	120
Samuel M. Fairfield,	18

FOR COUNCILLOR.

Joseph Davis,	423
Forrest L. Evans,	290
Samuel B. Gregory,	122

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

John W. Raymond,	424
George W. Brown,	29.
Andrew H. Paton,	122

FOR CLERK OF COURTS.

Alfred A. Abbott,	682
Scattering,	5

FOR SENATOR, SECOND ESSEX DIST.

Nathaniel A. Horton,	407
Joseph Gregory,	277
Charles H. Litchman,	163

FOR REPRESENTATIVE TO GEN. COURT ESSEX DISTRICT NO. 12.

John Pinder,	353
Thomas Carroll,	324
W. F. Sumner,	111
Daniel Buxton, 2d,	42

The vote on the Constitutional Amendment was as follows:

Yes,	165
No,	124

The democratic caucus was attended by about 60 voters last Friday evening meeting being called to order by Mr. Nathan Bushby. Mr. Thomas Carroll was elected chairman, and Mr. Wm. F. Daniels, secretary. It was then voted to take a ballot for a candidate for Representative, and ten minutes were allowed for voting. At the expiration of that time the vote was read by the chairman and was as follows;

Thos. Carroll,	26.
S. A. Southwick,	22.
Scattering,	10.

Mr. Carroll said he was wholly unprepared for any such result. He did not think he was the representative man of the party and must decline the nomination. It was immediately voted to make the result unanimous, there being no dissenting votes. Mr. Carroll then accepted the nomination in a short speech, and then said that as the democrats met so seldom it would be well to have a few remarks from some of the grand old democratic orators who were present. Mr. T. H. McGrath was the first speaker. He said it was something new for him to speak at a political meeting, but he had always favored democracy and voted the straight ticket every time, with only one exception, since he became a voter, because he believed democracy was good. The exception was Chas. Francis Adams, and he said he should always go outside the party when it nominated such men as him. Mr. D. P. Grosvenor Jr. was next called upon and referred to the large amount of money which Postmaster-General James had saved for the Government since last March, and all this extravagance and stealing occurred during Hayes' administration, to which republicans point with pride as a "clean" administration. "If this is a thing to be proud of," said the speaker, "God help the pride." He denounced the educational proviso in our state laws, which disfranchised twenty per cent. of our population who were vastly superior in intelligence to the four millions of blacks at the South who are allowed to vote without any restrictions. He concluded by giving the candidate his unqualified endorsement, and urged his hearers to stick to him and see that he was elected. Mr. Martin Brophy rose to say a good word for the candidate and was well received, after which the chairman appointed a rallying committee of ten persons, and the caucus adjourned.

A Greenback Caucus was held at Town Hall last Wednesday evening, Richard Kimball presided and Jas. F. Sullivan was Secretary. An informal ballot was taken and W. F. Sumner received 23 votes, Edward Trask 11 and Otis Brown 10. On the fornal ballot W. F. Sumner received 25, Edward Trask 15 and Otis Brown 11; Mr. Sumner was declared the nominee. A rallying committee was then chosen, and the following town committee elected for the ensuing year: W. F. Sumner, Edward Trask, Richard Kimball, Geo. F. Barnes, L. E. Peabody, Isaac Munroe, Martin Quinlan, J. H. Thomas, Jas. F. Sullivan, Edward Boxwell.

Mrs. N. J. Willis will again occupy the platform at Ashland Hall, on Sunday, Nov. 13th, afternoon and evening, at 2.30 and 7.30. Her lectures are both able and interesting. All are invited.

Improvements are being made at the home of Mr. Sylvanus Newhall on Lynnfield street: large light windows have been put in and a covering built over the front steps. The house is also being painted.

Now is the time to adopt some means for preventing the ravages of the cankerworm next year. We commend to our readers Morrill's Grub Ink, sold only at this office. Common printers' ink is not suitable for the purpose.

A pound party met at the house of Mr. Augustus French last Thursday evening, and about fifty persons, bringing with them nearly as many different articles, were present. The evening passed pleasantly with music, singing, etc.

Mr. B. F. Stevens is sole agent for Peabody of some fine stereoscopic views of the Soldiers' Monument, executed by J. S. Lefavour, of Salem. He sells them for 15 cents each, 2 for 25 cents, and as there are two different views our readers will want both of them.

A man named Regan employed at S. A. Southwick's currying shop, came very near being seriously injured, one day last week, by falling through a trap door, a distance of some eight feet. He was picked up insensible and afterwards assisted home. Dr. Frost attended him.

Last Thursday evening, Mr. John S. Toby and wife entertained their boarders with an oyster supper. The inmates of the house, not to be out-done by this generosity, presented Mr. T, with a silver ice pitcher. The good feelings were mutual and the present will be a pleasant reminder to Mr. T., as he retires to less active duties, of the esteem in which he was held by his boarders.

The explosion, which was distinctly heard in almost all parts of the town last Sunday afternoon, was caused by a party of young scamps who broke into the tool house at Putnam's ledge and stole a keg of powder and making a fuze of hemp rope set fire to it and then retreated to a safe distance and witnessed the explosion. What's to be done with such fellows? "The woods are full of 'em" every Sunday.

MR. JOHN P. PEABODY, of Salem, has just made a large purchase of misses' and children's trimmed felt hats, in all the leading styles, at a great sacrifice. They cost the manufacturer over a dollar each, but Mr. Peabody is enabled to sell them for 50 cents each. He has filled his window with them, and as we looked in it was nearly impossible to get near his millinery counter. He is also selling feathers for twenty-five cents each that are worth at least one dollar. These are two bargains that seldom occur but once in a season, and we advise our readers to take advantage of them at once. The entire millinery department at Mr. Peabody's is very attractive, and he was never able to show a better stock than this season. He has also now a full line of worsted goods, hosiery and underwear at the very lowest prices.—Call at his store and be convinced of the truth of our statement.

Every lady in town should look at the new invoice of Quilts at Schollar & Donnell's.—Price, $1.00 to $1.87.—Adv.

Jay Watson and his celebrated company in a unique entertainment. In addition to the violin solos of Prof. Watson, he will be assisted by several prominent vocalists, and Mr. C. H. Webber, elocutionist. Tickets are already for sale at Stevens' book-store and by the members of the Post. Buy them early, and secure the best seats.

The attention of our readers is directed to the card of Dr. G. W. Rhodes, at No. 16 Temple place, Boston. His treatment is electro-magnetic and he makes a specialty of chronic and blood diseases. Read his advertisement.

Letter from Rev. L. L. Wood.

EDITOR OF THE PEABODY PRESS,

Dear Sir,—Your editorial comments on the sermon in your issue of Nov. 2, preached on the Sabbath following the death of President Garfield, were such that the undersigned believes that, in the spirit of fairness which you claim for and which he accords your paper, you will allow him a few words in reply.

Had you said that you did not believe a word the sermon contained, this reply would not have been written. Or, had you said the truth was too vigorously spoken, the writer of this would have accepted your criticism as a high compliment, remembering that truth is not always pleasant to those who hear it nor to those who proclaim it, and that no less a preacher than Paul, the Apostle, said to his brethren, many centuries ago, "Am I, therefore, become your enemy because I tell you the truth?" But when you class the writer among those who "attempt to vilify and destroy," he most courteously and promptly take exceptions to that imputation. Whenever any public utterance of the writer can be shown to be untrue in fact or unkind and discourteous in spirit he stands ready to retract it no less publicly than he proclaimed it. That you think the preacher "makes too strong a point on the assumption that the death of President Garfield was due to 'the wrangling after the spoils of office in the Republican party'" is not strange. In regard to "dragging" the question of intemperance and the derelictions of the Republican party into the subject, you might have seen that this was the sole purpose of the sermon and the preacher would have felt himself guilty of recreancy to his solemn duty if he had not thus improved the text and the occasion. As to the folly of making Prohibition "a national issue," allow me to say that if Prohibition is right for the state it must be for the nation, and cannot consistently be urged in the one case without the other. Based upon the revenue returns, the intoxicants drank in the United States, last year, cost the consumers $750,000,000, and the cost of crime and criminals, in consequence of this consumption of intoxicants, was more than twice the amount of the national debt, last year. Surely, if this question is not "a national issue" it ought to be and would have been long ago, if the Republicans were not afraid of driving away its whiskey and beer-drinking voters by making it such. As to the state issue: every intelligent citizen must know that the pivotal point of the Republican party of Massachusetts, for the last six years, has been the liquor license law and yet this party has never allowed a single resolution on this point, to be introduced into its platform of principles, in all these years, until the present autumn. The last Republican State Convention did introduce three lines into their party platform on the subjeet of intemperance, for the purpose of keeping the restive temperance voters within the party lines a little longer. And in those three lines they affirm that "the laws for preventing the evils of intemperance have been made more stringent." Yet none know better than the framers of that declaration that the liquor laws of Massachusetts, for the last five or six years, have been a complete farce.

The last annual report of the Massachusetts Bureau of Labor shows that intemperance was connected with over 84 per cent. of all the crime in this State, during the preceding twelve months. To this evil, which produced over 84 per cent. of the crime of Massachusetts last year, the Republican convention devoted three lines that were little less than falsehood and that were designed to be misleading, while it devoted a whole paragraph to the evil of Mormonism, which numbers 200,000 adherents, all told, and which is confined to a single Territory more than 2000 miles away. Surely the Republican party cannot be accused of "dragging" the subject of intemperance into its discussions. On the contrary, it may be charged with having studiously dodged the greatest of all issues and most appalling of all evils. But it will not be so always. It is apparent to careful observers that a break must soon occur somewhere. There is no valid reason why the temperance voters might not rule the Republican party as easily and as well as the rum voters if they would be willing to sacrifice their party to their principles for one or two years, and in so doing they would draw to their support the good and the true men who are still found in all the other parties.

One word concerning your allusion to William Lloyd Garrison an men of that ilk. It would have been more suited to the days of the Fugitive Slave Law, in 1850, when escaping slaves were remanded to bondage in the streets of liberty-loving Boston. We have advanced thirty years since then. Garrison and the men of his time are in the majority now and so it will be with those who, to-day, dare combat that political evil more dreadful and wide spread than slavery ever was. Finally, you attribute Garrison's honor and work to the Republican party, asserting that "the steps which were taken resulting in the actual emancipation of the slaves were by a Republican President, and a Republican Congress and party;" from which you reason that Prohibitionists "have nothing to hope for from any other party than the Republicans." That the Republican party was in power when American slavery was abolished and that it was compelled, by the providence of God, to do this great and grand work, no honest man can deny or would wish to deny. But when you affirm that "the steps taken" which resulted in this great work of the 19th century "were by a Republican President, and a Republican Congress and party"—i. e., that this work was the purpose of the Republican party, you are slightly at fault with History. A reference to the history of those "steps taken" will show you that Garrison and his co-abolitionists found their bitterest opponents and rankest enemies in "The Colonization Society," who advocated a gradual abolition of slavery, just as the Prohibitionists of to-day find their most damaging opposition in the members of the Republican party, who profess to desire Prohibition but who do not hold the extreme views on this question." These Colonizationists afterwards helped form the Republican party. You will also find that the avowed purpose of the Republican party at the first election of Abraham Lincoln was not to interfere with the institution of slavery as then existing, but simply to prevent its extension into the territories. This purpose was distinctly reiterated by Mr. Lincoln in his inagural and early addresses. It should be remembered, also, that, in the early part of the Civil War, the proclamation of Gen. Fremont, in the Department of Missouri, freeing the slaves of armed rebels war revoked by the government at Washington, because the war against secession was not a war against slavery, and the purpose of the National Government was not to interfere with slavery as an institution. The same was subsequently true of the proclamation of Gen. David Hunter, commanding the Department of the South, which President Lincoln also revoked for the same reasons. And when President Lincoln could no longer disregard the pointings of Divine providence and was compelled, by the logic of events, to prepare his own great Proclamation of Emancipation to all the slaves of the armed rebels of the South, his Cabinet and party leaders were adverse to its publication until it was impossible to withhold it longer.

It should be borne in mind, also, that Gen. Butler, the man who first solved the vexed question of the slave's status by declaring him a "contraband of war," was a Democrat, and that many of the ablest Generals in the Union army were Democrats. Let us keep to facts, irrespective of party lines, and these are all facts of history which are often conveniently forgotten. You will also find history affording you no instance of a political party that ever advanced beyond the specific purpose for which it was organized or that ever reformed itself. In evidence of this fact, we see the once great Republican party refusing to grapple with the greatest issue now before the American people and, what is even a more melancholy spectacle, we see it legalizing and protecting, by its statutory enactments, the liquor traffic of this Commonwealth with the sum of its constantly increasing evils.

Very respectfully yours,
L. L. WOOD.

More School Criticism.

MR. EDITOR,—Public schools are established to do away with ignorance and its attendant vices. The State aims at creating for herself, through them, citizens whose loyalty shall be sword and shield, their judgment defence, their wisdom a crown of glory to her. She can give no specific rules against unforseen emergencies; she desires a self-reliant manhood and womanhood whose strength of head and heart shall make her proud through all suffering. It is a fact well sustained by the records of many eminent medical writers that the modern graded or prize system, which for the last thirty years has controlled the schools of New England, has exercised a full share or tendency toward the deterioration of the human race. By this system the mental capacity of the scholar is often exerted to a strain beyond all physical endurance. Thus to-day the whole world is pregnant with a grand army of physical wrecks, who have become bankrupt in their vain efforts to acquire knowledge too fast, like the ambitious business man who fails through his over-exertions to get rich. Curiosity lives in every human brain not idiotic.—Free, it cannot be driven; it must be led to worthy objects, and these at once gratified and strengthened. This leading curiosity to worthy objects, this gratifying and strengthening it, until, raised to a high level, it becomes an intelligence that takes hold of the problems of honest living and thinking, and brings the other trained faculties to bear upon them—this is the work of the schools. In whatever ways they may be successful, if they fail in this tendency they are truly failures as the upholders of republican liberty.

But what is to become of the demand for "accurate scholarship?" In the sense that phrase is used by a certain class of experts in their dealings with common schools, it is simply to be kicked down stairs. The great mass of mankind are simply incapable of "accurate scholarship" in this high, scientific sense. It is only the prerogative of minds of exceptional grasp and retentiveness, and even in such is often attained at the expense of the higher qualities of intellect and manhood. All that any system of elementary education can achieve is, first, to wake up the greatest possible number of children to the love for knowledge and reverence for truth. Second, to train the mind into healthy and natural habits of investigation and acquirement. Third, to impart as much truth in all studies as can be digested and wrought into mental bone and sinew and feeling; and beyond all, to train the American child into that manhood and womanhood without which both science and republican government will turn out a high-sounding sham. The great danger of our advanced system of school-teaching is from the extravagant, high-strung, and over-strained notion of pedants and idealists who insist on domesticating methods of study only possible to a genius in a district school, and running all children through the mill of the last theory of culture. There is a tyranny of the school-house and school-committee every way as hateful as the despotism of Turkey and China, and as barren of good results.

PREFIX.

The Clothing establishment of G. W. CURRIER & Co., in the New Marlboro building, Washington street, Boston, is the most extensive ready made Clothing house in the city. The building has been recently erected and finished in the most expensive manner, with marble stairways and elevators, and handsomely fitted up by Messrs. Currier & Co. for their extensive business. One is at once reminded, on his entrance, of the immensity of the store and the stock of goods displayed there. The light is almost perfect, even on the darkest day. And this is not all; for, in the rear, so far distant that it is not readily perceived on entering the building, is the department for Children's suits, a store by itself, richly carpeted, and fitted with every convenience and comfort for ladies who desire to select for their children one of the suits there displayed. The front portion of the store is devoted to men's suits and overcoats, and we have no hesitation in pronouncing their assortment to be the largest and best in the city. Ascending the stairs by the hydraulic elevator, we reach the upper story, which is devoted to the cutting of the garments, all of which are manufactured by this firm. Here we saw cases of flannels for cheviot suits, heaps of woolen goods of every description, and the numerous cutters busily at work. Here, also, every yard of cloth is measured by a simple machine which registers the number of yards and at the same time allows the measurers to detect any imperfection in the goods. A record is kept by the Superintendent, who knows the average of each cutter, and just how many garments he should cut from a piece of cloth. They employ none but first-class workmen, and pay the highest wages, all the cutting being piece work. They have men in their employ in this department who have been with them since they commenced business, which speaks volumes for their integrity as a business firm. The goods, after being cut, are put up and sent out to be made, some of it being done in the city of Boston, and some of it as far away as Maine. But it is all done under the supervision of trusted employees of the firm, and the work subjected to their inspection. The third and fourth stories of the building are devoted to wholesale business, the finer grades being kept on one floor and the cheaper on the other. The building on the retail floor is lighted by electricity; they having not only the Brush electric light but also a French light, the merits of which are being tested by them.

We have called attention to this large and elegant manufactory of ready made clothing for the purpose of showing that they are headquarters for such goods, and to remind our readers that a visit to Boston is not necessary to obtain any of the large and varied styles with which this emporium abounds.—The NAUMKEAG CLOTHING CO., in Salem, under the management of Mr. Z. A. Gallup, is a branch of this establishment, selling the same goods and at the same prices. We noticed particularly the quality of goods and work in the clothing at this place. The work is equal to any custom clothing. Finer and nicer work is put into ready made garments than was the case years ago; and higher priced garments made in all respects like the best custom work, find a readier sale. In the Naumkeag, a great portion in the rear is devoted to Children's Suits, and the large stock they are carrying in all their departments taxes even the large size of the store they occupy. They have overcoats from $3.00 up to $40.00—an overcoat with worsted trimmings and made in good style, for laboring men, being offered for $5.00. In the paletots, so stylish for young men's wear, they show over twenty different styles in all the fashionable colorings. We cordially advise our readers to take a look in to the Naumkeag; they will be surprised at the stock of goods, and can not fail of being pleased, if they desire anything in the line of ready made clothing.

DID THIS HAPPEN IN PEABODY.—A nervous looking man went into a store, the other day, and sat down for half an hour or so, when a clerk asked him if there was anything she could do for him. He said no; he didn't want anything. She went away, and he sat there half an hour longer when the proprietor went to him and asked if he wanted to be shown anything. "No," said the nervous man; "I just wanted to sit around. My physician has recommended perfect quiet for me, and says, above all things, I must avoid being in crowds. Noticing you did not advertise in the newspapers, I thought that this would be as quiet a place as I could find, so I just dropped in for a few hours of complete isolation." The merchant picked up a bolt of paper cambric to brain him, but the man went out. He said all he wanted was a quiet life.

Probably there is no store this side of Boston, that gives such special attention to the selection of Ladies' Winter Garments as Mr. Wm. R. Weeks, 185 and 187 Essex St., Salem. They include dolmans, walking jackets, sacques, etc. Call and see him before purchasing.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Mass. are to hold a State Fair in Horticultural Hall, Boston, to open Monday, Nov. 28th. Mrs. Mary A. Livermore is President. All communications in regard to it may be addressed to Mrs. M. G. Leavitt, Headquarters, 36 Bromfield St.

Many impartial and candid papers have stated the very obvious proposition that Guiteau should be tried, and, if found guilty, punished like any other murderer, without regard to the fact that his victim was the President of the United States. But the truth is he is handicapped by the fierce indignation and bitter prejudice of the whole world, and it is hardly possible that the court and jury, the government attorney, or even his own counsel will accord him all the consideration that they would, had he shot a negro servant at the White House. We see that eminent lawyers, like Butler and Storrs, have declined to defend him, knowing it would injure their reputation to take the case, and make them in public estimation almost accessories after the fact, if they got him acquitted. Witnesses who were to be summoned in his favor have taken pains to state, in advance, that they should only help hang him, and twelve men could hardly be found to constitute a jury who had not made up their minds as to his guilt, or who would not fear to render themselves unpopular and injure their personal interests forevermore by declaring him not guilty. Whatever the evidence might be, it is understood that the defence will be threefold—lack of jurisdiction, insanity and malpractice on the part of the surgeons. As to the first there are precedents in England and this country against indicting a person for an offence where it was commenced, if it was continued and concluded elsewhere. In regard to malpractice, if Drs. Hammond and Boynton, and all others, professional and lay, who have criticised the methods of the attending surgeons, should be summoned and repeat on the stand what they have said in private conversation, or written in the newspapers, it would at least furnish ground for argument on the part of his lawyers. Insanity, however, will probably be the main reliance of the defence, and aside from the fact that his family and friends have always considered him a little luny, the manner of the shooting, without any provocation or adequate motive, and in a public place, where he must have known there was no possibility of escape, together with his oft reiterated declaration that he was inspired by God to remove the President for the good of the country, give color enough to the theory to redeem it from absolute absurdity, as such things go. At any rate if he should be proved insane, and shut up, so that he could do no more mischief, it would be better for the reputation of our people and government, and disabuse foreigners of the idea that some of them profess to entertain, that our republic, after all, contains the elements of revolution and anarchy.

To-morrow (Thursday) evening there will be a sociable at the vestry of the Baptist Church.

The annual inspection of Union Post 50, G. A. R., will be held at Headquarters next Monday evening.

Union Post 50 G. A. R. have secured for their second entertainment for the benefit of the Soldier's Bazar, Col. Stephenson, to give his illustrated lecture entitled "The Battle of Gettysburg."

The tent used for the dinner at the dedication was 200 feet long and 51 feet wide, and looked decidedly like a circus with its flags of all nations streaming from it. It was furnished by Yale & Co., of Boston.

We are informed that the truant boys placed at the Alms House are in need of suitable clothing, and that if charitable persons, having wearing apparel that they are willing to contribute will leave it with Mr. Geo. F. Sanger, it will be thankfully received.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Timothy Sheehan, one of our largest morocco manufacturers, is intending to put on twenty-five more workmen. He will be obliged to obtain them from out of town, there being none here without employment. This is a good sign.

Bad-smelling sink spouts are prolific sources of diptheria at all seasons, and the nuisance is not abated by cold weather. One of our doctors says that the large number of cases of diphtheria in many cases can be traced to this cause.

The Messenger Bird.

BY MRS. HEMANS.

Thou art come from the spirits' land, thou bird!
Thou art come from the spirits' land:
Through the dark pine grove let thy voice be heard,
And tell of the shadowy band!

We know that the bowers are green and fair
In the light of that summer shore,
And we know that the friends we have lost are there,
They are there — and they weep no more!

And we know they have quench'd their fever's thirst
From the Fountain of youth ere now,
For there must the stream in its freshness burst,
Which none may find below!

And we know that they will not be lured to earth
From the land of deathless flowers,
By the feast, or the dance, or the song of mirth,
Though their hearts were once with ours:

Though they sat with us by the night-fire's blaze,
And bent with us the bow,
And heard the tales of our fathers' days,
Which are told to others now!

But tell us, thou bird of the solemn strain!
Can those who have loved forget?
We call—and they answer not again—
Do they love—do they love us yet?

Doth the warrior think of his brother there,
And the father of his child?
And the chief, of those that were wont to share
His wandering through the wild?

We call them far through the silent night,
And they speak not from cave or hill;
We know, thou bird! that their land is bright,
But say, do they love there still?

Soldiers' Monument.

BY A LADY OVER EIGHTY YEARS OLD.

A tribute for the worthy dead—
For Freedom's cause they fell;
Their lives were given, their blood was shed—
This monument now shall tell.

In rebel prisons some did die,
Some on the battle-field;
Thus can the freemen testify,
Whose lives they died to shield.

Some at their homes were blest,
As life thus passed away;
Flowers now where'er they rest
Are strewn Memorial Day.

Some fought on ocean's wave—
No hand could them relieve—
For these so true, so brave,
No chaplet can we weave.

Our nation mourns for one,
The chieftain of her land—
Garfield, a soldier's laurels won,
Did, as a chieftain, firmly stand.

Watch and Work.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Methinks the spirit's temper grows
Too soft in this still air,
Somewhat the restful heart foregoes
Of needed watch and prayer.

The bark by tempest vainly tossed
May founder in the calm,
And he who braves the polar frost
Faints by the isles of palm.

Better than self-indulgent years
The outflung heart of youth,
Than pleasant songs in idle ears
The tumult of the truth.

Rest for the weary hands is good,
And love for hearts that pine,
But let the manly habitude
Of upright souls be mine.

Selected Story.

AN ARTIST'S DREAM.

There was no use in denying it—no, not even to himself—Hugh Beverly was in love, and deeply in love, too. There was one sweet face which haunted him all day long; and when the day was over, and night came with its dreams, the same sweet image still lingered near him.

Hugh was an artist, and labored faithfully before the easel from morning till night. But no matter what scene he portrayed, every stroke of his pencil expressed some thought of her he loved. If he painted a landscape, the presence of the beloved one, though unseen by others, lent a glory to all the scene, in the artist's eyes. He fancied her sitting beside the brook which trickled down the hill-side or approaching, like a dream of beauty, through the far-off mists of the valley. If he painted a sunset, she was still there, in the tremulous light of the evening star, which only awaited the sun's withdrawal to reveal her beauty.

But it was well for the artist that no eye save his could discern the presence of Agnes Leigh upon the canvas; and it would have been better still if Hugh himself could have banished the face which so unceasingly haunted him, from his studio, from his dreams, from his heart! If ever sunlight photographed the likeness of a mortal, then had the radiance which gleamed from Agnes Leigh's beautiful eyes imprinted her image for ever upon that poor artist's soul.

Now the worst of all this romance was, that Hugh Beverly did not even know who his divinity was! He did not even know her name; and, more than that, he had never seen her but twice—one at the opera, where her beauty had enthralled him like a spell; and once in an art gallery, where she was so absorbed with the pictures as never to notice him, and where he, the artist, forgot the pictures, and gazed only on her. And as he gazed, the fire of a never-dying passion sprang up in his heart, which neither time, nor circumstances, nor even the hopelessness of his love, could ever efface. His love seemed, indeed, hopeless; for after those two glimpses, he saw her no more. But Hugh was a poet, as well as an artist, and his heart still remained faithful to the inspiration of his dreams.

The arch little god who delights in tormenting unhappy lovers, sometimes takes pity on them, too; and so he suddenly changed this unpromising state of affairs. One morning, when Hugh was busily at work, sketching a large picture, which was to be a "Dream of Acadia," there came a soft tap at his door. The absorbed artist carelessly answered the tap with "Come in!" The door opened, and, what a surprise for Hugh, when she entered! she, the inevitable she, who had haunted him day and night, in the spirit, for many months, and now looked in upon him a real, living presence of loveliness Hugh bowed low to the lady as she entered; but he felt the hot flush mounting to his brow, and he scarcely knew what he said, if, indeed, he said anything at all. But the lady was far more at her ease.

"Are you the artist, Mr. Hugh Beverly?" she said in the sweetest voice in the world.

Hugh could not help thinking, as he bowed assent to her inquiry, that this plain, ugly name had never sounded so well before.

"Ah, well, then, I have a little commission for you." And here she produced an ivory miniature, which she handed to the artist, saying she would like to have it copied life-size.

The miniature was an exquisite specimen of art, and revealed the likeness of a young and elegant man. A pang of jealousy shot through the artist's heart as he gazed upon those handsome features.

"May I ask whose likeness this is?" he said, trying hard, poor fellow, to appear unconcerned.

"It is that of a very dear relative of mine," replied the lady; "and I wish to have it copied with the utmost secrecy — so that Fred will know nothing about it. If you will copy it, I will leave the miniature with you, and call again in a few days."

Now, all this was very strange, thought Hugh; secrecy to be observed, and who was Fred? Of course, Hugh consented to copy the portrait on the strength of her promise to call again. He would have toiled forever at copying miniatures, if she would only have promised to look in upon him once in a while. Without saying a word as to terms, or the length of time the work would require, the lady bade him a soft "good morning," and glided away down the dusty stairs, and out into the sunlight of the street, leaving the artist alone, still holding the ivory portrait in his hand.

But he had one solace—she had promised to come again. There was no more work for him that day.—The figures upon the canvas palled upon his senses, filled as he was with the beautiful being who had come and had gone like a dream! Had it not been for the visible token which she had left in his hand, he would have thought it all a dream. He hastened to the window to catch a last glimpse of her, but he was too late. He saw only a carriage, drawn by a pair of handsome bays, which rolled hastily away, and disappeared up the street.

He took up his palette and brush, and commenced to work. But it was of no use; even Acadia had no charms for a restless love; and he threw down the brush, and turned away from the easel in disgust.

Now the real secret of Hugh's bad humor was the miniature, which he still held in his hand, for it awakened troubled thoughts in his breast. Already a serpent was gliding into his newly-found Eden. It was the serpent of jealously; not venomous as yet, but trailing itself over the flowers of love which he had cherished so long in his heart.

Whose was that face which seemed to smile half-mockingly upon him as he gazed upon it?—and who was Fred? For the lady had spoken of Fred! Could it be that Fred was a lover, or, perhaps, a husband? Was her heart already given to another, and had he only met her at last, face to face, to learn that she was forever removed from him, and to drive the arrow of disappointment deeper into his heart?

These were the torturing thoughts which arrayed themselves before his mental vision; and, as he laid the miniature aside, he resolved that he would never paint that face until he knew to whom it belonged. If it were the face of her lover, or of one, perchance, still dearer, how could he bear to gaze upon it, hour after hour, and cause the features, which were his bane, to glow with new life upon the canvas? No! rather would he blot them out from existence forever. The morrow came and went, and the next day—and the third brought the fair one again to the studio.

"Good morning, sir," she said, gaily, as she entered, her cheeks crimson with the breath of the keen morning air, and her eyes sparkling like diamonds.

"Good morning," replied the artist, bowing, and smiling at her odd salutation, and he would have added, had he dared, "Was ever Aurora so beautiful?" But, as that would not have been proper, he remained silent, awaiting her commands.

It is probable, however, that his eyes expressed very clearly what his lips dared not utter; for the flush deepened a little upon the lady's face, and she turned toward the picture which hung upon the easel.

"What a lovely scene!" she exclaimed. "What does it represent?"

"Only a glimpse of my 'Fairy-Land,'" smilingly returned Hugh.

"Then your 'Fairy-Land' must be a delightful land to wander in; I wonder that you artists ever condescend to stoop toward this mundane sphere after your airy flights to such enchanted lands."

"Nothing but stern necessity compels it, I can assure you," replied Hugh.

"I believe it," said she; "you poets and artists dwell in an atmosphere of your own, and are quite unlike other people. And I see it all now!" she added, clasping her little hands with enthusiasm—"I see it all now! This atmosphere which surrounds you, and causes you to be misunderstood by the world because it half conceals you, is the atmosphere which still clings to you when you come back from your fairy-land."

Hugh hardly knew what to answer to this sally; but, charmed at her appreciation, he pointed out the different points of beauty in his new picture, "The Dream of Acadia," while she listened and gazed with evident delight. It was quite plain to be seen that Miss Leigh was well versed in art; moreover, she had been abroad, and she spoke enthusiastically of many fine paintings which she had seen, both in Paris and in Rome.

She seemed quite surprised when she learned from the artist that he had never been in foreign lands.

"Can it be that you have never visited Rome?" she exclaimed, opening wide her sweet blue eyes. "How can any one with your love and your genius for art, remain in this prosaic land, so far away from the Eternal City?"

"Ah, madam!" replied Hugh with a sigh, "it has been the desire of my life to study the works of the grand old masters in Italy; but it is as yet a dream unrealized."

"But why do you not go?" said Agnes earnestly. "If I were an artist, I'd throw everything into a corner, seize a portmanteau and be off at once."

Hugh could not help smiling as he answered. "Nothing but necessity—in fact the want of means to travel so far with, keeps me at home."

Hugh was poor, and he was proud; but it had not occurred to him to be ashamed of his poverty.

"Necessity?—want of means? Oh I never thought of that!" said Agnes, naively. For what did she know of necessity—she, the spoiled darling of wealth?

"I must tell Fred all about it," she went on; "and he shall send you to Rome with a commission."

"Please don't say anything to Fred about it," said Hugh rather grimly.

"Not say anything to Fred about it? Of course I will! Fred is the best fellow in the world, and you would be glad to know him—I know you would!"

Hugh had his doubts about liking the unknown "Fred;" but he did not express them, and asked quietly, "Is that miniature Fred's likeness?"

His face was very calm that moment, but inwardly his heart trembled.

"Oh, dear, no! That miniature is of a cousin of mine, who is traveling in India, and I am having it copied for a birthday gift to a young lady who adores him. And that reminds me to ask, how soon can it be finished?"

The terrible secret was over, and this elegant man was only a cousin, and "adored" by some other lady. Hugh had no scruples about painting the portrait after hearing this, and promised to complete it in time for the birthday. But this question settled — who was Fred? was the next thought which recurred to his mind, to perplex him.

And, as if in answer to his thought, she said, "I shall not bring Fred to see you until the picture is finished—for you men never can keep a secret, and he would be sure to tell! After that, he shall come, and I know you will like him."

"I know I shall hate him," muttered Hugh to himself, as Miss Agnes Leigh disappeared down the staircase.

Hugh did not rush to the window this time for a parting glimpse—he stood where she had left him wrapped in a home study. He was trying to reason with himself. It was evident that this lady belonged to a sphere far removed from his own; she was the child of wealth, and he was only a poor artist!—an artist rich only in inspiration! Never had he felt his poverty so cruelly before. What had he cared for the perishable dross of the world? How could he hope to woo and win such a peerless beauty as Agnes Leigh? He, a poor artist! He felt half-inclined to follow her advice, and rush out even without his portmanteau, to the next steamer.

"But, no!" he said to himself, "I will finish the portrait as I have promised, and I will finish my 'Dream of Acadia' and it may be that this painting will realize for me my dream of sunny lands of art across the seas!"

And so Hugh set hard to work, and ere long the portrait was finished. But, one morning, before his painting was finished, Miss Agnes Leigh came again to his studio. And this time Fred came with her—and who should it be but a dear old school chum of Hugh's—whom he had not seen or heard of since they were "boys together." And better than that, Fred was the fair stranger's brother, instead of the dreaded lover, or husband.

The acquaintance thus renewed was never allowed to relax; and before many weeks Hugh received from Mr. Leigh the promised commission which would enable him to go abroad. Before attempting this, "The Dream of Acadia" was completed, and, on being placed in the Academy won high honors for the young artist.

No longer was he poor and unknown—but a bright future opened before him. And when he set out on the long-cherished visit to Rome, the beautiful Agnes went with him as his bride. And the two lovers found, beneath the skies of Italy, a home which was not a dream of, but a real, Acadia, in which they dwelt.

Miscellaneous.

Candidating at Poker Gulch.

I was in the office of a Wyoming newspaper when a brawny native from up in the mountains, took off his Mexican sombero, shot a liberal dose of tobacco-juice into the editor's waste basket, and said:

"Kin you put me onto the trail of a Gospel sharp that's out of a job? I'm down from Poker Gulch on the lookout for a Bible-thumper to touch up occasionally on the Jerusalem racket."

"Are ministers scarce up your way?" asked the editor.

"Wall, no; thar's plenty dodgin' around, but somehow we can't git a man o' the right style. Doorin' the past year I reckon we've run into two dozen that claimed to be fly, and got 'em to ladle out a sample o' their palaver, but we had to fire every one of 'em before he got ten feet away from his text."

"What appeared to be the trouble?"

"The fust man wur a white-choker from Denver. He offered to contract to steer the Gulch for a thousand a year, an' the boys thought that reasonable. We paid him a month in advance, an' the fust thing he did was to choose fur a text about a generation of vipers, and he raked us down hively. He called us onregenerate sinners, an' said every man in the camp was hangin' over the fiery gulf o' dark despair by a single thread, an' that the Lord would cut that thread some day an' let us drop if we didn't light out on the back trail. Aleck Johnson was a little off his base that day—too much fluid in—an' he got up an' remarked that he'd jist won a new pistol on a poker game an' wur anxious to try it, an' that the fust ball he turned loose would strike right in that pulpit. Mr. Preacher lit out of a back winder an' went up the Gunnison grade so lively that the folks thought a 'clone had hold of 'im."

"What did you do then?"

"Wall, we managed to drag along for a month without any religion, and then we heard of a man over in the next camp that had shot some lively music at the boys over thar. We sent a committee to see him, an' he sung out such a song that the boys fetched him right over. He opened up the follerin' Sunday with a hullaballoo about a bloke campin' fur the butt end of a week in a whale an' then gettin' fired out into a vacant lot. We told the gilly right on the spot he couldn't play no second-hand newspaper stories on that camp, an' give him the shake in a jiffy."

"Did you have any better luck with the next one?"

"That's what we didn't, pard.—The next one was a rooster out from the States. We war gettin' durned hard up fur gospel by that time, an' war willin' to take almost any kind o' jabber rather'n grope along in blindness. When he riz up in the pulpit he opened up by saying that he war a Baptist, an' that every one as desired to sit with him must be soused in water. Now, if there's anything a mountain man hates, it's water, pard, and the idea o' havin' the sin soaked outen us went agin the grain. The boys begin to heave the church furniture at him as a hint that their views an' his'n didn't exactly jine, an' he took number one's route through the winder."

"Did you keep on trying?"

"We did. Our next experiment war on one of the Universalist fellers. He told there war no burnin' hell, an' that we would all connect on paradise in the end, religion or no religion. As soon as he'd stated the case in that shape, he got the grand bounce. The boys couldn't see no fun in a game whar thar's nothin' to back agin, an' when you root hell outen the gospel it strips it of all interest, don't it, pard?"

"Did you try others then?"

"Yes, lots of 'em. We've sampled every denomination on the list, an' have encouraged a Chinaman when he axed leave to fit out a Joss shop, but none of 'em could dish up the truth to the satisfaction o' the camp. W'at we want is a man that'll shake out lots of fun along o' his piety, an' won't be too stuck up to amble up to the bar an' take a drink with the boys, instead o' sneaking behind his own door with a private bottle labeled 'Fly Poison.' We want a man that'll help fill out a game, encourage the boys by droppin' a little dust occasionally, umpire little mills when the light weight hops into the ring, settle gamblin' disputes, an' make himself ginerally useful. Sich a man as that, pard, kin strike a steady job at good pay, have a private box at the show every night free o' charge, git his drinks for nuthin' at any bar in the camp, an' move right along with the love and esteem of the hull diggin's. We don't want plated stuff, but a man that's solid material clear through. We want a man that's got grace to the backbone, but not in sich quantities that it crowds out the other sparklin' traits in his character, an' if yer know sich a man, pard, jist p'int his face towards our gulch an' tech him off. Tell him we're a Christian community up thar, pardner, an' we won't have no snide man to engineer us."

NAMING HER BABY.

On the Bay City train the other day was a woman with a baby about eight months old, and in the next seat was an old man who couldn't sit still until he had said:

"That's a baby you have there, isn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

"About a year old, isn't he?"

"Mercy, no! He's hardly eight months old, yet."

"Isn't eh? Well, I'm the father of nine children, but it's been so long since I've seen a baby that I've forgotten how they ought to look. Is he a girl?"

"No, sir; he's a boy."

"Just me, again. I never can tell one from 'tother. Is he purty healthy?"

"Oh, yes."

"Squall much nights?"

"Never squalls at all."

"Don't eh? That's the kind of a young 'un I like to see around. My Samuel did nothing but howl for the first two years, Sarah was allus sick, Moses fell out of the cradle and broke his arm, and something or other allus ailed every one of the lot. Have you named this baby yet?"

"No, sir."

"Haven't, eh? Say!"

"Yes, sir."

"S'posen you call him after me? My first name is Jefferson, and they Jeff me for short. I've got two ten-dollar gold pieces here for him if you want to call him Jefferson."

"I'll do it," promptly responded the woman.

"That's business. Here's the cash and the boy is named Jefferson, arter me. Lemme kiss him about four times."

The baby was duly kissed and congratulated, and at the next station he left the train with his mother. The old man was tickled half to death over the matter, until the conductor came along and asked:

"Did you pay her anything to name that baby after you?"

"Yes—twenty dollars. He's a clipper, and don't you forget it?"

"And so is his mother. She's down in the Detroit House of Correction, and the woman who had him takes care of him for two dollars a week."

"N-o-a!"

"Fact."

The old man's jaw fell, his eyes remained fixed on the ceiling for a minute, and then he fell back in his seat with the exclamation:

"Chaw me! Everybody has called me a fool for the past twenty years, and now I know they were right! Conductor!"

"Yes."

"Please mop the floor with me and break my neck, and step on me a thousand times, and then throw the mangled wreck into some swamp, for I won't be no more good in this world.—"Detroit Free Press.

AN EXTENSIVE VIEW.

Scotchmen are not famous for wit, but if they put any humor into a strong statement they always know how to substantiate their words. One whom a Yankee thought to astonish by telling him of mountains in America so high that Europe could be seen from the top of them, replied, dryly: "We can see fur'er nor that in Scotland. From the top of Ben-ledi I can spy the moon."

The story of the West of Scotland shepherd who told an English tourist that he would see six kingdoms from the summit of the hill they were ascending, is instructive as we has amusing. "What the mischief do you mean, shepherd?" demanded the skeptical Southron. "Weel, sir, I mean what I say," and then he pointed out in succession Cumberland in England; the Isle of Man, once a kingdom and a sovereignty in the families of Derby and Athole; the coast of Ireland, and the ground on which they were standing, part of Scotland.

"Yes," said the visitor, "that makes four, and you have two more to show me."

"That's true, sir, but don't be in sic a hurry. Weel, sir, just look up aboon yer heid, and this is by far the best of a' the kingdoms; that, sir, aboon, is heeven. That's five; and the saxth kingdom is that doon below yer feet, to which, sir, I hope you'll never gang."

PRESS FREEDOM IN RUSSIA.

The censorship exercised on the foreign correspondents in St. Petersburg during the recent Nihilist trial was not nearly as severe as usual. Among other things, however, they were not allowed to publish the opening sentences of Jeliaboff's speech. "I am not an anarchist," he said. "I allow the necessity of a Government, which always must and will exist; but the Government must be for the people, and not the people for the Government. I demand for the people freedom and representation, freedom of the press and freedom of speech; and I further demand the land for the people, to whom it of right belongs."

The loss of the bridge across the South Fork of Smith River, Oregon, has forced the mail-carriers to adopt a primitive plan of crossing the river, but which has long been used by the natives in some parts of India, A rope has been stretched across the river, about 40 feet from the water, and on it is attached a canvas sack, into which the carrier gets with the mail. He then pulls himself across.

It is necessary to be almost a genius to make a good husband.

No man has any time to form any definite idea of eternity.

HOW PETE CAME ON THE FORCE.

Late on a warm August afternoon some five years ago, while the Captain of the Church street police station was leaning negligently back in his chair behind the desk, a chunky-built brindle dog of solemn mien walked gravely into the room, and sat down in the middle of the floor with the air of a dog whose right to such a liberty was entirely beyond question.

"Whist! Get out!"

The Captain yelled these syllables at the dog, but the animal never moved. Then the official shied a small paper-weight at the dog, who looked up with an expression of grave disapproval and settled himself in his former position, and paid no more attention to the man behind the desk. After one or two more attempts at dislodgement, the Captain fell into a reverie and left the dog in peace. Later the dog aroused himself, and trotted into the rear room where the policemen congregate. He walked about quietly until he found a position to his liking under the table, in the centre of the room. He lay down here and went to sleep.

At midnight the fourth section of the second platoon was rung up. The men marched into the main room and ranged themselves in line. The dog followed and took up his position at the foot. When the roll was called the sergeant named the dog Pete, and bade him go with the men. He followed them out, went around from one post to another, returned with the platoon in the morning, and went to sleep under the table.

Relays of men were called during the day, but the dog did not move. At six o'clock the fourth section of the second platoon was again called out. The dog marched in with the men and took up his position at the foot of the line.

"By George," said the Captain, "there's that pup again. Well, don't feed him, doorman, and he'll soon go away."

But he didn't go away. He has never been fed in the station, and he has always acted thoroughly at home.

"There's one peculiar thing about Pete,' said the sergeant at the desk, recently. "He moves and acts exactly like a policeman. He never runs or jumps or plays, but simply strolls along. He's fond of janitor's daughters, and will stand stock still in a shadowy doorway for hours at a stretch. Not a man in the precinct has ever seen him eat, and I'm pretty sure that the general public never saw him drink. And then what a clever dog he is! In the the wintor of '79, on the 10th of Janury, if my memory serves, Pete was walking along Greenwich street, on his way from post to post, when he saw three men at the basement door of the bouded warehouses Nos. 98, 100 and 102. A moment later, and the men had forced the door, entered the building, and closed up their work so that a passing glance could not detect that anything had been tampered with. Pete lay down by the door and growled. After a while officer Dougherty came along, and, patting the dog on the head, walked on, expecting the dog to follow him. Pete never moved, but growled louder than before, with his eyes fixed like augers on that door. Dougherty tried to get him to move, but it wouldn't do. At last the officer saw that something was up. He examined the door, then rapped for assistance, and the building was searched. Two of the burglars were captured. The other one escaped. About three o'clock one morning last winter, Pete was trotting along Broadway, when he discovered a broken pane of glass in a clothing store near Cedar street. He stopped at once and barked like mad. Every man in the precinct knows Pete's voice. Officer Donnelly ran to him and found that there had been a light robbery. Whether the dog frightened the thieves away or not, we never knew. Another time the dog discovered a fire at 240 Fulton street. Pete has never missed his turn on the second platoon, and has never gone out with any other than the fourth section in five years."—*N. Y. A LONG FAST.

A correspondent from North Union township writes to the Journal to the following effect:—"As the following incident is known to few people, perhaps readers of the Journal will find it interesting, as it is out of the usual run, and is true in every particular. Jacob Lindenmuth, of North Union township, this county, while threshing in the summer of 1878, covered one of his turkeys with straw, while the bird was sitting on a nest of eggs in the barnyard. Forty-three days afterward one of the family found the turkey, which was still living, where she had been covered over and forgotten. She was so weak as to be unable to walk. She was carefully fed, and in time recovered her pristine vigor. While covered up she could get no food, or drink, and lived on nothing but air. How long she had been on the nest when covered over is not known."—Pottstown Miners' Journal.

During the war, Wm. H. Augur, a Union soldier helped three sisters who were in great distress at their despoiled home in Virginia. After the death of the last of them, some years ago, it was provided that the estate should be kept in trust for certain missing heirs until 1881, and then, if they were not found, be given to Augur, who had returned to his family at Meriden, Conn. The time has now expired, the heirs have not appeared, and Auger is to receive $100,000.

Affliction, like the iron smith, shapes as it smites.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
Having gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone, recognized as a wonderful remedy. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head and snuffles it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

Michael Angelo.

The course of lectures at the Peabody Institute opened last evening with a lecture by Hon. Wm. Parsons on Michael Angelo. This scholarly and eloquent speaker has become well known to the patrons of our lecture course; he is always welcomed gladly, and equally last evening with any of his previous efforts. The lecturer opened with a definition of art, which aims to present and embody an idea of the infinite in finite form, or, in popular parlance, art is the translation of mind into matter. The subject of his lecture was an exponent of these principles. He pictured to his readers a scene, the period 400 years ago, the scene Italy and the time night, where, in the midst of a storm, the youth Angelo was not to be found, and while his name resounded in calls throughout the castle, suddenly he is discovered, with disheveled hair, on the topmost turret, watching the forked lightning. The mind of young Angelo was fed on Dante, who took for his noblest theme the tortures of the condemned in the world below, and whose subject had become so much a part of his being that it told on his very looks. Angelo was the son of a nobleman in the north of Italy, who held the position similar to that in our time of mayor of a city, and who desired that his son should make his mark. Young Angelo determined to engage in sculpture, and entered the academy of De Medici. The lecturer stated that in tracing his career he found that he was confronted at every step of his progress by a competitor, who sharply contested his laurels. Here in the academy it was a fellow student, who jeered at, and finally insulted him. An insult was something which the youth could not endure, and it resulted in blows, Angelo receiving a scar which he carried through life. It was instanced, as evidence of the thoroughness with which he entered into his work, that in molding the clay model of a human being he commenced at the skeleton, and then added the nerves and fibres until, under his plastic touch, it became the well rounded figure. One of the early triumphs of Angelo was an order for a painting to be placed in the public hall, in which he was to be brought into competition with Leonardo de Vinci, his rival at that time, the better of the two to be retained. When completed the work of each artist was exposed to view, and the feeling of the people was divided as to their merits. One morning Angelo entered the hall alone, and gazed first at the painting of De Vinci. After admiring it, he turned to his own to see how it would stand the test—when behold! it was gone, and he found it had been torn into shreds during the night and the remnants scattered on the floor. It was probable that a student of his rival, fearing the success of Angelo, had taken this method to prevent it. Very soon after this he was called to Rome, and was desired by the Pope—it was then in the 15th century—to paint the arch in the Cistenæ Chapel. Here was a new opportunity for Angelo, and in an entirely different sphere. It was to be painted on a concave surface, and after much thought and care in design, he divided it into twelve compartments, each representing a scriptural allegory, the last being the well known "Last Judgment." He was over six years completing his work here, and at the close, it was necessary for him in reading a letter to hold it over his head, his eyes having become entirely turned upward in the sockets. In Rome Angelo encountered his last rival, Raphael. He leaves Rome to him, and devotes himself to engineering—building roads across the lower Alps. Later he returned to Rome, and while at work on his last statue, he received word that his favorite city of Florence was menaced by her military foes, and hastened to her relief. He was made Commander-in-Chief and defended the fortress for eight months. His crowning labor was the building of the Temple of St. Peter. He was then in his 80th year, and herein he was to concentrate all the art of Egypt, Italy and Greece. This was his most enduring work, and whatever may be our creed or religion, the speaker said, no one visiting the Eternal City can enter the structure without awe. He died at the age of 88 years. The secret of his success may be summed up in the two words "grandissimo amore." The lecture was eloquently delivered, and was listened to with rapt attention to the close by the entire audience.

In speaking of a local in last week's Reporter, in which we publlshed the vote of the School Committee, relative to the position of James N. Ham as Principal of the High School, the Press says, "the entire item was published against the express wishes and request of the School Committee." In reply the publishers of the Reporter say that the statement of the Press is a base falsehood, as the Committee neither requested us to publish or suppress the item; and we further say that we shall continue to give the public all the news at our command, "unawed by influence and unbribed by gain."—Reporter.

It does not need any poetical quotation to demonstrate the right of our neighbor to act his pleasure in the publication of any item. As far as the Press is concerned it is glad the item was published. In our comment on it last week we strove to correct the impression, which the item as published by our neighbor implied, that the object sought by the passage of the vote was unanimous with the committee; and we also stated the fact, which is true, that it was published "against the expressed (not express) wishes of the Committee." We do not mean that the School Committee, by a written vote, sent a special request to our neighbor not to publish it; but we do mean to say that there was an understanding between the members of the Committee that the passage of the vote should be kept quiet for the present; that a member of the Committee, in conformity with the understanding as above, and in that sense representing the entire board, went to our neighbor and desired that he would not publish it; and, further, that our neighbor agreed with this member that he would not publish it; that he violated his word, and it appeared in the columns of his paper. Further comment at this time is unnecessary. We perfectly understand the attitude of our neighbor, and his desire to shield himself from the consequences of the unpleasant position in which he has placed himself, by attempting to throw the lie on us. But it wont do.

It is with pleasure that we record the fact that our efforts of last week, in giving our readers a full account of the dedication exercises, were appreciated by the public. Our paper was for sale on Friday morning, before the arrival of the Boston dailies, containing Rev. Mr. Lovering's address in full, and a more extensive account and history of the monument than has yet been published. Notwithstanding that we printed a very large extra edition, we were compelled, on Monday of this week, to again put our forms on the press, to enable us to supply the continued demand. We would take this occasion to say to our readers, that we have many good things in store for them during the coming year, and we trust that those into whose hands this sheet may fall, and who are not subscribers to the Press, will become so without delay.—We thank our cotemporaries for their kindly notices, some of which we give below:

The proprietors of the Peabody Press displayed considerable enterprise this week in printing two extra pages with the eight that are regularly furnished the subscribers of the paper. The dedication of the Soldiers' monument in that town, of which a full account is published, was the occasion of the enlargement.—Salem Observer.

The Press issues a triple sheet this week, with a full page advertisement of the N. E. Boot and Shoe Co.—News.

The Press of this week is having a large sale. Those wishing a complete account of dedication and everything pertaining to the monument, besides a list of the soldiers who went from the town, should purchase the Press.—Post.

The Peabody Press manifested enterprise in giving a very full report of the services at the dedication of the monument in that town on Thursday, including the admirable oration of Chaplain Lovering complete.—Register.

The Press yesterday issued a triple sheet with the roll of Peabody's quota in the war of the Rebellion.—Boston Star.

A nice lot of White Granite Plate, all sizes which we offer at low prices. Bushby & Co. —Adv.

EDITOR OF THE PRESS,—The following statement, which I am authorized to make, will explain the recent action of the School Committee in regard to the Principal of the High School.

At the annual election of teachers on the first of July last, a difference of opinion was manifested in the Committee in regard to Mr. Ham's reelection, three members desiring to retain him in his present position and three members desiring a change.

Action accordingly became impossible, as a majority of the board was necessary to elect either Mr. Ham or any successor.

Under these circumstances an agreement was made with Mr. Ham for his reelection, upon the understanding that his connection with the school should terminate during the year, six months being mentioned as a suitable limit to his engagement.

It is proper, however, to say that there is a difference of opinion in the Committee as to whether this limit was definitely fixed or not, no record having been made.

No further action was taken until the meeting held October 31st, when the matter was pressed to a definite settlement by those members of the board who wish for a change.

Agreement was now found to be impossible as to the date when the abovementioned six months would expire, whether on the first of January or on the first of March.

As a necessary concession, probably to the satisfaction of no member, a vote was allowed to pass that Mr. Ham's engagement should close on the eighteenth of February next. This is about two weeks before the reorganization of the School board after the election of town officers in March.

The effect of this vote was virtually the reference of the question to the next board, the present Committee being in a condition of dead-lock, with no prospect of change.

It was the intention of the Committee, and also of Mr. Ham, that this action should not be made public for the present.

The agreement of last July was thus substantially carried out, but in a way to enable Mr. Ham, after a brief interval, to become a candidate for reelection to his present position, if he so desires.

For the Committee,
J. W. HUDSON, Chairman.

Sets of Johnson's Encyclopædia, for which subscriptions in town were taken by Capt. Fentress, have been sold freely in Boston book store, for 25 per cent. less than the Captain's price. Just indignation is expressed by those who have purchased at the high price.—Reporter.

The above unjustly reflects upon Capt. Fentress, and conveys a wrong impression which we are surprised to see come from our truthful neighbor. The Encyclopædia is a subscription work, and can not be bought of the publishers now or at any time, less than the price asked by them, which is the price at which Capt. Fentress sold them. Like all subscription books, it sometimes happens that an agent has a set left on his hands, or gets hard pushed, violates his agreement with the publishers, and disposes of the work at what it cost him. For a long time after Capt. Fentress finished his work here, no such opportunity was afforded. Of late a few sets have thus come on the market. But that they are sold "freely" in Boston book stores, or that there has been any action in regard to the sale of the work here by Capt. Fentress that should cause indignation is entirely false.

OUR readers who sent any copies of last week's PRESS through the mail find that one cent is not enough for the postage. Mr. Ward informs us that several of them are being held for postage, and those who have mailed copies of last week's PRESS with only a one cent stamp, should call at the Post Office, if they wish them to be sent to their destination.

A fishmonger on the Square, last Monday, had on exhibition a specimen of a skate fish which attracted considerable attention. This fish had a head much resembling the face of a human being. The resemblance was made still more striking by inserting a cigar in its mouth. In fact it looked a good deal like some young loafers about town.

The many friends of Miss Minnie A. Smith, the favorite vocalist, will be pleased to learn that the concert to be given for her benefit in Plummer Hall, Salem, next Friday evening, promises to be a great success. Besides solos by the beneficiary, the Howell club of Boston will give the charming comedietta, "Cox and Box." Mr. J. J. Carew, organist at St. John's Church, will be piano-soloist for the occasion.

Particular attention is directed to the advertisement of the SHAWMUT HAT, CAP AND FUR STORE, Nos. 191 and 193 Essex Street, Salem, Mass., under the management of George A. Smith. This firm started in their present quarters last spring, having taken the old stand of Mr. Osborne, refitted the store throughout, and making it one of the lightest and pleasantest stores in the city. No one can pass their large, roomy windows, always filled with the newest and best goods, without being attracted. Their store inside is a model of neatness. They have here a full and complete stock of the fall and winter styles in hats and caps, suited to all ages and classes of patrons. Customers who cannot be suited in their store must be indeed hard to please. They carry the best line of horse furnishings to be found in Essex Co. Robes, coverings, blankets, and everything needful for the wants of those interested, can be bought at low prices at this establishment. Rubber garments are an important item in this line of goods at the present time. This firm leads all others in their display in boys' and men's, from the cheaper grades to the finest work manufactured. They have already a good line of furs, and later in the season they will show an elegant line of fur dolmans and cloaks, and will take orders for the manufacture of seal sacques to order from the best known and longest established Fur house in Boston. No house can compete, with them in the variety and extent of stock of such garments. A specialty of the Shawmut is their gents' furnishing goods, which they are selling at a very slight advance over the manufacturers' price. We were shown gents' underwear in different grades, which they offer at 40 cents, that would be a bargain at 75 cents, and the finer and higher priced goods in the same rates. They are having an enormous sale of these goods, and we caution our readers that they will be money out of pocket should they omit visiting this store in search of bargains. Mr. Smith, the gentlemanly manager, is always pleased to show customers through his stock, whether desiring to purchase or not—a fact which should be remembered by our readers.

A very beautiful premium engraving has been issued by "Peterson's Magazine," for 1882, to reward persons for getting up clubs. The plate is large 20x16 and would ornament even the most refined parlor; for it is executed in the highest style of art. It is entitled, "Hush! Don't Wake Them," and represents a little girl seated at a bedside, where her two sick dolls are, and she is holding up her finger, warningly, as she speaks. It is really one of the most charming pictures possible; all the little ones, especially, will be delighted with it. Any one can secure this beautiful engraving, gratis, by getting up a club for "Peterson." Only the enormous circulation of the Magazine can explain why the proprietors can afford to give such premiums. "Peterson" is the best and cheapest of the lady's books, the price being but two dollars a year, with great reductions to clubs. Specimens of the Magazine, to assist in getting up clubs, are sent, gratis, if written for. Now is the time to get up clubs for 1882. No one should subscribe to any magazine until they have seen a copy of "Peterson," and compared it with others. Address, Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut St. Philadelphia, Pa.

CARD.

We have noticed a paragraph in the Reporter, in which it is strongly insinuated that Capt. W. H. Fentress has been guilty of selling "Johnson's Universal Clyclopædia" above the price asked for it in a Boston bookstore. If the work is for sale by the trade, anywhere, then it was obtained surreptitiously, through means of which we have no knowledge. Capt. Fentress has been in our employ many years, and has been directed by us, as are all our canvassers, to take all orders for our publications at the regular subscription prices. Therefore he is not guilty of any misdemeanor, whatsoever, in this matter.

Very respectfully,

MR. EDITOR,—I wish a small space in your columns to-day to correct false reports that have been put in circulation through the Boston Globe. That paper has retracted the statement. Now, what I have to say in regard to the man that sent the article is this: That he is a dirty, low-lived, lying poltroon. Let him show his color.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

We desire that our readers should particularly note that an opportunity, which will probably never occur again, is afforded the citizens of this town to hear Mlle. Litta, the renowned Prima Donna, at the Peabody Institute, Saturday evening. The musical people here need no reminder from us that she is not excelled even by Annie Louise Cary. It is only by extraordinary exertions that manager Hooper has been able to secure her for Peabody. She does not appear in Salem, nor in any place within fifteen miles. She will be assisted by Miss Hattie McLain, of whom the Toronto Globe says, "She created a very favorable impression, and fairly divided the honors with Litta," Mr. H. L. Cleveland, tenor, and Mr. Montrose Graham, late of the Strakosch English Opera Co., baritone. There should not be a seat left unsold at the time of the performance. Tickets are at popular prices, and are for sale at B. F. Stevens'. Mr. Hooper intends later in the season to follow this entertainment with such stars as Anna Louise Cary, Nella F. Brown, the reader, and the Swedish Quartette.

At last the long looked for and talked of horse race between Peabody parties at Danvers Trotting Park, took place last Friday. It was in mile heats, best 3 in 5, owners to do their own driving. About three or four hundred were present. There were four entries, and the result was as follows:

G.W.Bancroft,b.g.Tanglefoot,	1	1	0	1
H. K. Pevear, b. g. Billy,	2	2	0	2
S. W. King. b. g. U. S.,	3	3	0	3
J. E. Clement, b. m. Kate,	4	4	0	4

The winner's time, first heat, 3 m. 6 s.; second heat, 3 m.; third heat, dead; fourth heat, 3 m. Nearly every private team in Peabody was at the park. The time-keeper was Mr. Wm. Farnum and the judges were W. C. Munroe, C. O. Stone and S. F. Blaney.

A case illustrating the hoggishness of a certain man, occurred at a boarding-house in town this week. It was shown by removing the tables, which belonged to him, and were in use by another, from the house, while the boarders were waiting for their dinner. We are glad to learn however, his object was not accomplished. When meanness is born in a man it is bound to crop out sometime.

We understand that Dr. H. A. Reynolds of Red Ribbon fame, is again to visit Mass. for temperance work. He will arrive in this state about the 20th inst, and the campaign will open in Wakefield Nov. 25th. All communications from parties desiring his services should be addressed to Chas. S. Parker, publisher of the Arlington Advocate, who is secretary of the Committee.

A new industry has been started in town under Vaughn's mill. It is the preparing of fuel for the fire, furnishing it sawed and split. The gentleman carrying on this business lives in Middleton and his religion will not allow him to work on Saturday but will on Sunday. This, of course, shocks the "upper-sanctimonious," but still he does it.

There will be a trot at the Danvers track to-morrow, between the horses of Messrs. Bancroft and Pevear, that trotted last Friday. So close was the race that this will probably settle the question as to which has the best horse. Chas. O. Stone will drive Bancroft's horse and Mr Skinner, the owner of the track, Pevear's.

Don't miss the grand performance of the J. Jay Watson Unique Entertainment Company on Thursday evening, at Peabody Institute. A host of fine artists will appear, and as Prof. Watson is said to be a host in himself, it will be a rare treat to see and hear so many "hosts" upon one occasion. Go early.

A just judge in Boston has recently declared that the ringing of bells and blowing of steam whistles at unseemly hours of the night and early morning is a public nuisance, and that no whistles should be blown earlier than 6.30 o'clock A. M. This is a very proper and desirable decision. Can't we induce that judge to move to Peabody?

The Monument Dedication Committee closed up its business last evening. The bills were audited and approved. The total expenditures were $985.39—including a bill for extra police, $30.00, ordered by the Selectmen. The appropriation was $1000; balance, $14.61.

Independent of their course the Odd Fellows will hold a matinee at the Institute on Thanksgiving afternoon, when "The Octoroon" will be presented. There is no need of going out of town, as a first-class entertainment will be given at the Institute.

The water pipes leading to the top of Buxton's hill have been covered, and a solid foundation of rock has been laid for the base of the stand pipe, on which work still continues.

Uncle Tom's Cabin was played in the Peabody Institute last Friday evening by Martis' troupe of colored troubadours, under the management of A. D. Morrison. The troupe was fairly patronized, and the piano playing between the acts, and the singing of the troubadours just previous to the closing scene were exceptionally good. We cannot say as much of the rest of the performance. Much that was entirely foreign to the original play was interpolated, and although a travelling company, they did not at all times appear to be familiar with their lines. To-night Skiff's California Minstrels appear under the same management, and a really fine show is promised. We wish Mr. Morrison success. We shall be pleased to see him bring to this town some first-class entertainments. There is no reason why our people should not patronize them instead of going to Salem, and we believe they will do so, if they are assured that the entertainments are worthy of their patronage.

Last Saturday Mr. Moses Brown, of South Peabody, started out for Stoneham with a load of onions. He had disposed of his load and received for it eighteen dollars. While on his way home, and when about half way there, at a village known as "Little World," a few miles beyond Wakefield, he says that two men boarded his team and robbed him of seventeen dollars and forty cents. It seems a very queer robbery, as there were no weapons used and Mr. Brown did not receive even a scratch.

The above is from the Peabody correspondence of the Salem Post. We are afraid Moses is longing for newspaper notoriety, and has drawn largely on his imagination. If our young friend desired, Moses could furnish him with items enough to keep his paper full all the time.

Mr. Craig, of So. Peabody, has again let his temper get him into trouble. It would seem that last Saturday, Mr. Craig, who has leased his mill to Collamore & Sons, of Boston, some time since, became angry with them, claiming that they were encroaching on the part of the mill he had reserved for himself. They tried to reason with him, but to no purpose. He seized an axe and forced an entrance through a window. He then drew a revolver and drove out a workman.—The police were notified and were soon on the spot, and after forcing an entrance, found Mr. Craig in peaceful possession. By this time he had become quite docile, and the sight of brass buttons seemed to have a quieting effect. Finally the matter was settled by Mr. Craig's signing an agreement not to interfere in any manner with the workmen or the mill.

Mr. Solomon Welch, who died last Friday of disease contracted in the army, was 67 years and 3 months old. Previous to his enlistment in the army he had never seen an unwell day.—Coming as he did from a long-lived family—his mother dying 3 years ago at the age of 97—he inherited a strong and robust constitution that hard labor could not affect, but which hard fighting, long marches, short rations, cold, damp nights and hot days, finally broke down. He was a patriot indeed, giving a son who was sacrificed upon his country's altar at the battle of Antietam, and now his own life has gone out in consequence of his devotion to his country. Coming from Maine at an early age he married, and has reared a large family, and their devotion to him through years of suffering proves that he was not unappreciated, for he was a loving husband and father, a kind neighbor and a good citizen. He leaves a wife and four children, and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss. A FRIEND.

A Lecture and Concert will be given on Tuesday evening, Nov. 22d, in the First Baptist Church, Salem, in aid of the "Salem Society of Deaf Mutes." Rev. Alfred A. Wright, of Lynn, has kindly consented to deliver his famous lecture on "Words: Wise and Otherwise." The Lecture will be preceded by an Organ Concert by Messrs. Chas. A. Clark and F. Arthur Spence. Concert begins at 7 1-2 o'clock. Lecture at 8. Tickets for sale at C. H. & J. Price's drug store, 226 Essex St., Salem, or at the door. This society has been incorporated since 1876, and is doing a good work. Mr. Wm. Buxton of Peabody is one of the directors.

Lincoln Lodge of Essenians visited Beverly on the second instant, and paid a visit to Seaside Lodge of that town. There were also present members of Pioneer Lodge of Boston, and Ocean Lodge of Marblehead. The visiting friends were finely entertained with music and a supper. Mrs. Bartlett of Lincoln Lodge, sang several selections.

Mrs. A. K. Spence delivered an address in the Congregational Church last Sunday. She is the wife of Prof. Spence of Fiske University, and her object was to secure money to help continue the education of the colored people at this institution.

It shows good judgment to buy a $3.50 Hat for $2.50, and it can be done at the Shawmut. Entire stock marked in plain figures, and at a small advance from factory prices.—Adv.

Saturday is the favorite day for weddings in Paris.

In five years a New Hampshire judge has divorced 227 couples.

A lunch given by a New York lady to five of her friends cost $110, or $22 a plate.

The largest orange ever raised in Florida is said to have measured five inches in diameter.

A woman at Fort Plains, N. Y., who has had a severe cough for three years, recently coughed up a pin.

A Dansville woman, the mother of five children, whose husband died two weeks ago, has married again.

The Springfield (Ill.) bootblacks recently paraded the streets with banners carrying "Ten cents or no shine."

So great is the Empress of Austria's horror of noise that wherever she may be, thick carpets are laid down to drown the sounds of even her own footsteps.

Atlanta, Ga., has three building associations, with 6,500 shares, which are building one hundred houses a year and lending about $12,000 a year.

A celery garden of forty-six acres, believed to be the largest in the world, is cultivated in the suburbs of London, and produces annually about 500,000 plants.

A citizen of Norwich, Conn., who has a fancy for collecting interesting relics, has among his collection 6,000 Indian arrowheads of every conceivable design.

John Mance, of Chicago, recently gave his wife $300 to put in a safe place. Having one hand full of papers she intended to burn and the money in the other, she threw the bills into the fire.

The Empress Josephine changed her linen three times a day and never wore any stockings that were not new. Huge baskets were brought to her containing dresses, shawls and hats.

Some of Shakespeare's plays are to be performed in London without scenery, as in the olden time, the imagination of the audience being started in the right directions by such placards on the plain wall as "A Room in Macbeth's Castle" and "A Wooded Dell."

The Poe family, of Winchester, Tenn., is described as tough. Two of the sons are on trial for murder. The mother complacently chews tobacco in court, and a daughter sits with her feet on a table. One of the prisoners, enraged at the testimony of a witness, kicked him off the stand.

A man of suave manner and business-like speech fared sumptuously for a week in Philadelphia, and was taken to the best shows, at the hands of wholesale merchants' salesmen, of whom he bought heavy bills of goods, but did not return to pay or to take away the merchandise.

Among the curious articles in the Indian court of the Melbourne Exhibition are two hollow elephant tusks, fitted with a gold cover. They were sent to the Viceroy of India by the Rajah of Burmah, who used them as an envelope for an official communication. They are valued at $1,000.

In New York, recently, two thieves enticed a truckman into a store on Broadway with pretense of having freight for him, and locked him in a room on an upper floor, then drove away with his truck, which already had goods on to the value of $2,700. The scamps were finally caught and the property recovered.

The story is told of a San Francisco man of sudden wealth, who desired a gallery of family portraits, and supplied the want by buying a lot of old portraits while traveling abroad. He had the noses of all rubbed out, and his family nose, which is peculiar, carefully painted in, thus making the pictures probable.

A Frenchman has invented a rubber attachment to be applied to the corks of bottles from which liquids may be forced in drops through a glass tube or pipette. This will be a great convenience for nurses and attendants upon the sick, who often have difficulty in getting the prescribed number of drops in a teaspoon.

A rascal has been earning a living in Boston by going around to banks and counting-rooms, representing himself as an agent of a counterfeit bank detector, and asking for any specimens of bad bills. From these he erases the word "counterfeit" written upon them, and then succeeds in passing them and getting good money.

The English census takers had some practical jokes played upon them. In a number of cases in London the husband returned the wife as the head of the family and himself as an idiot to marry her. "Married, and I'm heartily sorry for it," was returned in two cases. To put "temper" under the head of infirmities opposite the name of the wife was a frequent joke. Great persuasion was necessary to induce the ladies to state their age.

The Vienna papers record a terrible death which lately befell an artisan. The great steam boiler in some works at Pit on required cleaning. During the operation a young man named Kaczander, worn out with fatigue, went to sleep in a huge air-pipe running under the main furnace. He was not observed, and the masons bricked up the end of the pipe, when the fires were relighted. At night Kaczander was missed, but it did not occur to any one till the next morning that he might have crept into the air-pipes. The heading was removed, when the charred skeleton of the unfortunate man met the horrified gaze of the searchers. Bricked up in the air-tube, he had been slowly baked alive.

An ounce of real mother is worth a pound of book learning.

A Michigan woman has sent to England for three hundred servant girls which will last her, according to the general run, about eleven days.

Mr. Wm. Hadeler at the Marathon Hotel, Wausau, after extreme suffering with rheumatism, without any benefit from physicians or various preparations, was cured by using St. Jacobs Oil.—Kansas City Times.

Why is a baby like wheat? Because it is first cradled, then threshed, and finally becomes the flower of the family.

And now they tell us bedbug bites cure rheumatism. Another and a pleasanter way is to get in front of an express train and try to sling it off the track, as it comes up.

$10,000 AWARDED.—"I was so sick and low-spirited that I thought I would give anything to get well; and if any one had ensured me the good health produced by using Simmons' Liver Regulator, and charged me a thousand dollars, I would willingly have paid it if I had had it; in fact, ten thousand dollars would be worth less to me than what it has done for me.

GEO. F. BARRETT, Macon, Ga."

Nearly all the ills that afflict us can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv. nov2—1m

"Down in front!" said two or three young ladies who sat behind Smythekins at a concert. And as his moustache was just starting, he thought they meant something personal and he blushed.

Palpitation of the heart, nervousness, tremblings, nervous headache, cold hands and feet, pain in the back, and other forms of weakness are relieved by Carter's Iron Pills, made specially for the blood, nerves and complexion.

To remove proud flesh, pulverize loaf sugar very fine, and apply it to the part afflicted. This is a new and easy remedy.—Exchange. We have seen proud flesh that was evidently created by a combination of loaf and "sugar."

If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for sick headache, and every woman should know this. Only one pill a dose.

"Must the American oyster die?" asks one of our exchanges. It must if it is tough enough to go through a plain stew or a fancy roast alive, we don't want it.

WINSTON, Forsyth Co., N. C.

GENTS,—I desire to express to you my thanks for your wonderful Hop Bitters. I was troubled with dyspepsia for five years previous to commencing the use of your Hop Bitters, some six months ago. My cure has been wonderful. I am pastor of the First Methodist church of this place, and my whole congregation can testify to the great virtue of your Bitters. Very respectfully, REV. H. FEREBEE.

It was very ungallant in the old bachelor who was told that a certain lady had "one foot in the grave" to ask if "there wasn't room for both feet."

A little girl went timidly into a store the other day and asked the shopman how many shoestrings she could get for a penny. "How long do you want them?" he asked. "I want them to keep," was the answer in a tone of surprise.

Mr. Thomas Lewis, 62 Butler street, informs us that for seven years he was afflicted with that dreadful malady, Sciatica, and being induced to try St. Jacobs Oil, found almost immediate relief therefrom, and is now perfectly cured.—Cincinnati Irish Citizen.

A man may hold his tongue at the wrong time.

A guilty conscience needs no accuser.

AN INTERESTING ACCOUNT!

STONE IN THE BLADDER EXPELLED BY USING DR. KENNEDY'S "FAVORITE REMEDY."

Mr. S. W. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y., the son of Mr. E. S. Hicks, whose name may have appeared in this journal in connection with an article similar to this, was, like his father, afflicted with Stone in the Bladder, only that his case was more serious than his father's. On the appearance of the disease the father advised the son to write to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who, he said, would tell him what to do. Dr. Kennedy replied, suggesting the use of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which had worked so successfully in his father's case. Mr. Hicks, who had been assured by the local physicians that they could do nothing more for him tried "Favorite Remedy" at a venture. After two weeks' use of it he passed a stone 3-4 of an inch long and of the thickness of a pipe-stem. Since then he has had no symptoms of the return of the trouble. Here is a sick man healed. What better results could have been expected? What greater benefit could medical science confer? The end was gained; that is surely enough. Dr. Kennedy assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the Blood, cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder complaints, as well as all those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists.

THE GREAT UNFAILING SPECIFIC FOR Liver Complaint

The symptons of Liver complaint are uneasiness and pain in the side, sometimes pain in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism; the Stomach is effected with a loss of appetite and sickness: bowels, in genral, costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, and dull heavy sensation; considerable loss of memory with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done; often complaining of weakness, debility and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above sympton attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the Liver is generally the organ most involved.

THE SUN.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discardad many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.

THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN'S political course.

THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like THE SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a perfect Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY—16 PAGES.

Suited to Boys and Girls of from Six to Sixteen Years.

Vol. III. commences Nov. 1, 1881.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE.

The YOUNG PEOPLE has been from the first successful beyond anticipation.—N. Y. Evening Post.

It has a distinct purpose to which it steadily adheres—that, namely, of supplanting the vicious papers for the young with a paper more attractive, as well as more wholesome.—Boston Journal.

For neatness, elegance of engraving, and contents generally, it is unsurpassed by any publication of the kind yet brought to our notice.—Pittsburg Gazette.

Its weekly visits are eagerly looked for, not only by the children, but also by parents who are anxious to provide pure literature for their girls and boys.—Christian Advocate, Buffalo, N. Y.

A weekly paper for children which parents need not fear to let their children read at the family fireside.—Hartford Daily Times.

Just the paper to take the eye and secure the attention of the boys and girls.—Springfield Union.

The only complete story of his noble life and tragic death. Fresh, brilliant, reliable. Elegantly printed in English and German; beautifully illustrated; handsomely bound. Fastest selling book ever published. By John C. Ridpath, LL. D.

CAUTION. Do not buy the catchpenny, revamped campaign books with which the country is flooded. They are utterly worthless; an outrage upon the memory of the great dead, and a base fraud on the public. This book is entirely new. The only work worthy the theme. Send 50c. in Stamps for Agent's Outfit.

Worldly Trifles.

Do you drink beer? No,'the man but in my rear, who is rather queer, he drinks beer, until it makes him leer at every one near; he's a gay gambolier and will soon find his bier.—Terre Haute Sat. Night.

An old negro cook says: "Sass is powerfull good in everything but children. Dey needs some other kind of dressing."

However watched by loving care,
Home has distempers lurking there,
And human power cannot defend
From ills that constantly impend;
But Sanford's Ginger bids pain cease,
And home restores to health and peace.
nov.2—1m.

"What a fine, protuberant forehead your baby has, Mrs. Jones! Did he get it from his father?" "No," replied Mrs. Jones, "he got it from a fall down stairs."

A man being tormented with corns kicked his foot through the window, and the pane was gone instantly.

Long indulgence in over eating or drinking produces a disorganized Liver, and all the evils attendant upon such derangements; depression of spirits, habitual costiveness, nervous exhaustion, indigestion; pain in the head, with nausea; fullness of stomach after meals, chillness, general debility and languor. Seek relief from Simmons' Liver Regulator.

"It is a very valuable remedy for dyspepsia, sick headache, torpid liver and such like diseases.
"W. S. Holt, Pres. of S.W.R.R. Co. of Ga." oct12 1m

A man was drifting aimlessly about Cambridge. When they found he was seeking for a young man studying at Harvard, they looked at him in blank amazement. At last a man spoke: "Good Lord, if you are looking for one of the students, what the blazes are you doing at Cambridge? Why aint you looking around the Parker house billiard room?"—Boston Post.

The restoration to health of our child we considered very uncertain. When two weeks old she caught a cold; until 18 months old she was not able to breathe through the nostrils, became emaciated, was a puny child. Upon using Ely's Cream Balm her difficulty is removed; she breathes freely and naturally. The neighbors consider it a wonderful restoration. Mr. & Mrs. J. M. Smith, Oswego, N. Y.

I have used Ely's Cream Balm and received great benefit, at present being entirely free from Catarrh. Many of my friends have also been much benefitted by the Balm. What is claimed for this remedy I am fully convinced is true. Chas. Greene, Conductor N. Y., L. E. & W. R. R. Port Jervis N. Y.

When the Old Testament is revised and modernized it will probably state that Adam, after eating the apple, received word that his resignation would be accepted.

Two young women have done all the work on the Guadalupe, Cal., Telegraph. They have been writing the editorial articles and the local reports, preparing the general news and miscellaneous reading matter, setting the type, making up the forms, lifting them from the stone to the press, doing the press-work on a No. 7 Washington hand-press, and mailing and distributing the papers.

It is a foolish mistake to confound a remedy of merit with quack medicines. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Dyspepsia Debility, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times. nov2—1m

Fenderson was at the theatre the other evening. "It was a burlesque, a take-off, wasn't it?" asked Smith. "Yes," said Fenderson, "that's what it was, I guess. They had taken off everything they dared to."

Indulgent parents who allow their children to eat heartily of high-seasoned food, rich pies, cakes, &c., will have to use Hop Bitters to prevent indigestion, sleepless nights, sickness, pain, and, perhaps, death. No family is safe without them in the house.

"So she refused you, did she?" asked Pingay. "Why didn't you press her, my boy?" "Press her?" exclaimed Brown. "She wouldn't let me get near enough for that."

Itching Piles—Symptoms and Cure.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes for $1.25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price in currency, or three cent postage stamps. Prepared only by Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, Pa., to whom letters should be addressed. Sold by all prominent druggists.
Wm. T. Lee, Agent, Peabody.

"Where is the island of Java situated?" asked a school teacher of a small, rather-forlorn looking boy. "I dunno, sir." "Don't you know where coffee comes from?" "Yes, sir; we borrows it ready parched from the next door neighbor."

It knocks all the love out of a man to have the music suddenly stop and every man in the ball-room hear ask his girl, "Can I hold you a little while when we get home?"

A homely girl with a small and pretty foot takes ten per cent. more comfort in this world than a pretty-faced girl who knows it is all day with her if she falls over a log.

During the past five years I have suffered from Catarrh and have used without relief remedies prescribed by various physicians. I was advised to try Ely's Cream Balm; am using it with beneficial results, and feel confident I shall be completely cured of a disease that has seriously affected not only my nostrils but also my eyes and hearing. W. A. Brintzinghoffer, Jr., Wholesale Tobacconist, Newark, N. J. May 29, 1879.

Ely's Cream Balm for the cure of Catarrh is having large sales with me. I think it the best article I have sold for the treatment of these diseases, and take great pleasure in recommending it to my patrons, as I am hearing the most favorable reports of its benficial effects. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.
For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.
I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, Catarrh, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.
My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence. Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.
The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.
I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.
I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston
Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, Jr.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.
Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.
Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

FAITH WHITCOMB.
"It Cured Mother."
Winchester, Mass., July 12, 1881.
My mother came very near dying from pneumonia last winter, and her lungs were left in a weak condition. Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has stopped the cough and has cured her dizziness. It is the only medicine that would help her. Yours truly. B F Holbrook.
A Boston Merchant's Testimonial.
No 27 Court street, Boston, March 13, 1881.
My daughter was prostrated with a terrible cough, after other remedies had failed, and my daughter had become so much worse that we were all completely discouraged, she commenced the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam and after using it less than one month she is well. Shall be glad to answer all enquiries. B A Clark.
Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

Mrs N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times reathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly rom a swelling or tumor which appeared upon er side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle he swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and ismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she ummoned her physician who inquired what she ad been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing ut Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, octor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is riving out the humor and will cure you." This curred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.

Mesmerism, alias Spiritualism.

NUMBER TWO.

Having apparently found out the origin of the above named science, we shall now, in a few lines, follow out its history down to the present time. It seems to have faded away and gone into obscurity after the fall of Adam; his sin left the world both a natural and a moral wilderness. It may have revived again in the days of the patriarch Jacob; for the organs of his mental vision seemed strong enough to pierce the blue canopy of heaven after he had fallen asleep. It could not, however, have been much practiced at that period of the world, for we read nothing more about it till we are told how Balaam operated upon the long eared animal on which he rode. After this we read no more about the science till we come to the time of the Judges. Then Jael, the wife of Heber, threw the captain of Jabin's army into such a state that she drove a nail into his forehead without disturbing his slumber. Had it been natural sleep would he not have been awakened at the first blow of her hammer? Samson seems to have been mesmerized several times after this by Delilah. The first king of Israel, Saul, when driven to desperation by his troubles, consulted the witch of Endor (who could mesmerize herself,) in regard to his future fate. We find nothing more on record in regard to this science for many years afterwards. The Greeks seemed to have obtained some knowledge of it, as it was practiced by them at some of their famous feasts—Bacchus, Panathena, Ceres, Eleusinia, and perhaps at some others. The time these feasts were practiced, any one, who will consult history, may ascertain. Was it not under the influence of this science that the Oracle of Trophonius in Bœotia, that, too, of Branchidæ, in the neighborhood of Miletus, and that, also, of Apollo at Delphos, the most famous of them all, were enabled to look into futurity, and reveal man's future destiny as they did those of Pyrrhus, Crœsus and Alexander?

After this a long night followed, for no traces of it can be discovered in history, either sacred or profane, until it burst out again in France about one hundred years ago, under the reign of Louis 16th. (Would the case of Constantine be regarded an exception, when in a vision he beheld the form of a cross emblazoned on the vault of heaven, and heard a voice saying, "By this conquer?") Under the reign of Louis, it was again brought up by the friends of science, and the king becoming interested, he appointed a committee, among whom was Franklin, then our envoy from the United States, to examine the subject. But the superstition of the people was raised, and the opposition raged to such a degree that it was dropped; and thus it lay, as it were, in a dormant state, till a few years ago, the waters of that flood began to decrease, and lo! the science burst forth again like a clear sun, after a shower of rain and hail; and its mountain tops are now seen, towering towards the sky.

One case, that of the Hon. Daniel Webster, which took place soon after death had cut the cord that bound him to earth, is to the point. He was consulted by one whose mind had been buried more than axle-deep in a belief of this science for some time, and an answer was returned. We saw the reply with our own eyes. True, the style of penmanship was not exactly his, nor were all the words spelt exactly right, and there may have been some "murdering of the king's English" in the grammatical structure of some of the sentences, but as the whole communication was written in great haste, these trifling matters can be all overlooked, and reliance be placed on the one who received it. Thus the science, winding through sombre clouds, has at last reached us in safety, like a gallant ship in a storm, that now scuds the mountain wave, then plunging, rolls in the trough of the sea,—like a giant contending with a succession of giants, "deep calling unto deep," till at last, having outrode the storm, it

"Walks the waters like a thing of life."

Who, for instance, could witness the performance, Saturday evening, Oct. 1st, of Miss Teanie, the "Wonderful Baby, assisted by three of the best Materialists in the world"—a table of four or five feet floating in mid-air—spirit-hands and faces plainly seen, and recognized by friends—without being thoroughly convinced of the truth of this science! Would it not evince great imbecility in any one to doubt it, whatever name it may bear? All efforts to put it down would be as futile as were those of Spinoza, the atheist of Amsterdam, against the Mosaic origin of the Pentateuch, or those of his less learned, though not less reckless, pupil, Robert Taylor, in his Diegesis to overthrow the whole Bible; and for the same reason, it is too late. No one who can feel the logical force of evidence, and has examined the case, can doubt that Moses wrote the Pentateuch, any more than he can that Zenophon wrote the Anabasis, or Cæsar the Commentaries, or Tacitus the Annals, or Horace the Satires. Just so is it in regard to the science of which we treat. Does not the evidence before us force us to believe that it has come to us from Adam as strong, and also as pure, as the tears of Rachel, which, some one has told us, Gabriel "put into the Urn of Heaven?" So let wit, and sophisty, and ridicule, do their worst, it will stand.

"Firm as the red moon on some stormy night,
When fugitive clouds swift hurrying by,
Leave only her unshaken in the sky."

J. P.

A woman at Bay City, Mich., disguised herself as a man and clerked in a store for a year, and then applied for membership in the Knights of Pythias and was initiated. It was during the work of the third degree that her sex was discovered. It seems that in the third degree they have an India rubber rat and a celluloid snake, which run by clock work inside, and which were very natural indeed. The idea is to let them run at the candidate for initiation to see if he will flinch. When the snake ran at the girl she kept her nerve all right, but when the rat tried to run up her trousers legs she grabbed her imaginary skirts in both hands and jumped onto a refrigerator that was standing near, which is used in the work of the fourth degree, and screamed bloody murder. The girl is a member of the order, however, and there is no help for it. The affair may open the eyes of members of secret societies and cause them to investigate. It is probable that quite a number of the Odd Fellows, Masons, Knights of Pythias, etc., are women, and no one will ever know it. One lodge here, we understand takes precaution against the admission of women, by examining carefully the feet of applicants. If the feet are cold enough to freeze ice cream the candidate is blackballed. The temperature of the feet is considered an infallible test.—Peck's Sun.

THE WAY WOMEN BOSS A PILLOW.—Among the recent inventions is a pillow-holder. It is explained that the pillow-holder is for the purpose of holding a pillow while the pillow-case is being put on. We trust this new invention will not come into general use, as there is no sight more beautiful to the eyes of man than to see a woman hold a pillow in her teeth while she gently manipulates the pillow case over it. We do not say a woman is beautiful with her mouth full of pillows. No one can accuse us of saying that; but there is something homelike and old-fashioned about it that cannot be replaced by any invention. We know that certain over-fastidious women have long clamored for some new method of putting on a pillow case, but these people have either lost their teeth, or the new ones they have bought do not grasp the situation. They have tried several new methods, such as blowing the pillow case up and getting the pillow in before the wind got out, and they have tried to get the pillow in by rolling up the pillow case until the bottom is reached, and then placing the pillow on end and gently unrolling the pillow case, but all these schemes have their drawbacks. The old style of chewing one end of a pillow and holding it the way a retrieving dog holds a duck, till the pillow case is on, and then spanking the pillow a couple of times on each side is the best, and it gives the woman's jaws about the only rest they get during the day. If any invention drives this old custom from us, and we no longer see the matrons of the land with their hair full of feathers and their mouths full of striped bedticking, we shall feel that one of the dearest of our institutions has been ruthlessly torn from us, and that the fabric of our national supremacy has received a sad blow, and that our liberties are in danger.—Washington Capital.

"PUT ON ANOTHER PLATE, MARY."—A good story is told of a couple of farmers who lived a few miles apart. One day one called on the other, happening around at dinner time. The person called upon, by the way, was a rather penurious old fellow. He was seated at the table enjoying his dinner. The visitor drew up to the stove, looking very wistfully towards the table, expecting the old farmer to invite him to dine. The old man kept on eating.

"What's the news over your way, neighbor?" (still eating) "No news, eh?"

"No, I believe not." Presently a thought struck the visitor. "Well, yes, friend, I did hear of one item of news worth mentioning."

"Ah! what is that?"

"Neighbor John has a cow that has five calves."

"Is that so? Good gracious! What in thunder does the fifth calf do when the others are sucking?"

"Stands and looks on just as I do, like a fool."

"Mary, put on another plate."

AN "EMANCIPATED" FEMALE.—At a N. Y. wedding on Murray Hill in one of the most aristocratic blocks, there were three attempts to walk off with valuables. One was by a young lady, pretty, of good family, and a belle in her circle. She had quietly thrown her handkerchief over a collarette of fine point-lace, and deftly slipped it into her pocket. But a gentlemanly young man in black was at hand, and he leniently gave her a chance by quietly touching her arm, while he turned back the lappel of his claw-hammer coat enough to show his police-badge. The young lady turned frightfully pale and almost fainted, but managed to obey his gesture, and return the lace without making a scene. Afterwards it was found she had been a guest at a number of houses where different articles of jewelry had been missed, and the matter becoming talked about, she was whisked off to Europe by her parents.

Essex ss. Probate Court.

To the Heirs-at-Law, next of Kin, and all other persons interested in the Estate of WASHINGTON SIMONDS, late of Peabody, in said county, inn-keeper, deceased:

GREETING:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for Probate, by Charles Simonds, who prays that letters of administration with the will annexed, may be issued to him, no executor being therein named. You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Salem, in said county of Essex, on the first Monday of December, next, at nine o'clock before noon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same. And said Charles Simonds is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Peabody Press, printed at Peabody, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE F. CHOATE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this third day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one. J. T. MAHONEY, nov 9—3w Register.

FOR SALE OR TO LET.

In Medford; just the spot for any kind of manufactory, only five miles from State street; about an acre and half of land, one minute's walk from the depot in the square, fronting on High street, 136 feet, with a depth to Mystic River of 320 feet, and a river front of over 500 feet, with a rise and fall of tide 10 or 12 feet. This estate was formerly used as a tan-yard and slaughter house; the buildings used for that purpose yet remain on the premises. For the original business the easement and rights in law are quite valuable, with perfect drainage into tide-water, thus avoiding a nuisance. Will be sold at a bargain or rented for a term of years at a low figure. For particulars call at the office of

A PROCLAMATION

FOR A DAY OF PUBLIC THANKSGIVING AND PRAISE.

Whereas, it is a good and ancient custom to set apart after the harvest a day for public thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God. Now, therefore, I, John D. Long, Governor, by and with the advice of the Council, appoint Thursday, the twenty-fourth day of November next.

Unto Thee, O God, do we give thanks. Thou visitest the earth and waterest it. Thou blessest the springing thereof. Thou crownest the year with thy goodness. The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing.

Blessed is he that considereth the poor.

Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest.

O Painter of the fruits and flowers
We own Thy wise design,
Whereby these human hands of ours
May share the work of Thine!

Apart from Thee we plant in vain
The root and sow the seed;
Thy early and Thy later rain,
Thy sun and dew we need.

Our toil is sweet with thankfulness,
Our burden is our boon;
The curse of earth's gray morning is
The blessing of its noon.

And still with reverent hands we cull
Thy gifts each year renewed;
The good is always beautiful—
The beautiful is good.

Given at the Council chamber in Boston, this twenty-ninth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixth.

JOHN D. LONG.

By His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Council.

Henry B. Peirce, Secretary.

God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The Town of Peabody.

The following were the remarks made by Mr. Amos Merrill at the tent, at the dedication of the Soldiers' Monument, in response to the toast, "The Town of Peabody." In responding to the toast, Mr. Merrill called attention to the attitude of the town of Danvers, of which the town of Peabody formed a part, previous to the Revolution, when the colonies, looking for a speedy rupture with the mother country, made a recommendation to the towns. The following vote, passed by the town January 9, 1775, will indicate both the anxiety of the colonies and the attitude of the towns: "Voted, to comply with the Provincial Recommendation and supply each man with an effective fire-arm, bayonet, pouch, knapsack, thirty rounds of cartridges and ball, and that they be disciplined three times a week, and that each man receive one shilling for each half day he was in service." When Col. Leslie landed at Marblehead, Feb. 26, 1775, and marched to North Bridge, in Salem, for the purpose of seizing some materials preparing for an artillery, but finding that he could not accomplish his object without meeting a resistance which would result in bloodshed, concluded to return; news having spread to this town, a company marched to the bridge just as the troops were leaving town, ready, if needed, to resist what was considered an unjustifiable invasion.

Two months later, April 19, 1775, when the alarm of war was sounded from the spot where the monument commemorating the event now stands, Capt. Gideon Foster, with more than one hundred men, started for Lexington, marching to Cambridge, sixteen miles, in four hours. There they encountered the enemy on its return, and in the desultory fighting which ensued seven men of Capt. Foster's company were killed—a greater loss of life than from any other town except the town of Lexington. At the battle of Bunker Hill Capt. Foster's company was engaged in transporting and delivering powder and balls, doing important and honorable duty. And in the subsequent period of the Revolution the citizens of Danvers did their full share of duty. The names of nearly two hundred are recorded who were engaged in active service.

While we can justly take great satisfaction in reviewing the attitude of the town in its earlier history in the Revolutionary period while we were a portion of the old town of Danvers, we can take just and honorable pride in its action during the time of the Great Rebellion. Surely no town in the Commonwealth was more truly loyal or more prompt to do its full duty, whether we regard its expression of sentiments of loyalty to the Union, the amount of money raised, or the number of men furnished for active service.—On the 21st day of May, 1861, a public meeting of citizens was called; great enthusiasm and earnestness prevailed. Money was raised, and a committee appointed for action. At a subsequent meeting held August 25, 1862, resolutions were adopted, of which the following is an extract: "Voted, That they will not measure their sense of duty by their legal obligations, nor pause to enquire whether they have done more or less than their neighbors." This extract will indicate the spirit which prevailed at all the public meetings, and which animated the committee of citizens appointed to raise money and promote enlistments. The sum of four thousand dollars was first raised for the purpose of aiding the families of enlisted soldiers. In July, 1862, $10,950 was raised by the town for payment of bounties; in August, 1862, $8,800; March 14, 1864, $1155; in July, $11,225; and in December, 1864, $1625 — making the sum of $33,755 raised by the town for payment of bounties. There was also raised by subscription for the same purpose the sum of $19,280, making a total of $57,035. Nor should we fail to record the valuable and efficient service of the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Society whose contribution of labor and materials in preparing and forwarding to the front articles needful both for those engaged in active service and for the sick and wounded in hospitals, rendered important aid and encouragement. But most of all, and more than all else, is the town to receive its chief honor from the number and character of its men, who in the hour of peril left home, family, friends, and all that was most valuable in life, save honor, to preserve and establish for themselves, for us, and for generations to come a nation of freemen where just and equitable law shall protect, and freedom, regulated by law, shall be the boon of every citizen.

Only those actively engaged in aiding and promoting recruiting in the early days and months of the Rebellion can realize the zeal with which citizens came forward to enlist; a zeal tempered with sadness, indicating the realization of the perils of war and a determination to meet the call of duty. It would be a somewhat difficult task to ascertain the number of men who entered service during the Rebellion from April, 1861, to April, 1865, as a considerable number of those who enlisted for three, nine and twelve months, afterwards enlisted for three years; and many others who enlisted for three years, after two years of service, were allowed to re-enlist. So that the actual number of different men will be much less than the number found by adding the number enlisted for the several terms of service. From April, 1861, to the time of the draft in July, 1863, there were enlisted for 100 days some 38; for 3 months, 42; for 6 months, 16; for 9 months, 88; for 3 years, 390; making in all a total of 574. Under the several calls for men, beginning with July, 1863, and ending with December 19, 1864, the town was required to furnish 298 men. The number credited under these calls was 303, and the final statement made in April, 1865, credited the town with a surplus of 5 men over all calls.

But in its earlier and its later record the town has proved itself loyal to liberty and to the national union. And having on the sixtieth anniversary of the battle of Lexington, erected a monument in memory of those who lost their lives in that engagement, it has now, in the erection of the beautiful monument this day dedicated, paid a fitting tribute to those who in the late Rebellion gave their lives that the nation might live.

Breare, and will continue the bookbinding business. This bindery has always enjoyed a first-class reputation for good work, and we know of none better able to sustain that reputation that Bro. Curtis.

LIFE AND WORK OF GARFIELD embracing an account of his struggles in childhood; his career as a soldier; his elevation to the presidency; his dastardly assasination. By John Clark Ridpath, LL.D. Published by Jones Bros. & Co., Cincinnati, Chicago, Philadelphia, Kansas City.

The preparation of this memorial volume was well and wisely committed to Prof. Ridpath. It may be truthfully said of Dr. Ridpath that he has "an elevated and pure discretion, sound and steady judgment; and, what is more, he has the skill and the practice of turning all this rich and varied knowledge to the best account." He stands in the front rank of living historians, and his contributions to standard literature are scholarly and finished. He cannot make an uninteresting book upon any subject. With Garfield for his theme, his pen has acquired a new inspiration and a degree of eloquence which clothes his periods in the most fascinating garb imaginable. And, although his first care is to find the truth and write it, his determination to make the record in every respect worthy of the subject will culminate in one of the most finished literary efforts ever arrayed in the garniture of print. It will embrace many chapters of history never before published; many points of biography never before investigated; and which for evermore shall speak to all the generations in words of living light from the "white radiance of eternity." This is the book that people of taste and judgment will buy in preference to the hastily prepared campaign "biographies" of Garfield with which the country is flooded. In a work like this, the American people want, and they are entitled to have, the best. From all the information we are able to obtain, we are convinced that this "Life and Work of Garfield" will meet their just expectations.

An amusing incident occured on the noon train on the Boston & Maine railroad Saturday. Soon after the train left Malden station, the conductor came through to collect the fares, as usual, but when nearly through the second car he was obliged to halt for a moment. A good-looking young lady, gaily dressed, refused to have her ticket punched unless he provided her with a seat. It was several minutes before he could comply with her wishes, but, stepping up to an elderly gentleman the conductor persuaded him to allow the lady to sit down, which the latter did with the exclamation: "There, you can punch the old ticket if you want to."—Lawrence American.

The original $2,500,000 invested by the late George Peabody in the best class of London tenement houses has grown to $3,600,000 by the regularity of payment of rent by the tenants, showing that the benefited people appreciate what has been done for them. The death rate in the Peabody tenements is 16.7 per thousand per annum, while in the surrounding district it is 35.

Poet's Corner.

The Isles of Long Ago.

O lovely isles so far away
In life's vast surging sea,
Around their slopes the sunbeams play
Their silent melody.
Above their heights the charming skies
Their lights and shadows throw,
As they again before me rise—
The isles of long ago.

O lovely isles so far away,
And clothed with green they stand,
No change or death can enter there
In that fair summer land.
Where happy birds in shady bowers,
Sing with the brooklets flow,
And myrtles deck, and fadeless flowers,
The isles of long ago.

I've sailed on the sea of life,
Far from their pearly strand,
But often through the din and strife
I see that sunbeam land.
The ocean surges 'round it there
With ceaseless ebb and flow,
So grand and pure and deathless fair—
The isles of long ago.

Time, when life's mighty tide moves on,
Stands ever at the helm,
To guide thro' quicksands and thro' storm
Safe to a higher realm.
There, standing on the hills of light,
To view the scenes below,
I'll see them with a clearer sight—
The isles of long ago.

Far from the ceaseless rush and roar
Of life's vast surging sea,
They stand in light forever more
In God's eternity.
There, in that blessed land of truth,
No death or change to know,
I'll walk again the ways of youth,
The isles of long ago.

The Bride.

BY JAMES T. FIELDS.

She stood like an angel just wandered from Heaven,
A pilgrim benighted away from the skies,
And little we deemed that to mortals were given
Such visions of beauty as came from her eyes.

She looked up and smiled on the many glad faces,
The friends of her childhood who stood by her side;
But she shone o'er them all, like a queen of the graces,
When blushing she whispered the vow of a bride.

We sang an old song, as with garlands we crowned her,
And each left a kiss on her delicate brow;
And we prayed that a blessing might ever surround her,
And the future of life be unclouded as now.

A Happy Thought.

BY "MARIE."

Just a little while we linger
In this weary world of pain,
Then we'll lay aside our burden,
And the glorious crown we'll gain.

Though our days seem dark and dreary,
And our hearts with sorrow break;
Humbly take the cross upon you,
Bear it gladly for His sake.

If the road be rough and thorny,
And the sky with clouds o'ercast,
Just beyond, lie fields of roses,
Sheltered from the stormy blast.

Let not earth's rude cares annoy thee,
Think of that bright land beyond,
Where the sighs of weary mortals
End in one eternal song.

Selected Story.

JANET'S CHOICE.

"Janet, darling, I wish you would smile more kindly upon Bertram Wyland and less upon Mr. March. Not but what I like the one quite as well as the other; but while Bertram is independently wealthy, and in the first society, no one knows much about Mr. March.'

The speaker is a motherly-looking lady whose genial smile contradicts the worldly spirits her words would seem to reveal. Her neice, whom she calls Janet, is sitting by the window, her bright head bent over the gay crewels that cover her lap. At her aunt's words she looks up, an expression of extreme surprise visible in her long-lashed, violet eyes.

"Why auntie, never before did I think you had a mercenary idea! Is it really you who are talking about wealth, and first society, and all that?'

A little flush rises to the elder lady's face, as she replies, deprecatingly, "I am not mercenary, Janet; but I want to see you settled well for you know that by the terms of your uncle's will I can make no bequests, and I have often thought, my darling, if I should die, what would become of you, brought up as you have been with every luxury; how could you breast the world alone?'

Janet's soft hand upon her lips checks her.

"Do not—do not talk of dying, auntie dear! Why, you are still a young woman; and never trouble yourself about me again, for I have youth and health, and I would not be ashamed to work should it be necessary for me to do so."

"But, Janet, you like Bertram, do you not?"

"Yes, aunty, I like him very much.'

And with this answer Mrs. Elmer was obliged to be content.

Ever since Janet Alcott and her aunt came to the watering-place in which our story opens, Janet had taken her position as the acknowledged belle of every gathering; but among the many adorers who have sighed at her shrine, two only of the number have elicited any response from her. They are Bertram Wyland—her aunt's favorite—and John March—the young man "no one knows.'

They are different in appearance as their names are in sound; but while Bertram is handsome—a very Adonis—and his graceful manners show the habitue of society, Mr. March is grave and thoughtful, but with a steadfast look in his brown eyes that suggests a more than ordinary character. To tell the truth, in her own mind Janet has not determined which of her two admirers she likes best, though—as her aunt has already suspected—the balance is already wavering in Mr. March's favor, when chance suddenly turns it the other way.

Of all things, Janet dearly loves heroism—a courage that would face undaunted any peril for a good cause—and something which her friend Agnes Fleming tells her soon after the conversation with her aunt which we have recorded, causes her delicate lips to curve with sudden scorn.

A child, while bathing in the surf, had ventured beyond her depth, and of two gentlemen who were standing within view, one only, Mr. Wyland, had rushed to her assistance; the other, Mr. March, turning and walking composedly back to the hotel, not even pausing to ascertain whether his comrade needed his assistance or not.

"I never would have believed it of him—never!" Janet cries.

"How serious you are over it, Janet," laughs Agnes. "I shall begin to think that you care for this Mr. March a good deal, or you'd certainly not take it so much to heart.'

But Janet did not respond to her badinage.

"I shall never respect him again," she said, vehemently. "Anyone who could act in such a cold-blooded way is not worthy of respect."

As Janet went back to the hotel, on her way she passed Mr. March, and caused that young man's heart to sink to zero by the cold hauteur of the nod which was all she vouchsafed him.

"Janet, Mr. Wyland was here this morning while you were out walking with Agnes," Mrs. Elmer said later, coming into her neice's room. "Can you not imagine what his errand was?"

Janet blushed, and her pretty head drooped a little.

So it has come at last—the time when she must decide whether she will take Bertram Wyland for her husband, or by rejecting him lose him out of her life entirely—even as a friend.

He has been a very agreeable companion, and she has enjoyed the hours spent in his society; then, too her kind aunt looks upon him with such favor.

But yet into Janet's mind comes a memory of a pair of earnest brown eyes, which have long told her silently, though eloquently, how dear he is to their owner. But she drives the thought away. John March can never be anything to her.

"He is coming to-morrow for his answer, dear," said her aunt's voice. "What is it to be?"

"Auntie," Janet said, "do you suppose Bertram thinks I am rich—that I am your heiress? Agnes tells me it is the general belief."

"Why, child, what difference does it possibly make to one so wealthy as he?"

When Mrs. Elmer leaves her neice it is a with a face beaming with gratification, for she imagines her pet plan is on the eve of its prosperity.

That evening, too restless to sleep, Janet steps out of her bedroom window upon the balcony, and seating herself by the railing, she leans her head upon her hand, and while her eyes wander over the moonlit sea, she gives herself up to the thoughts which crowd thickly into her mind, and of which the foremost is "shall I please my aunt by saying 'yes' to Bertram to-morrow? Do I care for him enough to marry him, or is it only as a friend his society is so pleasant to me?"

Suddenly the winds waft upward to her ears some words spoken in a voice she recognizes.

"Congratulate me, Rollins, old fellow; I've played my game almost to the winning point. To-morrow I have good reason to think the heiress will be mine—and it's lucky, for I've nearly got through all my money. Though, to tell the truth, I'm fortunate in more ways than one, for besides the additional attraction, the girl's a dear, tender-hearted little thing."

As Janet bends forward she sees, walking slowly along, their backs to the balcony, Bertram Wyland and an intimate friend. Her eyes have not deceived her—it is unmistakably he who has just spoken.

Every vestige of color leaves the girl's face as she re-enters the room. "Is there no truth in the world? Are all men either cowardly or mercenary?"

Hot tears rise to the young eyes as Janet kneels down to give thanks for the providence that has opened her eyes before her feet were allowed to wander into a path the termination of which would have been her life's wreck. She does not fall asleep at once, not until almost dawn does 'tired Nature's sweet restorer' visit her couch. Her eyes have been closed, it seems to her, but a very few moments, though it is in reality an hour, when she is suddenly awakened by a suffocating sensation and the appalling cry of 'Fire!'

Springing to her feet, with trembling hands she wraps herself in her dressing-robe, which is near upon a chair, and rushes to the door, and opens it only to be driven back by the volume of flame and smoke.

'Janet! where are you?' some one calls, and just as she is falling, terrified into unconsciousness by the dire peril which menaces her, a strong arm catches her. But the fire has gained such rapid headway that the halls are impassable, and darting to the window, John March raises it and calls for aid to the crowd below. A ladder is quickly brought, and he descends in safety and lays his precious burden in her aunt's arms.

The inmates of the burning building are speedily made comfortable in a neighboring hotel, and there, the following morning, Janet has two callers.

She is a trifle pale, but never has she looked so beautiful in Bertram Wyland's eyes as, in a few cold words she refuses his suit, and he realizes that she is lost to him forever. A few hours later Mr. March enters the room his rival has lately left.

He comes to bid Janet good-bye as he intends to leave for the city at noon.

He talks a while, and then rises to go.

'Good-bye, Miss Alcott,' he says, taking her hand and looking down upon her with a yearning expression on his strong noble face. 'I would like to think that though we may never meet again, you will give sometimes a friendly thought to me.'

A soft color flits over Janet's face as she answers, 'I shall never forget, Mr. March, that it is to you I owe my life.'

The touch of her warm, soft hand sent a thrill through all the young man's frame, and his resolution to go without bringing upon himself the pain of a refusal melted away.

'Janet,' he exclaimed, 'I meant to be silent but I can hide from you no longer that I love you! Sometimes I have dared to hope you cherished a feeling for me which time might deepen to something warmer, but of late you have been so cold my heart failed me.'

As she hears, and looks up into his earnest face, Janet feels that what she heard could never be—and without pausing to think she frankly tells him all. A glow of indignation overspreads his face as he exclaims, 'And that base act was laid at my door! Why, it was I myself who saved the child! Your informer has deceived you. Ah, how much harm a few words can do! So that is the explanation of your indifference? Janet,' coming closer to her side, and striving to read the expression of the sweet, averted face, 'you say that you owe to me your life. May I not have your life's love for my reward?

She draws herself a little away as she says, Before I give you your answer I want to tell you something. It is this: that I am not rich, as everyone seems to suppose, for my aunt could not will her property to me if she wished to do so. It is to go upon her death to—

A nephew of her husband's, whom she has never seen, and who she thinks is even now in his country home, puts in John. Am I not right? he says, answering Janet's look of surprise.

Yes. But how did you know?

As I am John March Elmer, that veritable nephew himself, I hardly see how I can help knowing. I came here three months ago, direct to your aunt's house, but found her gone; and upon inquiry, learning her destination, I immediately followed, thinking to amuse myself by making her acquaintance incognito. Now, cousin Janet, I am waiting for my answer.

When Mrs. Elmer learns the true state of affairs her feeling of relief at the disappointment of her own plan is almost too great to be put into words.

Janet has never regretted her choice, for in her husband's protecting love her days glide by in one sweet idyl of delight and content.

A True Story About Chanfrau.—Frank Chanfrau was playing in St. Louis in March last against Salvini. On Saturday the tragedian gave the usual matinee, but Chanfrau did not, so he went to see the great Italian play. Both companies were stopping at the same hotel, and at dinner were seated at adjoining tables. Mr. and Mrs. Chanfrau were sitting together, while opposite them, at the next table sat Salvini and Chizzola. Salvini did not speak a word of English, and when anyone addressed him in that tongue, Chizzola interpreted.

When Chanfrau entered the dining-room he bowed to Salvini. As he sat down, Henrietta said:

"Say something to him, Frank."

"How can I? He don't understand English."

"Well," replied his wife, "Chizzola will tell him."

"What shall I say?"

"Tell him you saw him play to-day."

"I saw you this afternoon," shouted Chanfrau across the table. Chizzola interpreted and Salvini smiled.

"Delighted," suggested Henrietta.

"Delighted," repeated Chanfrau.

"Charmed with the performance," bawled the comedian.

"Think it your best part," murmured Mrs. Chanfrau.

"Think it your best part," vociferated Mr. Chanfrau.

By this time the members of the two companies were almost choking with suppressed laughter. In the meantime Mr. Chanfrau had begun to drink his soup, and some of it was dripping down his chin.

"Hope I shall see you again," whispered his wife.

"Hope I shall see you again," repeated the husband.

Just then Henrietta saw the soup that was leaking out, and whispered,

"Wipe off your chin."

"Wipe off your chin," shouted Chanfrau at Salvini.

Just then there was a howl of laughter, and the subsequent proceedings can be imagined better than described.

When Mrs. Chanfrau told this story of her liege at Long Branch, a few evenings ago, he rose up from the hammock where he was reposing, and said;

"Don't you ever make me so ridiculous again. The next time, if I don't know my part, I'll gag it."

Will Wonders Ever Cease?—Mr. John G. Fledderman, the well-known Merchant Tailor, in Union Block, writes: "I was a sufferer for many years with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, and found no relief until I tried St. Jacobs Oil. After using two bottles I was entirely cured."—Fort Wayne, (Ind.) Sentinel.

Analogical deduction by the Boston Post: "The Atlantic Constitution paragraphs the fact that more pretty girls atiended the exposition last Wednesday than on any previous day. In another column it states that Dr. Loring delivered the principal address on Wednesday.—Enough said."

On the sleeper of an L. E. and W. train recently, a traveler noticed an old, white-bearded man trying to get into a linen duster. The young and spry traveler rushed to his assistance, and in helping him with his garment noticed a good-sized whiskey flask protruding from one of the inside pockets of his coat. Being of a waggish nature, he appropriated the bottle, got the coat on the stranger, and then pulling out a flask, said:

"Will you take a drink?"

The old man did not recognize the bottle, and drawing himself up remarked, rather severely:—

"No, sir; I never drink."

"It won't hurt you," insisted the wag, "It's the best."

"Young man," said the old gentleman, intended for all in the car to hear, "if you persist in drinking whiskey you will be a ruined man at forty. It is the curse of the land. When I was a boy my mother died and the last thing she did was to call me to her bedside, and say:—'John, swear to me that you will never touch a drop of liquor—'"

Here the old man clapped his hand on his side pocket, found it empty, and recognizing the bottle in the hands of the other, he continued:—

"'Except, my dear boy, an occasional snifter while traveling.'"

And reaching for the flask he pressed it to his lips, amid a howl of laughter which shook the whole car.

A growling old bachelor correspondent says some one should be stationed at the doors of theatres this season, whose business it shall be to arrange all the women who enter, according to the size of the satanic things they wear on their heads in the shape of hats, putting the owners of the broadest brims and tallest crowns in the rear seats. The ill tempered old fellow says he has had a "crick" in his neck ever since the last performance at the opera house, where he spent the entire evening trying to circumnavigate a fat woman, wearing a Gainsborough hat surmounted by three perpendicular plumes, and a tall skinny female who affected a Rubens with the same number of feathers depending from a brim wide enough for a race course. He says the only party he has been able to get a view of on the stage this season is Ben McAuley, who must be pretty nearly seven feet high.

A Lady in the Matter. — That "woman's wit is often superior to man's wisdom," was convincingly proved in a circumstance that occurred in this city recently. It appears that Mr. Ludwick Schwarzler, a widely known grocer on Station Road, suffered with a very painful rheumatic headache to such a degree, that he was obliged to seek the aid of a physician. All medicines he used were of no avail. This induced Mrs. Schwarzler to buy St. Jacobs Oil. She procured a bottle for her husband. With the second application he found relief. The pain left him, and he is as well as ever again. A remedy acting as promptly as this certainly deserves universal patronage.—Chillicothe, (O.) Ross County Register.

The Hour says very truly that there are hundreds of small traders who are perfectly good, but who cannot get accommodation at the banks. How much better it is to lend a thousand dollars to fifty men, who are certain to repay it, than fifty thousand to one man who may or may not return it. But then it makes more work, don't you see, for the bank to let out a given amount in small sums.—Newburyport Germ.

Frank Brakeslee, a young lawyer from Clinton County has received a pardon under the three-fourths rule. He has been serving out a sentence for burglary. He will return to Clinton County and resume the practice of his profession, in which we wish him success.—Jefferson City (Mo.) Tribune.

In which "profession" do you wish him success—law or burglary? Or is there no difference between the two.

A Western patron of the drama recently became deeply interested in "Romeo and Juliet," and was much affected by the death of "Murcutio;" but when "Paris," "Tybalt," "Romeo," and "Juliet," successively passed in their checks, he could bear the strain no longer, and rising in his seat, he shouted to the audience: "They're all dead; we'd better go home!"

Two Irishmen were poring over the news in one of our city papers, and coming to the heading "Latest," and immediately following it "Very Latest," one said to the other, "An' sure, Tim, will ye be afther explainin' what this means?" "Arrah, bedad," said Tim, "an' it's meself that can explain that to ye. Sure the latest is what comes in time to be printed, and the very latest is what comes after the paper is out."

"Hadn't you better close that window, it makes a draught directly upon your mother-in-law?" "I know it," was the response. It was in a French railway carriage. The friend meant well enough, but did not stop to think. —Foreign Exchange.

Anecdotes.

A BITER BITTEN.

The following incident, says an English paper, took place in January, 1782. One day a poor man was stopped on Peckham Common by five footpads, who, having searched all his pockets to find money, and getting none, set him at liberty. One of the villains, however, perceiving the man to wear a better coat than he, persuaded the gang to follow and strip him. On which they pursued; but hearing their discourse, he made the best of his way from them, but was overtaken, and his coat exchanged for a gibbet of rags. He was then set at liberty again, and got about two hundred or three hundred yards distance, when he heard them in full pursuit of him again, and considering that he had nothing then to lose but his life, he took to his heels and ran with such speed that he got to a neighboring house before his pursuers, and the door being fortunately open, though at a late hour, he got in, but instantly swooned away. In this faint he remained for some time, but by propor assistance recovered. And having told his disaster, his bargain was first reviewed outside, which was a motley figure, but in searching the pockets two silk handkerchiefs were found, one of which contained nine guineas, which being the night's booty of the footpads, is supposed to have hastened their pursuit, and not a desire to murder the man, which he, with a great degree of reason, dreaded.

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

In a book published at Berlin, under the title of "Schultze and Muller in London," is the following passage: "At a quarter to six we went to the great post office. The squeeze was tremendous round the newspaper box, where the newspapers are thrust in bales; and it is, indeed, on a grand scale, since the Times alone has 70,000 subscribers. I warned Schultze not to go so near the crush, but he did not hear me. As he was standing there, there came a great shock of newspaper boys running with bales of newspapers, and throwing them in at the window. A bale of newspapers hit Schultze on the head; he loses his balance and tips head forward into the bureau; half a dozen officials immediately seize him, stamp him in the stomach, and the unhappy Schultze is dispatched in an unpaid newspacket to the provinces. At this moment the box is closed with a snap. I rush against it and cry, 'Schultze! Schultze!' But it is too late; your unhappy son-in-law was already packed in the postcart. I ran into the bureau of the postmaster, and demanded back your son-in-law.

"Is your friend addressed?' he asks.

"'No,' I answered.

"'Very well,' says the Englishman, 'M. Schultze will remain for six months in the bureau, and if no one applies for him, he will be burned as a dead letter.'"

A SHARP ELECTIONEERING DODGE.

A certain candidate, some years ago, in England, stood for a town which is not more celebrated for its electoral purity than for the extent of its woollen manufactures. The candidate began operations by buying up the stock that was ready for the market, intimating that he should want as much once a month for exportation. This was splendid—£20,000 a month, and the London market untouched. Such a member would be invaluable to the town, and he was accordingly elected. So soon as he had thanked the constituency, and with tears in his eyes assured them that the honest, manly struggle they had made to rescue their town from the domination of the vile Radicals should never be effaced from his memory, he started off for town, and sold off all his woollens at an abatement of two and a half per cent. on the cost price, thus securing his seat at the moderate price of £500, and forestalling the market against his constituency for a month to come. The latter were furious, and pretty plainly hinted that if the man of their unbought choice ever again showed his nose within the limits of their borough, his head would be made familiar with the solidity of their brickbats.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

One Monday morning (says a Paris correspondent) a clerk applied to his superior for permission to be absent forty-eight hours on some family affairs, and received an affirmative answer. However, he did not appear during the whole of the week, and no one knew to what cause to attribute his absence. On the following Monday he reappeared at the regular hour.

"Well, monsieur," demanded his superior, "why have you stayed away all the week?"

"You, sir," said the clerk, "gave me permission."

"I gave you leave for forty-eight hours only, and not for six days."

"I beg your pardon, sir," answered the young man, "I have only taken the exact time which you granted me. We work here eight hours a day, and six times eight are forty-eight. I certainly had no occasion to ask your permission for the night, any more than for the hours which I do not owe to the administration."

This was logical; but since that day the chief specifies by administrative hours the duration of the leave he grants.

A WEDDING IN WYOMING.

Camping near the town we secured our stock and then went in. Entering the leading store, I introduced myself to Mr. Stiles, one of the proprietors and the Postmaster.

"It's now half-past two, and at three there's to be a wedding down the street at Jonas Burton's. Old Jonas is a rough old coon that we elected Justice of the Peace about a month ago, and, as this will be his first attempt at a marriage, I think we will see some fun. Come and go down with me."

We went to the old Squire's cabin. We found him poring over a large volume of the statutes of Wyoming, sweating like a horse and looking terribly anxious. After greeting us, he said:

"Stiles, the durned galoots that got up these yer laws hadn't gumption enough to last 'em over night. I've run through the blamed book a half a dozen times, an' can't find a dod blasted word about matermony, or how the hitchin' process is proceeded with. I've just got ter put the clamps on this couple hit or miss, an' ef I don't yoke 'em up legal I can't help it."

"Oh," said Stiles, "just do the best you can. Any kind of a ceremony will do in this country, for people 'll never question the legality of the thing. I'll post you as well as I can."

Stiles then explained to him about how he should proceed, and the old man finally thought he could worry through in tolerable shape. Ere long the couple appeared, followed by a crowd of the citizens of the camp. The candidates stood up before the Squire, who began:

"Feller citizens, this 'yar man an' this 'yar woman have appeared before the court to be hitched in the legal bands of wedlock. If any galoot in the mob knows of anything that mout block the game of tuk to a higher court let him now toot his bazoo, or else keep his jaw to himself now and forevermore. All in favor o' me perceedin' as orthorized by the law, say 'I.'"

Everybody said "I."

"Contary, "no."

Nobody said "no."

"The motion's carried unanimously, an' the Court rules that thar hain't nothin' to pervent the tryin' of the case. Grip yer fins."

The candidates joined hands. "Amos Peabody, do you solemnly sw'ar that ye'll freeze to 'Mandy furever an' ever? That ye'll love 'er, an' pervide fur 'er, an' treat 'er squar' an' white, accordin' to the rules an' regulations sot down to govern sich cases in the laws o' the United States, so help yer God?"

"Yaas, sir; I do, sir."

"That fixes your end of the bargain. 'Mandy Thomas, do you solemnly sw'ar that ye'll hang on to Amos Peabody for all comin' time, that ye'll nuss him in sickness an' be squar' to him in wellness, that ye'll always be to him a good, true, honest, upan'-up wife under the penalties prescribed by the laws for the punishment of sich offenses; do you sw'ar this, so help her God?"

"I sw'ar I will."

"Then by the power vested in me as Justice o' the Peace in an' fur this precinct, I pronounce you, Amos Peabody, husband, an' you, 'Mandy Thomas, wife, an' legalize you to remain as sich now an' furevermore, an' ye'll stand committed till the fees an' costs in the case be paid in full, an' may God have mercy on your soul an' bless this union with his heftiest blessin's."

The fees and costs were adjusted, and, after receiving the congratulations of the assembly, the newly-made husband and wife departed for their cabin up the creek. —Oil City Derrick.

HOME EDUCATION.

The following rules are worthy of being printed in letters of gold, and placed in a conspicuous place in every household.

1. From our children's earliest infancy inculcate the necessity of instant obedience.
2. Unite firmness with gentleness. Let your children always understand that you mean what you say.
3. Never promise them anything, unless you are quite sure you can give what you say.
4. If you tell a child to do something, show him how to do it and see that it is done.
5. Always punish your child for willfully disobeying you, but never punish him in anger.
6. Never let them know that they vex you, or make you lose your self-command.
7. If they give way to petulance or ill-temper wait till they are calm, then gently reason with them on the impropriety of their conduct.
8. Remember that a little present punishment, when the occasion arises, is much more effectual than the threatening of a greater punishment should the fault be renewed.
9. Never give your children anything because they cry for it.
10. On no account allow them to do at one time what you have forbidden under the same circumstances, at another.
11. Teach them that the only sure and easy way to appear good is to be good.
12. Accustom them to make their little recitals with perfect truth.
13. Never allow tale bearing.
14. Teach them self-denial, not self-indulgence.

All evil is so much death or nonentity.—Emerson.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
Having gained an enviable local reputation, displacing all other preparations in the vicinity of discovery, is, on its merits alone, recognized as a wonderful remedy. A fair trial will convince the most skeptical of its curative powers. It effectually cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head and snuffles it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

Thanksgiving.

To-morrow, in accordance with the proclamation of President Arthur and Gov. Long, occurs the annual observance of our ancient and time-honored festival of Thanksgiving. It is peculiarly and characteristically a New England institution—looked forward to by all the children in their visions of plum pudding, mince pies and roast turkey, and by the older people in their remembrances of the enjoyments afforded them and their household.

Our nation has abundant cause for thankfulness at this hour; a beloved chief magistrate has been taken from us by the bullet of an assassin, a blow which in any other country than this would have caused commotion, strife, and possibly war. We are to remember the calmness with which the whole people were possessed during the long struggle between life and death, and that the change in the head of the government has brought no disaster to the nation. It is a source of thankfulness to live in a land like this. Our credit has not been impaired at home or abroad. And we can rejoice, also, in that the man who has been so providentially called to be the ruler of this nation is proving himself worthy of the high office in which he has been placed. Our nation and state can also rejoice at the continued business prosperity which has extended into all our manufacturing districts and marts of trade. Failures are becoming less frequent and less extensive, and with rare exceptions there is not a line of commercial enterprise that has not felt an increased prosperity. The evidences of this are not wanting in this town, which is but one of the many in this vicinity. Not a vacant store can be hired in Peabody and when there is a prospect of new blocks being erected applications are received for rental even before the ground is broken. We should not overlook these things and they furnish abundant ground for returning hearty thanks. With the improvement in manufacturing industries comes also the employment of labor, and where but few years ago hundreds of men were idle and unable to obtain employment, such cases are now the exception and not the rule.

We can also give thanks for the day and the occasion. In nearly all homes the Thanksgiving dinner table is the time of family reunion. Brothers and sisters, parents and children who have been separated during the year are wont then to gather to recount their experiences and share each other's joys and sorrows. It is this, more than anything else, that has endeared the day to the hearts of New England people. The religious observances of our fathers in the sanctuary are still maintained in a measure, but many pews are empty. It is at the home that the seats are full, and the fires around the family altars burn with increased and unwonted brilliancy.

It should be remembered, also, that these pleasant and joyful memories do not come for all. There are those in our large cities and towns whose associations take them from the home circle, which perhaps may have been broken by death. To such come recollections of former occasions and similar re-unions, and the day is to them one of gloom and sorrow. In the midst of our rejoicing let our sympathies be extended to such. It is in recognition of this feeling that in the city of Boston and other places a table is spread by the members of the Christian Association and Union, where members who are debarred from any cause from these family reunions can enjoy the nearest approach to it which they are enabled to give. This is surely a labor of love. And let us not forget the poor who are unable to share the festal occasion.—Make the day, if possible, one of enjoyment to them. Then will our own home be one of blessing and peace.

The Absorbing theme in commercial circles during the past week has been the embarrassment of two of our Boston national banks, the Pacific and the Central. The failure of a bank is a public calamity, and its influence is not limited within certain circles as is the suspension of a merchant, however extensive may he his business. It is fortunate for the country that such occurrences are very rare, and the exceptions only call closer attention to the care with which they are, in the main, managed. The Central Bank was only temporarily under the weather, but it is probable that a long time will elapse before the affairs of the Pacific can be satisfactorily adjusted. It is a cause for congratulation, at this time, that the loss of the bank was not from the usual financial irregularity, nor from embezzlement of any sort; not even from the banking system which is so roundly abused by our political opponents, but simply and only from bad banking and management on the part of the President of the Pacific bank.—Mr. Weeks, the man who so largely involved the bank, is a large stock speculator. A number of years ago he became involved in a similar manner through a great fall in Hartford & Erie stock, of which he held large blocks.—This time he has been specially prominent in his manipulation of Eastern R. R. and Silver Islet Mining stock, and it was owing to the fact principally that the Pacific bank loaned him money from day to day to carry on these speculations that the crash came. It is none too soon for the warning. Coming close on to the failure in Lynn of Mr. Shaw, coupled with the disgrace of a New York cashier in appropriating $30,000 of the money of the banking institution in which he was employed, to pay his losses at the faro bank, it ought to call attention to the growing evil of gambling in stocks. This one man, the heaviest operator in Boston, was able not only to embarrass the Pacific bank, but to cause a fall in Eastern R. R. from 48 to 37, and in Silver Islet from 40 to 25, to cause money in New York to command a premium of 1-32 and 1-16, and to give occasion for a wholesale bear raid on Wall street.

In regard to the Central Bank, it appears that the cashier, Mr. Young, very injudiciously, and without the consent and knowledge of the President or directors, loaned money to Mr. Benyon of the Pacific bank. As soon as it was discovered steps were taken to protect the bank, and after only closing its doors for a few hours on Saturday, was enabled on Monday to resume business. The President of the bank is Mr. C. J. Bishop, of the well-known leather house of C. J. Bishop & Co., and is well and favorably known in this vicinity. Mr. Young, the cashier, has been advised that his resignation would be accepted, and there will be no further trouble. We call attention to an extract which was written by a leading broker in New York to his Boston correspondent and which should be remembered by those who are always ready to be croakers over any calamity:

"Every effort is made," he says, "in certain quarters, to destroy faith in all banks because, out of 6000 in the whole country, one in N. Jersey and another in Massachusetts have failed! It is as reasonable as it would be to say that the nation is bankrupt because some unsuccessful speculators and spendthrifts are insolvent. It is the rule that banks are safely managed, and the rare exception that they are not. Every year bank management becomes more and more able. Since the inauguration of the national bank system about eighteen years ago more than $530,000,000 have been invested in their capital. In all these years, and of this enormous sum, banks representing less than $20,000,000 capital have become insolvent, holders of their circulation have not lost one penny, while most all of them have ultimately paid their debts. In New York City five national banks with $2,700,000 capital have failed, but all paid creditors in full, except the Croton, which failed in 1867, with a capital of $200,000, and finally paid its creditors 88 1-2 per cent."

The Boston Globe, in referring to the responsibility of the Republican party of Massachusetts for whatever of prohibitory legislation we have had in this state, says:

The Republicans have had a majority in the Legislature for twenty years, and the governors during that time, with one exception, were of the same political faith. Is not a party that elects two-thirds of the lawmakers and the executive responsible for the legislation which is enacted under such circumstances! If not, who is?

"Let us keep to facts irrespective of party lines."

Messrs. Almy, Bigelow & Webber have made a new departure this season in arranging for their holiday trade. The space on their regular floor being occupied by a seasonable assortment of regular goods, and their trade on them being unusually large, they have utilized their basement by newly fitting it up as a holiday bazar. Most of our readers who have had the usual experience in selecting gifts for the holidays know the difficulty they often encounter in making suitable selections. This firm have in mind the obviating of this difficulty, and by purchasing a very large and elegant assortment, have placed them on sale at this early date, in a space exclusively their own, and where their many customers can use their own time and pleasure in looking over the choice articles which they have procured for them. Everything in the room looks new, in fact, they were just opened, and they cannot fail to be an additional attraction towards this store. Some of the very choice handkerchief boxes and mantel ornaments, richly embroidered with satin and plush are made by a New York firm, who give this firm the exclusive sale east of Boston. Of these goods they have a large assortment, and they have added a line of illustrated and other books for children and also grown people, which they are selling at the lowest New York prices. For instance, a finely published edition of Macauley's works, 5 vols., for only $1.90. Think of it. Albums, fancy note papers, Christmas cards—everything in the way of fancy articles, are displayed in the most tempting manner by the young ladies in charge. The room, only opened this morning, and piled up in one corner with goods yet to be displayed, was the center of attraction, and we predict for the firm a large and successful holiday trade, which their enterprise justly merits.

For fear the Essex Statesman should accuse us of belonging to the league for the suppression of all intelligence concerning the Greenback vote of the country, we will take special pains to state that in Ipswich, on Tuesday, election day, at what hour is unknown, but some time between 9 o'clock, A. M and 4.30 o'clock P. M., there was carried to the polls a ballot, upon which was inscribed the name of Israel W Andrews, of Danvers, a candidate for Governor, together with the names of other candidates of lesser weight than his. This ballot was evidently sent out from the office of some enterprising printer, as it contained upon its reverse a schedule of prices. So far as is known this is the only ballot bearing the name of Israel W. Andrews as candidate for Governor that has ever been within the town limits of Ipswich. Thus we have done our duty at the risk of encouraging and assisting that party which all the newspapers of the country have united to exterminate by the suppression of all intelligence concerning its doings.—Ipswich Chronicle.

Our neighbor evades the point of our remarks, in regard to Mr. Ham, by a mere quibble. We don't care whether the member who visited our neighbor "claimed that he spoke for the Board," or not. Neither has the intention of the Committee to keep the matter silent anything to do with it. Our neighbor admits there was a consideration. If we are wrong in stating it, why don't he give it? We have not misrepresented anything. Not only one, but two members of the Board requested the Reporter not to publish that item, and our neighbor agreed with one of them, in the presence of both, that it should not appear. We know whereof we speak, and we are not to be driven from our position by the evasions and quibbles of that paper.

The first lecture of the Peabody Institute course was given on Tuesday evening by Hon. Wm. Parsons on the subject, "The Mediterranean Sea and its memories." Mr. Parsons handled his subject in a very able manner and kept his audience in good humor during the evening.—Salem Register.

Really! This is news to us. Wonder if it came from some of the Salem people, who were present, according to another Salem paper, in large numbers. The ease with which items from this town are manufactured by all the Salem papers would be amusing if it were not so ridiculous.

Our neighbor devotes a long article in his sheet to abuse of Capt. Fentress. We think the letter at the close of the article is about as good a reply as is needed to the heterogeneous remarks in the first of it, and reminds us of the boy setting up a row of bricks and then knocking them down. The insinuations intended to reflect on this paper are, in the words of Capt. Fentress, simply a lie. The Encyclopedia can only be purchased in one place in Boston, at less than the published rates, and we explained last week how that happened. As to the rest of the article applying to Capt. Fentress, we judge that gentleman is capable, abundantly, of defending himself, and no doubt our neighbor and the "respectable townsman who holds an honorable position" will hear from him speedily.

The Stock Company of the Boston Museum has been the delight of all theatre goers who wish to see a play thoroughly, faithfully and conscientiously acted. Some members have been of the Company for nearly half a century, and a visit to this cosy theatre is like a welcome of old friends. It was never stronger than during the present season. To be able with the singing portion of the Company to produce throughout the country such an opera as "Patience," and at the same time have a comedy company at home capable of bringing out "The Colonel," as the Museum only can produce it, is a triumph of which any theatre may be proud. Yet such is the versatility of the actors and actresses under the management of Mr. Field. After a successful tour through New England, Gilbert & Sullivan's opera of "Patience" was reproduced last Monday evening at the Museum. It may well be called the ideal performance. The cast included the members who had originally performed it, except that Miss Rose Stella had been specially engaged, and Miss Amy Ames took the part of Lady Jane. The chorus and orchestra, under the skillful baton of Mr. John J. Braham, had been largely augmented, and every thing moved like clock-work. Miss Sadie Martinot, one of the best soubrette actresses in the country, appears as Lady Angela, who leads the chorus of rapturous maidens. She was at her best, and by the refinement and studious care with which every line of her part was worded, did much toward the success of the opera. We can see how this opera in the hands of an inexperienced company would meet with ill success, but in the Boston Museum every detail is carefully provided for, the scenery and costumes are surpassingly beautiful, and the singing of both principals and chorus was nearly perfection. Mr. Wilson had a part well suited to his abilities in "Buntborne," and was recalled again and again in the rendition of his lines. The slight French accent of Miss Rose Stella in her part of "Patience" only added to the charm of her performance, and she has proved a valuable acquisition to the performance of the opera. It will be given all the week and until further notice, with an extra matinee to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon. We advise all our readers to see the Museum performance of "Patience." Nothing since the introduction of Pinafore has proved so enjoyable. It is "par excellence" the opera of the season.

C. H. Goulding has on exhibition at his Furniture Ware Rooms, Walnut St., the Black Walnut Chamber Set, Hair Cloth Parlor Suite, Ladies' Patent Rocker in Silk and Plush, Gents' Patent Reclining Chair, Dinner Set 159 pieces, Extension Table, Spring Bed, Domestic Sewing Machine and 30 yards Lowell Superior Carpet, to be given as prizes at the Volunteer Fair.

Love may be blind, as they say, but we notice that in all the records of the ages it has never kissed the would-be mother-in-law by mistake when reaching after the girl.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

We learn that Mr. S. F. Blaney has purchased the estate of Mr. Alfred F. Wieer on Main street, and that the Esex Club contemplate erecting thereon a wooden building, three stories high 40 feet front and 55 feet deep. The lower part will be divided into two stores, and applications were received for their rental as soon as it was known that they purposed building on the estate. A fine block on this site will be a great improvement, in a business way, to the street. We are glad to see the enterprise manifested by the proposed builders. Several blocks like this would be taken readily by our own and other merchants, and much of the business that now goes out of town would be kept at home. The second story is, we understand, to be elaborately fitted up as a Club Room, and the third story utilized as a hall. Work will be immediately commenced on the building, and hastened to its completion.

The concert by the "Litta" troupe announced for Saturday evening, was unavoidably postponed by the illness of the fair star, at Haverhill. Their non-appearance here should be a matter of regret. It is not often that an entertainment of the class given by this troupe, is seen or heard in Peabody.—She sings in Boston and in the leading cities in that vicinity this week. It is announced by Manager Hooper that arrangements will be made, if possible, for her to appear here. If by any fortunate coincidence the people of this town are so favored, we trust they will avail themselves of the opportunity.—The only way we can expect first-class companies, such as usually skip a place of the size of Peabody, to come here, is to show by our attendance, that we can appreciate a fine concert when it is given. The fact thus far needs demonstrating. Let us prove it.

The trustees of the Essex County Agricultural Society held their November meeting at Salem, Friday of last week, to close up the business relative to the recent fair in Haverhill; and also to make arrangements for the Farmers' Institutes to be held this winter. The first one occurs at Peabody, Wednesday, Dec. 7. At the forenoon session, Rev. O. S. Butler of Georgetown, will read an essay on "Farmers' Institutes; their object and the best method of conducting them." In the afternoon, there will be a discussion on the "Cultivation of the Potato."

A benefit entertainment was tendered Miss Minnie A. Smith the popular Soprano at St. John's Church of this town, at Plummer Hall, Salem, last Friday evening. A large number of her friends from this town attended, and the Concert was a decided success. Miss Smith acquitted herself with great credit, as was to be expected, the playing of Mr. J. J. Carew was very fine, and the evening's entertainment closed with the farce Box and Cox.

We learn that there are a number of towns in the state where the law requiring every town of over 1500 inhabitants to have an inspector of kerosene, is ignored. It is the opinion of some lawyers that if a fire should occur from the use of kerosene, the sale of which was forbidden, such towns would be liable for damages resulting therefrom to private property. Who is the inspector for Peabody?

Why isn't the drinking fountain near the flagstaff put in working order? For a number of weeks it has been dry, thus depriving man and beast of a good square drink of sparkling water. That fountain has been a great accommodation to the public, and we would like to see it in good working order again.

The match race for $100 between the horses of Mr. H. K. Pevear and Mr. Geo. W. Bancroft came off as advertised last Thursday, at the Danvers Trotting Park. A large number witnessed the race, which resulted in Mr. Bancroft winning, the fastest time being made in the second heat, 2 m. 56 s.

The Peabody Temperance Union hold meetings every Saturday evening in Temperance Hall, at which musical and literary entertainments are provided. Mr. Geo. E. Lewis has been chosen a member of the Executive Committee in place of Geo. Randall, resigned.

The great New England Festival is near at hand—Thanksgiving, with all its luxuries, turkey, fowl, roast beef, eggs, cranberries, grapes, mince pies, new cider, and nightmare. Be generous to your poor neighbor so much, that he may enjoy the latter.

Mrs. Carlilse Ireland, Boston's celebrated test medium will occupy the platform at Ashland Hall, Sunday afternoon and evening at 2 1-2 and 7 1-2 o'clock.

Work on the new Essex Club Block has commenced. That's business.

All kinds of Ladies' Fur Trimmings at the Shawmut, 191 and 193 Essex street.—Adv.

Prof. J. Jay Watson's Entertainment Co. gave a Concert in the Peabody Institute, on Thursday evening, under the auspices of Post 50 G. A. R. A small audience was present, much more so than the excellence of the entertainment deserved. The Watson family were the principal artists, the other performers being evidently to fill up the bill. Prof. Watson is a remarkable performer on the violin "presented by his friend, Ole Bull." Miss Annie Watson showed exceptional ability in piano accompaniments by the brilliancy of her execution and powerful touch, and Master Watson gives promise in the future of being equally skillful as a musician. The only pieces other than those executed by the Watson family, that deserve notice were an interpolated duet by Miss Phillips and Mr. Lee, an arrangement of Ascher's "Alice," which was one of the gems of the evening, and the recitation by Mr. C. H. Webber, of the Salem Post, in imitation of Gus Williams, of a parody on Barbara Frietchie, and the Water Mill. The audience was very enthusiastic, and honored the artists with frequent encores.

Now-a-day's everybody must carry a pistol or revolver, and to many it is as common a companion as the pocket knife. The morbid desire to possess firearms finds early expression in the purchase by small boys of toy pistols, about which so much has been said and which already has a large roll of victims. The law against carrying concealed weapons should be enforced rigidly against its violators. Last Thursday, a lad named Williams was kicking foot ball on Lowell street, and had in the breast pocket of his jacket a common pistol, which was loaded. During the game he had looked in his pocket from time to time at his pistol, when he discovered that the hammer was up and the pistol "cocked" with the muzzle pointing upward. With great care he removed it and prevented a serious, perhaps fatal, accident, for had he continued his play there is no knowing what might have been the result.

After the close of the regular session of Holten Lodge, I. O. O. F., last evening, a very pleasant entertainment was given. Members of the order generally and their ladies and invited friends were present. The programme included duets of the piano and organ by Mrs. A. H. Taylor and Mr. Waldo Hutchings of Salem. Readings by Miss Hinckley of Boston, Bass Solos by Mr. Fisher (colored) of Boston, and Character Songs and Specialties by Mr. Newhall of Salem. The entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed and reflects credit on Brother William Smith who had the matter in charge.

Rev. E. C. Bolles of Salem, delivered the second lecture in the Peabody Institute course last evening, to a large house, there being many unable to obtain seats. The subject of the lecture was "The World of London," and was illustrated with stereoptican views which the lecturer explained in his usual happy manner. Extended views of Westminster Abbey, with its architecture and tombs were shown, also the bridges and old castles. No written description could do justice to the felicitous manner in which Dr. Bolles handles his subjects. They are among the most entertaining as well as instructive in the course.

Skiff's Minstrels appeared at the Peabody Institute last Wednesday evening, under the management of Mr. A. D. Morrison. The Company gave one of their unique variety entertainments to a much smaller house than should have greeted them. Previous to the performance the band played several pieces in front of Baldwin's hotel on the square.

There have been rumors about town of a change in our post-office—that Mr. Ward would accept a position in the Boston Custom House, and that Mr. Geo. Randall would succeed Mr. Ward. It is probable that some such arrangement may be made, but up to this time nothing of a definite nature can be learned.

The following medals have been awarded by the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association:

CURIOUS TIME-KEEPERS.

An American traveler once saw a rare Japanese time-keeper, which has been described in an old record. This clock, in a frame three feet high and five long, represented a noon landscape of great loveliness. In the foreground were plum and cherry trees, and rich plants in full bloom; in the rear a hill, gradual in ascent, from which flowed a cascade admirably imitated in crystal. From this point, a thread-like stream glided along, encircling in its windings rocks and tiny islands, but presently losing itself in a far-off stretch of woodland, In the sky turned a golden sun, indicating as it passed the striking hours, which were all marked upon the frame below, where a slowly-creeping tortoise served as a hand. A bird of exquisite plumage, resting by its wings, proclaimed the expiration of each hour. When the song ceased, a mouse sprang from a grotto near by, and running over the hill, hastily disappeared.

In the South Kensington Museum, at London, is a small watch, about one hundred years old, representing an apple, the golden case ornamented with grains of pearl. Another old Nuremburg watch has the form of an acorn, and is provided with a dainty pistol, which perhaps served as an alarm.

In London is an eagle-shaped watch, within which, when the body of the bird is opened, a richly-ornamented face is seen. They are sometimes found in the form of ducks or skulls.

The Bishop of Ely had a watch in the head of his cane, and a Prince of Saxony had one in his riding-saddle.

A watch made for Catherine I. of Russia is a repeater and a musical watch. Within it is the Holy Sepulchre and the Roman Guard. By touching a spring, the stones move away from the door, the guard kneel down, angels appear, and the holy women step into the tomb and sing the Easter song that is heard in the Russian churches.

King George III., of England, had a watch not larger than a five-cent piece, which had one hundred and twenty different parts, the whole not weighing as much as a ten-cent piece.

Clocks and watches must usually be wound up every day, though some clocks will run eight days without winding, and a few even longer than that. But there was a century clock at the great Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia. The man who made it says it will run a hundred years without winding, though it is hard to believe this.

There was another curious kind of a clock at the Centennial. It was fixed in a carriage, and tells just how many times the wheel turns round on a journey, and just how many miles have been traveled, and how long the carriage has been in making the trip.

Felix Meier's famous clock, which is said to eclipse even the one at Strasbourg, is the result of ten years of labor and the expenditure of $7,000. It is eighteen feet high and eight wide, and weighs 4,000 pounds. The framework is of black walnut, elegantly carved. Above the body of the clock is a marble dome, upon which Washington sits in his chair of state, protected by a canopy, which is surmounted by a gilded statue of Columbia. On the four corners of the body are black walnut niches, containing human figures, emblematic of the March of Life.

This clock also has an astronomical and mathematical calculation, which, if kept up, would show the correct movements of the planets for 200 years.

The inventor has a crank attached to the clock by means of which he can hasten the work of machinery in order to show its movements to the public. At the end of every quarter-hour, an infant, in his niche, strikes with his tiny hammer, upon a bell which he holds in his hand. At the end of each half-hour a youth strikes, and at the end of three-quarters of an hour the man, and at the end of each hour the Greybeard Death and a winged cupid follow, a large music-box begins to play, and a surprising scene is enacted upon the platform beneath the canopy.—Philadelphia Saturday Night.

HE KNEW WHEN TO QUIT.

Stock speculators know that the chances of their being ultimately ruined are as ten to one. But the possibility of making money by lucky ventures appeals to their gambling instincts, and so they go on speculating, with a determination to quit at the right time. But few ever find the right time, unless it sounds loudly, as in the following case:

"I think I may be excused for a little show of pride in saying that I knew when to stop speculating and quit Wall street," he observed, as an elevated train carried them over that great thoroughfare.

"So you used to speculate, eh?"

"Yes; I was on the street for seven years."

"Made your pile, I suppose?"

"Yes, I made and lost money the same as the rest. At one time I could draw my check for $93,000 and that isn't bad for a man who went into Wall street with only $40 in his pocket."

"And you knew when to quit?"

"Yes, sir."

"That was when—when?"

"That was when I had enough money left to pay my fare to Elmira, and hire a boy to carry my satchel up to my father-in-law's house."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

$10,000 AWARDED.—"I was so sick and low-spirited that I thought I would give anything to get well; and if any one had ensured me the good health produced by using Simmons' Liver Regulator, and charged me a thousand dollars, I would willingly have paid it if I had had it; in fact, ten thousand dollars would be worth less to me than what it has done for me.

The Philadelphia Chronicle Herald thinks that Eve was a giddy young thing because she got married when she was a day old.

Nearly all the ills that afflict us can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv. nov2—1m

An exchange thinks it always seems wrong at a wedding that the bride cannot marry the "best man," Oh, no. She marries the groom. If there was a coachman present, no doubt she would marry him. It's all right.

Palpitation of the heart, nervousness, tremblings, nervous headache, cold hands and feet, pain in the back, and other forms of weakness are relieved by Carter's Iron Pills, made specially for the blood, nerves and complexion.

A sarcastic Georgia editor, in noticing a fair which recently came off in Macon, says: "One of our cotemporaries took a valuable premium, but a meddlesome and firm policeman made him put it right back where he took it from."

If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for sick headache, and every woman should know this. Only one pill a dose.

That was a mean man in Montreal who altered an entry in his girl's diary where she had put down under a certain date that she was to be married to him. One would have supposed that if he was going to alter it either way he would have set it back a little but he was too mean for that, and so he set it ahead a month. Some men don't deserve to get married at all.

WINSTON, Forsyth Co., N. C.

GENTS,—I desire to express to you my thanks for your wonderful Hop Bitters. I was troubled with dyspepsia for five years previous to commencing the use of your Hop Bitters, some six months ago. My cure has been wonderful. I am pastor of the First Methodist church of this place, and my whole congregation can testify to the great virtue of your Bitters. Very respectfully, REV. H. FEREBEE.

AN INTERESTING ACCOUNT!

STONE IN THE BLADDER EXPELLED BY USING DR. KENNEDY'S "FAVORITE REMEDY."

Mr. S. W. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y., the son of Mr. E. S. Hicks, whose name may have appeared in this journal in connection with an article similar to this, was, like his father, afflicted with Stone in the Bladder, only that his case was more serious than his father's. On the appearance of the disease the father advised the son to write to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who, he said, would tell him what to do. Dr. Kennedy replied, suggesting the use of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which had worked so successfully in his father's case. Mr. Hicks, who had been assured by the local physicians that they could do nothing more for him tried "Favorite Remedy" at a venture. After two weeks' use of it he passed a stone 3-4 of an inch long and of the thickness of a pipe-stem. Since then he has had no symptoms of the return of the trouble. Here is a sick man healed. What better results could have been expected? What greater benefit could medical science confer? The end was gained; that is surely enough. Dr. Kennedy assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the Blood, cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder complaints, as well as all those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists.

THE SUN.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S light for mankind and womankind of every sort; its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the fogs, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest and commenting upon affairs with the frankness of absolute independence. The success that experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.

THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN'S political course.

THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like THE SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a perfect Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

Address, I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher of THE SUN, New York City.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY—16 PAGES.

Suited to Boys and Girls of from Six to Sixteen Years.

Vol. III. commences Nov. 1, 1881.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE.

The YOUNG PEOPLE has been from the first successful beyond anticipation.—N. Y. Evening Post.

It has a distinct purpose to which it steadily adheres—that, namely, of supplanting the vicious papers for the young with a paper more attractive, as well as more wholesome.—Boston Journal.

For neatness, elegance of engraving, and contents generally, it is unsurpassed by any publication of the kind yet brought to our notice.—Pittsburg Gazette.

Its weekly visits are eagerly looked for, not only by the children, but also by parents who are anxious to provide pure literature for their girls and boys.—Christian Advocate, Buffalo, N. Y.

A weekly paper for children which parents need not fear to let their children read at the family fireside.—Hartford Daily Times.

Just the paper to take the eye and secure the attention of the boys and girls.—Springfield Union.

TERMS.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE, Per Year, Post Prepaid, $1.50

SINGLE NUMBERS, Four Cents each.

The Bound Volume for 1881 will be ready early in November. Price, $3.00; postage prepaid.—Cover for Young People for 1881, 35 cents; postage 13 cents additional.

Remittances should be made by Post-Office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

THE INDEPENDENT.

The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—THE REV. JOSEPH COOK.

ESTABLISHED in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, THE INDEPENDENT at once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight Mormonism, for Civil-Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, more poetry and stories than popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopædia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what THE INDEPENDENT is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of THE INDEPENDENT. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include: Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science, Pebbles, Personalities, Ministerial Register, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday school, News of the week, Finance, Commerce, Insurance, Stories, Puzzles and Agriculture. 32 Pages in all.

Our New Terms for 1882.

One subscription one year,	$3.00
For 6 months, 1.50; for 3 months,	0.75
One subscription two years,	5.00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance.	5.00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance,	7.00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance,	8.50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance,	10.00
One subscription five years,	10.00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

These reduced prices ($2 per annum in clubs of five or more) are very much lower than any of the standard religious weeklies.

Subscribe with your friends and get the low rate. We offer no premiums.

Contrary to the custom of all the religious newspapers, THE INDEPENDENT will hereafter be stopped at the end of the time for which payment is made. Send postal card for free specimen copy and judge for yourself. Address

Woldly Trifles.

A western news man wrote that he proposed to cook the finest turkey in the country for his Thanksgiving dinner. The printer set it up "hook," and the poor scribe was under police surveillance every time he wandered into the outskirts of the town.

During the past five years I have suffered from Catarrh and have used without relief remedies prescribed by various physicians. I was advised to try Ely's Cream Balm; am using it with beneficial results, and feel confident I shall be completely cured of a disease that has seriously affected not only my nostrils but also my eyes and hearing. W. A. Brintzinghoffer, Jr., Wholesale Tobacconist, Newark, N. J. May 29, 1879.

Ely's Cream Balm for the cure of Catarrh is having large sales with me. I think it the best article I have sold for the treatment of these diseases, and take great pleasure in recommending it to my patrons, as I am hearing the most favorable reports of its benficial effects. A. R. Ferguson, Druggist Lockport, N. Y. Price 50 cents.

A manufacturing concern advertises that it has a separate room for girls two hundred and forty feet long.

However watched by loving care,
Home has distempers lurking there,
And human power cannot defend
From ills that constantly impend;
But Sanford's Ginger bids pain cease,
And home restores to health and peace.

The New Haven Register gives the following excellent directions as to how to tell a good onion: "Hire your best girl to eat it raw, and then call on her. If the onion is good your stay will be short."

Long indulgence in over eating or drinking produces a disorganized Liver, and all the evils attendant upon such derangements; depression of spirits, habitual costiveness, nervous exhaustion, indigestion; pain in the head, with nausea; fullness of stomach after meals, chillness, general debility and languor. Seek relief from Simmons' Liver Regulator.

"It is a very valuable remedy for dyspepsia, sick headache, torpid liver and such like diseases.

"W. S. Holt, Pres. of S.W.R.R. Co. of Ga." oct12 1m

A sparkling young debater in a flight of eloquence, exclaimed, "Mr. President, the world is divided into two great classes, the learned and the unlearned, one of whom I am which."

The restoration to health of our child we considered very uncertain. When two weeks old she caught a cold; until 18 months old she was not able to breathe through the nostrils, became emaciated, was a puny child. Upon using Ely's Cream Balm her difficulty is removed; she breathes freely and naturally. The neighbors consider it a wonderful restoration. Mr. & Mrs. J. M. Smith, Oswego, N. Y.

I have used Ely's Cream Balm and received great benefit, at present being entirely free from Catarrh. Many of my friends have also been much benefitted by the Balm. What is claimed for this remedy I am fully convinced is true. Chas. Greene, Conductor N. Y., L. E. & W. R. R. Port Jervis N. Y.

The physician's motto:—"Have patients and you will succeed."

It is a foolish mistake to confound a remedy of merit with quack medicines. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Dyspepsia Debility, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times. nov2—1m

Sambo, who had been out to sea in a hard gale, said: "All de passengers was a heavin', and de captin' gave orders for de ship to heave to."

Indulgent parents who allow their children to eat heartily of high-seasoned food, rich pies, cakes, &c., will have to use Hop Bitters to prevent indigestion, sleepless nights, sickness, pain, and, perhaps, death. No family is safe without them in the house.

A Nevada school teacher died the other day, and the local papers announced it under the head, "Loss of a Whaler."

An old gentleman, who always took notes of his minister's sermons, on one occasion read them to the clergyman.

Itching Piles — Symptoms and Cure.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes for $1.25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price in currency, or three cent postage stamps. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, Catarrh, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, Jr.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
Certainly Cures Consumption!
FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
ALWAYS CURES NIGHT SWEATS
FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
CURES DYSPEPSIA.
READ THE PROOF:
Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.
The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.
The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.
This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.
TESTIMONIALS from well known people near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible destroyer, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.
We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.

J. W. Manning the Veteran Nurseryman, says: Having over-exerted myself in my nursery giving me a weakness of the Stomach and Kidneys, I used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam—which has given me an appetite and proves better than any bitters, and is the most pleasant preparation to the taste that I have ever used.

FAITH WHITCOMB.
"It Cured Mother."
Winchester, Mass., July 12, 1881.
My mother came very near dying from pneumonia last winter, and her lungs were left in a weak condition. Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has stopped the cough and has cured her dizziness. It is the only medicine that would help her. Yours truly, B P Holbrook.

A Boston Merchant's Testimonial.
No 27 Court street, Boston, March 13, 1881.
My daughter was prostrated with a terrible cough, after other remedies had failed, and my daughter had become so much worse that we were all completely discouraged, she commenced the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam and after using it less than one month she is well. Shall be glad to answer all enquiries. B A Clark.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

"Almost at Death's Door."
114 Shawmut street, Chelsea, March 1, '81.
I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam is strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.

Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs. N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician, who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, Doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.
Write or call upon Mrs. Russell, and also upon her family Physician for further particulars.

Saved! Saved! Saved!
I am happy to say that Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has cured my cough, of which I had despaired of ever being cured. I can now sleep without coughing at all, all of which I owe to Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. I only now need strength.

A TAILOR'S BLUNDER.

I did a nice clever trick when I first set up for myself, which you shall hear. That large house just opposite mine is Lord M——'s town residence. I made a fishing-suit for one of the young honorables, and was ordered to go over and get paid. The hall-porter who let me in told me to walk up stairs. I met on the landing a little old woman, in a stuff gown and white apron, with a basketful of keys on her arm. I made sure she was the housekeeper, and so told her business.

"Step into this room, young man," she said, "and I will pay you."

My bill was not more than fifty shillings, and, as soon as I received the money, I put half a sovereign into her hand.

"I'm very sorry, ma'am," said I, "that I cannot afford more; but, if you would only get his lordship to give me the order for the Christmas liveries, I'd do the handsome thing by you."

"And pray what would that be?" asked she, looking at me with her little shining black eyes.

"Nothing less than a new silk gown, that I can promise," I replied. "I hope you will speak to his lordship about this little matter, and lose no time."

"I certainly will do so," said she, "and you shall be informed with what effect this very day."

"Bring over the news yourself, old gal, if you can," I rejoined; "and I'll find you a drop of the real stuff out of a bottle I keep in the shop."

I left the house, feeling quite sure that I had secured the chance of a good order. About five minutes after I got back to my shop, in came the butler.

"Mr. Dean," said he, "his lordship has given strict orders that on no account are you to be admitted into the house again, because of your impertinence to my lady."

"Your lady?" said I. "Why, I never set eyes on her."

"I heard her tell his lordship that you called her 'old gal.'"

"Eh, what!" I articulated, wide awake in a moment.

"And told her that, if she'd come over to your shop, you'd treat her to a drop of something short."

"What!" said I. "Was it Lady M—— that I was speaking to? I took her for the housekeeper."

Well, of course I lost the custom of Lord M——. But what vexed me most was that I lost the half-sovereign.

CATCHING A SEA TARTAR.

Says the London Pall Mall Gazette: A large whale has just been reading a lesson on an old theme to the inhabitants of Walls Island, Orkney, and even to mankind at large. This whale in his gambols ran himself ashore, when the islanders turned out in a body with knives, pitch-forks, and every accessible instrument of attack, and after satisfying themselves by inflicting innumerable stabs that he was dead, proceeded, by help of the rising tide, to tow him with their boats into the harbor. The whale, however, with a union of stoical endurance and diplomatic craft hitherto unrecognized in the species, had been biding his time, and no sooner regained his own element than he rushed out to sea, dragging the fleet of screaming Orcadians behind him. To be hoist with your own petard is bad enough, but to be abducted by your own whale is worse, and the people of Walls, after three miles of an involuntary voyage, managed to cut the ropes and escape from the formidable sea Tartar whom they had caught. From this adventurous incident the Walls Islanders and all who are willing to profit by the experience of others may learn how unsafe it is to contend with whales in their own waters or with men on their own ground, and, generosity apart, how imprudent it is to be cruel to the helpless, since there is no telling how formidable they may become when their opportunity arrives.

A ROMANTIC INCIDENT.

The London correspondent of the Sheffield Telegraph tells this story, which is probably as true as most of the stories told about actresses: Few operatic artists have had so romantic a career as Mme. Marie Roze. The following anecdote is only one of a number of almost equal interest: During the siege at Paris no citizen worked harder for the defense than this intrepid Frenchwoman. She organized an ambulance, and supported it by giving concerts and dramatic performances. All the patriotic young men were madly in love with her, and she received innumerable offers of marriage from admirers in all ranks of society. A young marquis threatened her with a terrible punishment if she did not accept his suit. He invited her to meet him, and he swore he would permanently disfigure her if she did not come. She met him in the Bois de Boulogne, and as he spoke, four commissaries of police rushed from their places of concealment and secured him. In his pocket was found a bottle of vitriol. But this failure did not thwart his purpose. He still vowed revenge, and having escaped from prison when the Commune was declared, might have carried out his intent if he had not been shot one night near Marie Roze's house. So ended an interesting drama which must have been decidedly unpleasant to the heroine.

Charles Lamb once said that the greatest pleasure he knew was to do a good action by stealth, and to have it found out by accident.

CABINET ORGANS.—A noteworthy instance of progression in the construction of this popular instrument, no less than 70,000 of which were sold during the past year, is found in the "Baby Organ" just introduced by the Mason & Hamlin Organ Company, and sold for only $22. Every one knows that the organs made by this company stand at the very pinnacle of excellence. No one seriously pretends to make better organs than it; and few will claim to make as good. Yet in the little organ alluded to, such progress has been made in simplifying the construction, and so securing economy of cost without loss of quality, that they are now able to offer a really good organ, retaining their characteristic excellence, at a price which really seems ridiculously low.

A GREETING TO OLD AND NEW FRIENDS.

The Boston WEEKLY JOURNAL has long enjoyed the deserved reputation of being the representative newspaper of its class in the New England States. It has a constituency second to none in numbers or intelligence, and is each year commanding a wider field of influence. Its success among the reading classes of New England has been due to the liberal policy of its management, to the care and skill employed in its preparation, to its extensive sources of information, to the variety and timeliness of its contents, and to the acknowledged honesty of its views. These qualities, upon which every newspaper must rely for permanent or worthy success, will characterize it in the future as they have in the past, and it is the confident expectation of its managers that the year to come will witness a better development of it than ever before. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in all respects a newspaper WHICH NO MAN IN ANY DEGREE REMOVED FROM THE GREAT CENTRES OF INFORMATION CAN AFFORD TO DO WITHOUT.

THE ADVANTAGES TO THE READER.

It has never been so well equipped as now for the securing and effective presentation of the facts and discussion of the tendencies of the times. With the growth of the country, and the increasing prosperity which may reasonably be expected to accompany it, a good newspaper becomes indispensable to the man who would keep himself informed upon whatever is interesting the world at large. A well conducted journal of the times gives men better knowledge, broader views and keener sympathies, and draws them out of the demands of their individual lives upon a higher plane of thought and feeling.

ITS PECULIAR CHARACTERISTICS.

THE WEEKLY JOURNAL aims to furnish those who have not much time for reading with a full and comprehensive digest of the events of the day. Its purposes are to inform men upon the courses of government, politics and business, to present the news of the day and show its tendencies, and to give instructive facts and desirable information. With every resource known to modern journalism at its command, it unhesitatingly asserts its ability to do this, and invites an examination of its claims.

A YEAR OF GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST.

The coming year bids fair to be one of exceptional interest. All citizens will look upon the condition of political affairs with intentness, and watch their development with care. Some of the most important questions of the day are awaiting discussion and solution, and in the close balancing of political parties in Congress a more than ordinary concern in national affairs will be excited. The course of the new Administration will also attract much attention, since a remarkable interest attaches to President Arthur in view of the melancholy fate of his predecessor, whose chair he was so suddenly called to fill. Washington, therefore, will for many months be a centre of gaze for Americans, and all will desire a full and intelligent account of what transpires in it,—THE WEEKLY JOURNAL, through its skillful and well-known correspondents, "Perley" and "Webb," will be supplied with the most exhaustive and careful accounts of affairs, while the dispatches of the Associated Press will supplement their labors. "Perley's" accounts of social life in Washington, which are admitted to be among the best furnished to the press from the Capital, will also, as heretofore, be a feature of the paper. In the field of general news, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will display a greater energy than ever before. The general press dispatches will be supported by SPECIAL ACCOUNTS OF MATTERS OF WIDE INTEREST,

And, especially, much space will be given to the material interests of the country. As the paper has a large support among the farming community, particular attention will be given

TO AGRICULTURAL AFFAIRS.

Special articles by the "Young Farmer" will be a marked feature of the coming year, and the markets for produce in this city, together with the condition of the crops in all parts of the country, will be fully reported from time to time.

ITS POLITICAL CHARACTER.

Politically, THE JOURNAL will remain in earnest support of the Republican party and its principles, criticising measures freely irrespective of party lines when occasion demands, but holding to the processes and theories of government which for the past twenty years have steadily improved their claims to popular confidence. The paper will support the principles of the freedom and integrity of the ballot, the maintenance of the national credit, the protection of American industries, a practical Civil Service system and a sound finance, believing that thus only can the dignity and power of the Government be upheld, or the prosperity upon which the country has entered be made permanent.

THE WORLD ABROAD.

THE JOURNAL will also continue the valuable and instructive discussion of foreign men and affairs which Mr. Edward King has so long and so ably carried on. He is admitted to be the best of European correspondents, and none other is so much quoted and commended. Other special features will be "The Kennebecker's" entertaining descriptions of sea life and strange countries, "M. E. B.'s" "Rambling Talks" and other papers of literary merit, besides which a wide and careful selection will be made of the best current reading of the day. Great attention will also be given to New England affairs, and matters of interest in which the paper circulates will be given special prominence. Correspondents from all important points will contribute information, to which the telegraphic dispatches and the exchanges of THE JOURNAL will add as occasion requires. Altogether, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will be better than ever before, and will commend itself to the intelligence and taste of the reading public of New England. Each issue of THE WEEKLY JOURNAL contains THIRTY-SIX LONG COLUMNS.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL,

Published on Tuesdays and Fridays, is a paper of especial value to persons engaged in commercial pursuits outside the large cities. It contains, in addition to all the news of the day, the fullest possible market, commercial and marine reports, besides a large amount of valuable reading matter of a miscellaneous character. THE BOSTON SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL is a paper which no man actively engaged in trade and watching the course of mercantile affairs can afford to be without Educate! educate! is the modern cry; but what is meant by it is, fill! cram! stuff! Well, men are filled, crammed, stuffed, who are as far from being educated as a monkey is from being a man. We must come back to consider and enforce the true sense of education.—We want a new dispensation of the old fashioned "school-master abroad." Our doctrine of depravity, if it was ever true, is not true to-day. It has lingered among us, and given us false notions of human nature, and so we have been hard at work trying to fill it up. One thing is certain, if it was ever empty, eighteen centuries of christian civilization have done something to overcome that emptiness. If not, then Christianity might as well be set down a failure. What we want now is such instruction as shall draw out this human nature into forms of beauty and use. If there are no angels in human nature now, then there never will be. But there are, and that is the true education that uncages them, and bids them fly forth with blessings on their wings. If this education be, in all respects, what it should be, these angels will not "play truant;" they will come back and other angels will be born of them.

Addison has a definition of music to the effect that it is one of those qualifications of the senses, that even over-indulgence in never brings moral hurt. But music is much more than a sensuous pleasure. The soul of it stands for that which is spiritual and immortal. Its alphabet is made up of staffs, and scales, and notes, and bars, and measures, and keys; but when these are learned and combined, they make compositions with the murmur of brooks, and the song of birds, and the voice of thunders, and the roar of hurricanes in them. He who thinks that versical whim-wham and derational fiddle-faddle is music, will do well to keep his thoughts to himself. In so doing he will not expose his ignorance.

Esop has a fable to the effect that a lion and an ass went one day a-hunting together. The ass was to scare up the game and the lion was to catch it. So the ass kicked and brayed right lustily. Proud of his beastly and boisterous antics, he asked the lion if he had not made a great noise and done well. The lion confessed that he had, and that had he not known it was only an ass making all the noise, he should have been scared half to death himself. It is well in this world to distinguish between the roaring of lions and the braying of asses.

The Ohio Farmer gives the following as an infallible remedy for poisoning by ivy, to which persons who go rambling about in the woods at this season are liable, unless they are acquainted with the shrub. Some persons are so susceptible to its influence that they become poisoned without actual contact with it. The receipt is worth preservation: Dissolve sugar of lead—a bit of the size of a hazelnut—in half a teacup of sweet milk or warm water. Apply as warm as can easily be borne with a soft, linty piece of rag. Three or four applications are sufficient to effect a cure. If the poison is on the face and nearing the eyes or mouth, this astringent wash may be constantly applied. It is a marvellous cure, and by watching closely, one can see the fevered blisters turn from white to yellow during the application. This remedy for ivy poison should prevent a great deal of suffering. It is well to keep sugar of lead in the house all the time. Let it be labeled and kept where it can be found the moment it is wanted. Keep it well wrapped up, that it may not lose its strength.

The most short-sighted, selfish editor we know of lives in Missouri. He talks in this way: A doctor will sit down and write a presription, time, five seconds; paper and ink 1-4 of a cent, and the patient pays one, two, three, five and ten dollars as the case may be. A lawyer writes ten or twenty words of advice and gets from ten to twenty dollars from his client. An editor writes a half column puff for a man, pays a man a dollar for putting it in type, prints it on several dollars worth of paper, sends it to several thousand people, and then surprises the puffed man if he makes any charge.—Exchange.

One thing we shall insist on, if the ladies are going to wear such extraordinary hats, and that is that a window be placed in the rear, the same as a top buggy, so parties sitting back of them can look through and see what is going on on the stage. There is nothing unreasonable about that.

It is reported that the relatives of the late Mr. Hall of Salem, have sued Mr. J. E. Trask of this town for $4,000. It will be remembered that Mr. Trask's horse run away and struck against the ladder on which Mr. Hall was standing, while painting a house on Holten St., and he was thrown to the ground, and later, died from the effects of his injuries.

The ladies of the Episcopal church will open their next fair, for which careful and enterprising efforts have been put forth, on the 14th of December, at Upton's Hall, where everybody will find something to purchase for Christmas presents. Entertainments of different kinds will be provided. A paper is to be issued in connection with the fair.

We notice that our friend, Theodore M. Osborne, has opened an office in Allen's block, with O. B. Chadwick & Co., where he can be found after 4 P. M. Mr. Osborne has been very successful thus far in his chosen profession and is worthy of a share of the patronage of our town. We don't advise our readers to go to law—but if they must, they can find no more reliable attorney than Mr. Osborne.

Thanksgiving day passed in a very quiet manner in this town. The storm the night before made pedestrianism very disagreeable, and the day was one of the old fashioned sort, cold and snow outside and a cheerful fire and good company inside. Some indulged in the enjoyment of a sleigh ride in the early morning. Services were held at the Cong. Church and a sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. W. G. Sperry.

Pratt & Copeland of Danvers, were awarded a silver medal by the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Fair for buff, glove, grain and split leather which they exhibited. Mr. W. A. Sawyer, on his Measuring Machine, received a bronze medal. This machine was manufactured at J. E. Clement & Co.'s. The Whitening machine, made and exhibited by John E. Clement & Co., received a diploma, which spoke highly of the rotary cutter and its skill in construction.

Union Post 50, G. A. R., was officially inspected last Monday evening by Comrade J. Albert Blake of Danvers. There was a goodly number of the Post present, and a delegation from Danvers Post 90 were present. After the formal ceremonies of the evening the Post and their guests sat down to an old fashion camp fire feed. After the attack upon the rations, the clay pipe and tobacco were brought out and a social time enjoyed till about 11 o'clock, when the visiting Post returned home.

The lecture committee of the Rockville Cong. Church and Society will give a course of entertainments in the chapel, commencing this evening with readings by H. Porter Smith of Boston, to be followed Dec. 15th with a lecture by Rev. J. T. Hill of Lynn; Dec. 21, lecture by Rev. W. Barrows, D. D., of Reading. Subject—Out West, Where and What; January 12, 1882—Tableaux, Readings and Music; Jan. 24—Readings by C. H. Webber of Salem; Feb. 7—Concert—Vocal and Instrumental. This is an excellent course and will no doubt receive the liberal patronage it should receive from that section of the town. Course tickets $1.00; Single tickets 20 cents.

It is said that green was never heard of as a national or party color till 1798 when the United Irishmen adopted it for the following reason: The ancient flag of Ireland was a golden harp on a dark blue ground, as now depicted or emblazoned on the Irish quarter, the third, of the royal standard, and the revolutionary leaders being anxious to unite all classes of Irishmen, being in that respect the exact converse of the present agitators, and to join the Orangemen to the rest of their fellow-countrymen, adopted green as their distinguishing color, which is, of course, produced by mixing together orange and blue.

A young lady who graduated from the Lawrence High school last July is teaching school up in New Hampshire. A bashful young gentleman visited the school the other day, and was asked by the teacher to say a few words to the pupils. This was his speech: "Scholars, I hope you will always love your school and your teacher as much as I do." Tableau, giggling boys and girls and a blushing schoolma'am.

POLICE NOTES.—Nov. 21, Mr. James Sweeney, who had been indulging too deeply in the pleasures of the bowl, was retired to the house of correction for two months.

Simon J. Hayes, who, though young in years, will soon be known as an "old offender," was, for assault, sent to the Alms House.

The Sunset Cloud.

BY LYDIA DAVIS THOMSON.

All things were still, and tired Nature slept,
While one by one the shadows slowly crept
Athwart the hills, across the silent moor,
Along the road and by my quiet door;
And I, in harmony with the twilight gay,
Sat musing out the lingering hours of day.

When lo! a sudden darkness filled the land;
Caught form a massive cloud that rose so grand
Above the quiet hills and setting sun,
And bade the tinier shades emerge in one.

A moment, only, held it regal sway,
And then the sun shot up a lingering ray
As if his buried rights he would retrieve,
Nor in this mood of dying day take leave.

He brushed the cloud with radiant hues untold,
And tipped and fringed it with refulgent gold;
And all the western sky with glory filled,
The while all things below seemed doubly stilled.

As wave on wave the golden glory lay,
Methought no painter's hrush could e'er portray
The scene that silent held my raptured gaze
Till I was lost in wonder, love and praise.

And then my soul took on a deeper thought,
The while I watched the cloud with splender fraught—
That if such beauty to our earth is lent,
When by and by the shadowy veil is rent,
That now divides from us the unseen world,
What are the glories yet to be unfurled?

In vain we talked, my wandering thoughts and I—
Only an "inner voice" gave this reply:
"The glories which the Father hath prepared
Nor eye, nor ear, nor thought hath ever shared."
And I turned back into life's shaded ways,
Yet still o'erpowered with wonder, love and praise.

Thanksgiving Hymn.

BY GEORGE RANDALL.

Lord, we thank Thee for the gifts
This harvest season yields;
For stores rich of ripened fruits,
The treasure of the fields.
Give to each a generous heart,
To each a liberal hand,
To wisely use the bounty
Now placed at their command.

Thanks for all the tender thoughts
Of loved ones gone before,
And for hope of meeting them
When earthly scenes are o'er;
Thanks, too, for united friends
And for Thanksgiving cheer,
For all mercies given us
To crown the closing year.

Grant the lessons of this time
May impress every heart
'Mid the changing scenes of life
To bravely do its part;
Grant we all may sow such seed,
Such steadfast purpose keep,
That we may, when life is done,
A Heav'nly harvest reap.

Selected Story.

TRUE LOVE.

"And this is your irrevocable answer, Miss Greyson?"

"It is, Mr. Vane. I regret that this event has happened, but"—

"Say no more! Do not add the sin of uttered falsehood to acted deceit! Save your regret for the day when it will be sincere, and wrung from the depths of your heart, for I swear to you, Anna Greyson, that, as sure as the heavens are above us, you will bitterly rue this hour. You will repent"—

"The most profound repentance I can ever feel is, that I have been blind enough to mistake you for a gentleman! Good evening, sir." And the woman turned from him and walked away.

The man looked after her a moment, and then with a deep, low-uttered curse, he too turned and strode rapidly away in the opposite direction.

A few words to explain this scene. Anna Greyson, a beautiful girl, had been flirting with Philip Vane; not a bit more desperately, though, than she had done with a dozen other admirers, without any tragical result; but Philip, unfortunately, was not like the other dozen; beneath his polished, graceful manner lurked a nature that could brook no trifling, nor even forgive a hurt. He had really loved the girl, and when he told her of it, and received her refusal, all this dark side of his nature rose in its strength, and as he walked rapidly on in the moonlight he registered a vow that he would make her suffer tenfold the pain she had inflicted on him.

The setting sun was casting red rays over the group of guests that was gathered on the piazza of the Mountain house, waiting the arrival of the evening stages. It was intensely hot, and every one was getting himself still hotter by abusing the weather, except the belle of the house, Miss Greyson, who, with a favorite admirer, Mr. Donald Dare, sat a little outside the circle, cool and charming. A rattling of wheels and clattering of hoofs sounded, and the stages dashed up to the piazza, and began to unload their freight. It was the usual assortment, young and old, quaint and elegant, all the worse of wear, and not one winning a second glance from the crowd of inspectors, till, almost at the very last, there appeared a tall, distinguished-looking man, who at once attracted every one. He was covered with the regulation "duster," and carried a handsome satchel. He came slowly up the piazza, indifferent to the eyes fixed on him till opposite Miss Greyson. Then he stopped. Their eyes met, and they both paled a shade. It was Philip Vane, and this was the first time the two had met since their parting that night in the moonlight. He hesitated, but so slightly that it could scarcely be noticed, and then extending his hand, he advanced, saying cordially:

"Miss Greyson! This is indeed as unexpected as delightful. I hope I find you well!"

Miss Greyson's composure was sorely taxed, but her training was equal to it, and also extending her hand, she replied with equal friendliness:

"Perfectly well, Mr. Vane, and as charmed as yourself by this unexpected meeting. Let me introduce my friend, Mr. Dare."

The gentleman shook hands, and then after a few more remarks, Mr. Vane left them to secure his room.

The season passed on. Philip Vane and Miss Greyson both remained at the hotel, and, to the surprise of the latter, they became firm friends. The past was never referred to. He saw that Donald Dare was winning the heart he had coveted, but he manifested no jealousy; in fact, he showed quite as strong a friendship for Dare as for Miss Greyson. At first this conduct puzzled her, and she was inclined to be suspicious of him, but as time seemed to prove his sincerity, this feeling wore off, and she almost forgot that anything unpleasant had ever happened between them.

The summer neared its close, and the guests of the house decided to give a grand hop before they began to separate for their homes, many never to meet again. Philip Vane and Donald Dare were appointed chief managers, and everything progressed favorably till the day before the ball was to come off. Donald Dare received a telegram stating that business required his presence the next day in the city. Every one was disgusted, and Donald himself was very much annoyed, for he had anticipated a good deal of pleasure at the hop, and had also determined, during the evening, to learn his fate from Miss Greyson. But he could not disregard the telegram, and the best arrangement he could make was for him to go to the city that night and return the next in the eleven-o'clock train, which would give him a couple of hours of festivity. He left and the next evening came, and the ball opened in brilliant style. Miss Greyson, of course, was reigning belle, and well worthy she was of the honor, for she was superbly beautiful, and so Philip Vane told her, with unusual warmth, as after a long waltz, he had led her out on the piazza to rest. It was a glorious night; a full moon shone in a cloudless sky, and the faintest zephyr stirred the leaves.

"This is grand," said he; with a dramatic flourish of his hand. "Far more delightful than the hot, full room.—Come, Miss Greyson, let us go to the river; it will only take us a few minutes, and I know it must be beautiful under this moon."

She hesitated. His manner was not quite natural, and it called up the memory of that other night on which she had stood in the moonlight with Philip Vane, and she asked herself, Is it prudent to put him again in the same situation? But the next minute she put the thought from her as egotistical vanity. He certainly had proved the past was dead to him, as to her, and, laying her hand on his arm as assent, they went slowly down the rugged path to the bottom of the ravine, where the river lay, shimmering and gleaming like a band of silver.

"Is it not beautiful?" asked Vane, now speaking in his usually quiet manner.

"Indeed it is!" and she shivered slightly.

"You are not cold, Miss Greyson?" and he wrapped her light scarf more closely around her.

"Oh, no," she replied, "I am not at all cold. It was only one of those involuntary crawls that legendary lore says one feels when some one is walking over the spot where her grave will be."

He shrugged his shoulders.

"What an uncanny thought to intrude at this bright hour! banish it quickly, and let us go on to the lake. I know it is a little Como to-night."

Again she smothered a rising objection, and they walked on to where the river widened into a little lake, the head of which was crossed by a railroad bridge. The scene was truly beautiful here. The little lake, bounded by high wooded banks, shone like a polished mirror, over which the tall arches of the bridge cast shadows like the walls and tunnels of a mined castle.

"Is this not well worth the walk?" asked Vane, after they had gazed a few moments in silence.

"It is, truly," she replied. "But it is getting late, Mr. Vane, and we must return to the house."

"Yes," said he, "it is getting late, but we won't return just yet."

There was a sound in his voice that startled her, and she looked quickly at him. He was still gazing earnestly over the water, and apparently not noticing her movement, he continued:

"How pretty those rays of light are falling across those shadows! You know where they come from?"

"Certainly," she replied, rather curtly, for his persistence was now annoying her. "They come from the railroad lantern. Rather an unpoetic source for such an artistic effect."

"True," said he, "and yet it is not altogether destitute of dramatic possibilities, for that light could be the keystone of a terrible tragedy. It hangs at the end of a switch that runs to the edge of the ravine. This switch is used for freight cars, I believe, and it is the switchman's duty every night to see that it is properly locked, and then to hang out that white light to tell the coming train that all is right. If the switch should be misplaced after the light is hung there, the train would dash right over into the ravine. That would be horrible, wouldn't it?"

"Very, indeed. But come; we must go now." She turned as she spoke, but at that instant a pair of strong arms closed around her, and she was half crushed against Philip Vane's heart, while he hissed in her ear:

"Yes, 'very indeed' it would, and 'very indeed' it will be! Listen, Anna Greyson! I have forged a key to that switch, and I have set it so that the coming train will rush blindly into the ravine to death and destruction, and bear with it Donald Dare, the man you love. Ha, ha, ha! You want to go back to the hall! Presently! But first listen a little longer! You remember another night, fair as this, when we two stood together? Yes, I know you do, for women never forget such things! I gave you my heart then; you flung it from you, and blackened earth and heaven for me ever more. That was your hour of triumph, but I swore that mine would come, as it has! It it here! Now! Ha, ha, ha!" Far over the water this unearthly laugh rang, and Miss Greyson read in it the horrible fact that she was in the grasp of a madman!

For an instant her knees bent beneath her, and a mist gathered before her eyes, but by a powerful effort she sustained herself, and then one of those inspirations that heaven sometimes sends at vital moments broke over her. She echoed his laugh with one soft and low, and explained:

"You great stupid darling, what a world of trouble you could have saved if you had only used your eyes! You think I care for Donald Dare! You goose! I have been using him to make you jealous, and bring you back to me; for, Philip, dearest, I have regretted the words I spoke that night every minute since!"

She ceased speaking, and waited with bated breath the result of her words. They were successful. He looked eagerly into her face and cried:

"O Anna, Anna! Can this be true?"

"Of course it is. Release my arms, and I will prove it to you."

He did so, and throwing them around his neck, she covered his face with kisses.

"You believe me now?"

"I do! O my darling! my darling! how blind I have been!"

"Of course you have, and narrowly escaped a useless crime, too, for of course now you will not send those poor people to destruction. You have the key; let us turn the switch right."

"As you say, dearest. I obey your commands, if they are to wade through oceans of trouble."

"A true and loyal knight! Let us hasten, for the train will soon come."

They started toward the switch, but suddenly Vane stopped, saying:

"Hold, sweet one! A thought has come to me. As the Israelites of old offered sacrifices of bulls and goats for victories over their enemies, so let us offer these human victims up to heaven for our great happiness."

Miss Greyson's blood froze. O heaven, must she fail after all? The distant whistle of the locomotive fell on her ears. It tightened the grip on her heart almost to suffocation, but it gave her strength, and steadying her voice, she said:

"No, no, dear! The days for those strange things are past, and now such an act would only bring the punishment of the law."

"The law! What care I for that! See, here I defy it!" and he cast the key far away into the darkness. Miss Greyson clasped her hands.

"My God, what have you done?"

He turned on her furiously,—"Woman, you have lied to me!" and tried to seize her, but, quick as an arrow, she sprang and ran toward the light. There lay her only hope. If she could only extinguish that before the train got too near, she might save it. She reached the switch, and tried to take the lantern down. It was locked fast. The shriek of the locomotive sounded again. A few minutes more and it would be too late. She pulled madly at the lantern, but in vain. She could now hear the rumble of the approaching train, and Philip Vane's mocking laugh sounded close behind her.

Great God above, was there no help! and in frantic despair she dashed her clenched hands against the wire guard of the lantern. The little fist passed through the wire, struck the glass, and shattered it into a thousand pieces; and then the night wind rushed in, the flame flickered, once, twice! and all was dark.

Five minutes later the train stopped beyond the switch, and Donald Dare, who had gone with the conductor to see what was the matter, found Miss Greyson insensible on the track. He carried her to the hotel, and she soon revived, but it was a long time before she recovered from the terrible shock, and her right hand was so terribly lacerated that she lost two fingers.

Philip Vane was never seen after that night, and his sad fate was the only shadow that dimmed Miss Greyson's happiness as the wife of Donald Dare.

Miscellaneous.

PERILS OF THE DEEP.—The world-renowned swimmer, Capt. Paul Boyton, in an interview with a newspaper correspondent at the seashore, related the following incidents of his experience:

Reporter.— Captain Boyton, you must have seen a large part of the world?

Capt. Boyton.—Yes sir, by the aid of my Rubber Life Saving Dress, I have traveled over 10,000 miles on the rivers of America and Europe; have also been presented to the crowned heads of England, France, Germany, Austria, Belgium, Italy, Holland, Spain and Portugal, and have in my possession forty-two medals and decorations; I have three times received the order of knighthood, and have been elected honorary member of committees, clubs, orders and societies.

Reporter.—Were your various trips accompanied by much danger?

Capt. Boyton.—That depends upon what you may call dangerous. During my trip down the river Tagus in Spain, I had to shoot one hundred and two waterfalls, the highest being about eighty-five feet, and innumerable rapids. Crossing the Straits of Messina, I had three ribs broken in a fight with sharks, and coming down the Somane, a river in France, I received a charge of shot from an excited and startled huntsman. Although all this was not very pleasant, and might be termed dangerous, I fear nothing more on my trip than intense cold; for as long as my limbs are free and easy, and not cramped or benumbed, I am all right. Of late I carry a stock of St. Jacobs Oil in my little boat,—(the captain calls it "Baby Mine,") and I have had but little trouble. Before starting out I rub myself thoroughly with the article, and its action on the muscles is wonderful. From constant exposure I am somewhat subject to rheumatic pains, and nothing would benefit me, until I got hold of this Great German Remedy. Why, on my travels I have met people who have been suffering from Rheumatism for years; by my advice they tried the Oil, and it cured them. I would sooner do without food for days than be without this remedy for one hour. I would not attempt a trip with, out it.

The Captain became very enthusiastic on the subject of St. Jacobs Oil and we left him citing instances of the curative qualities of the Great German Remedy to a party around him.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The following important commercial and industrial works are contained in the December number of the INTERNATIONAL REVIEW, now ready: "New Outlets for American Products," by Robert J. Creighton; "Influence of European Industries on the United States," by J. L. Stevens; "Sugar Culture in Louisiana," by Edward Hogan. Price by mail, postpaid, 50 cents. Address A. S. BARNES & Co., 111 and 113 William street, New York.

Mr. Ira Brown, the enterprising real estate man, states that he could and would say a good word for St. Jacobs Oil, which had cured him of a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism that all other treatments had failed even to allay.—Chicago Tribune.

"Were you ever in any engagement?" inquired an innocent rustic of a great city militiaman. "Yes, one," replied that son of Mars. "but she went back on me."

BALLOU'S MONTHLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE.—The December number of this popular and cheap family magazine is the best and most atttractive that ever appeared. The illustrations of a summer tour through Switzerland, and the account of the love making that accompanies them, are worth a careful reading. The Christmas story is a model of its kind, and so is Captain W. H. Macy's yarn about "The Haunted Island." Eliot Ryder relates a Mexican romance, and throws as much poetical description into his heroine's character and beauty as he dares to venture on in a true story; and then there are fashion plates, Christmas poems, and all for fifteen cents, or only one dollar and fifty cents per year. Among the contents are "How we Passed the Summer," "One of the 'Belles of Lynn,'" "Poverty and Independence;" Young People's Story Teller—"Raymond Mortimer," "Ruthven's Puzzle-Page." Published by Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley street, Boston, Mass., at only $1.50 per annum, postpaid, and for sale at all the news depots in the country at 15 cents a copy. Speak to your neighbor about it, and get up some clubs this fall. Now is the time to start clubs for the new volume.

There are even more than the usual attractive features in the December number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, and prominent among them the opening chapters of Gerald Carlton's great serial novel, "Leonie, Empress of the Air." Richard B. Kimball LL.D., has an article, "The Seige of Yorktown, the Surrender and its Centennial," with thirteen admirable illustrations. "Bear Hunting—An Adventure in the High Knob Region," "Electricity, the Queen of our century." by A. V. Abbott, are among the finely illustrated articles. Oscanyan has an illustrated article on "Osman Pasha of Plevna:" there are short stories by M. T. Caldor and others; a frontispiece, "A Distracting Model," from the painting by Hans Dahl. The number contains 128 quarto pages. A single copy is only 25 cents, the yearly subscription, $3, or $1.50 for six, and $1 for four months sent post free. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55, and 57 Park Place, New York.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine—T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor: The December number of this favorite periodical appears with the popular devine, T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., as Editor, and extremely good as it has hitherto been, it has increased brilliancy from his connection with it. In his characteristic initial address, "To The People," he says:

"We promise nothing, except to trust in God and do our level best. Our religion is sunshine, and the difference between earth and heaven is that the sunshine of earth sometimes gets beclouded, but heaven is everlasting sunshine. We mean to cultivate the largest catholicity. We want in our Magazine to help make Sunday the brightest, and most entertaining, and the happiest day of the week. We believe there is no other Sunday Magazine in America. So the field is clear. We propose beginning in our next a series of articles on 'People We Have met,' and will, before we get through, set forth some of our contemporaries of the pulpit and press. They have often given their ideas of us. We will give our ideas of them." The leading article of the number is entitled "The Christian Statesmen, James A. Garfield," by the Editor, which is replete with interesting reminiscences, and is finely illustraied. Among the other particularly noteworthy illustrated articles are "Malta," "A Missionary Emancipator," etc., etc. The interesting story, "May Cunningham's Trial," is continued. The poems possess great merit, and the miscellany is abundant, entertaining and instructive. The price of a single copy is 25 cents; the annual subscription $3; six months $1.50; four months $1; sent post-paid. Address, FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55, and 57 Park Place, New York.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for December is in all respects a good number. The writers are men eminently competent for the tasks assigned to them, while of the subjects discussed, there is not one which does not possess a living interest. The most important article is one by the Hon. John A. Kasson, entitled "The Monroe Doctrine in 1881." In this paper the obligation of the United States government to effectually assert its supremacy throughout the Western Hemisphere is demonstrated. Then follows a discussion of the Death Penalty, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Cheever, Judge Samuel Hand and Wendell Phillips. The policy of Mr. Gladstone's Government toward Ireland is strenuously defended by Mr. H. O. Arnold-Forster, son of Chief Secretary of Ireland. Four physicians and surgeons of the first rank, namely, Drs. W. A. Hammond, John Ashhurst Jr., J. Marion Sims and John T. Hodgen, review the history of President Garfield's case. Finally, the Hon. David A. Wells treats of Reform in Federal Taxation.

Anecdotes.

A GERMAN SCHOOL STORY.

I entered Herr M——'s school in May, 1877. One day when I had been there about six weeks our class had for translation Grimm's fable of the Wolf and the Man. The wolf, it will be remembered, had been persuaded by the fox to attack the man, and had in the encounter come off second best. Relating afterward his misadventure to the fox, the wolf describes the hunter's knife as a "bright rib, which he drew from his body, and smote me with it so sorely that I was well nigh killed."

After commenting on the wolf's mistake, Mr. M—— said, "I suppose you know that a woman has a rib more than man." Thinking he was joking, I merely smiled; but when he began with great seriousness to give as a reason for this extra rib the old story of Adam sleeping in the garden and having a rib extracted out of which to have a wife made, I laughed outright, and the old man was greatly taken aback at my incredulity. He assured me that it was really a fact that men were each a rib short, and any doctor would tell me the same.

Two of the sons were present, but notwithstanding their great learning in other matters, they appeared to be no better informed in this than their father. The discussion went on, and everybody stopped to listen to it. But no one supported me; on the contrary, I was openly laughed at by some who were university students (that is, who had gone through the gymnasium) for setting my knowledge against the master's. For several days the subject was continually cropping up in class or at dinner, so that everybody in the school knew of it. It was becoming a standing joke, and as yet the laugh was against me.

At last Mr. M—— announced in the open school that he had the previous evening asked some of his medical friends at the club (die Lese und Erholungs Gesellschaft) about the ribs, and he found that men had as many as women. "But," he added, half-triumphantly, "Adam may have been one short for all that."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NOT THE RIGHT HITCHING PLACE.

The scene is laid in a beer garden in the suburbs of Austin. A country fellow, with a freckled-faced, pug-nosed female, with a snuff-stick in her mouth, on his arm, and the swain, as he is called in poetry, said to the barkeeper with the white apron on:

"Be you the parson?"

The barkeeper hearing himself called a thing so entirely out of his line of profession, looked sheepish, and said:

"I vos nod dot person."

"So you air the jestice, I s'pose," said the bride, removing the snuff-stick, and throwing a bold stream of tobacco juice at the cuspidore.

"I vos shoost as goot as anypody, and don't you make no foolishness mit me," replied the barkeeper, filling his pipe.

"Then you can marry folks. We want to get married."

"Whebber told you dot is a liar vat vants ter put up some games on me."

"Well, then you go out and take in your sign. We was comin' in town to get hitched, and we saw that air sign out there, Hitching Place, so as not to lose no time we came right in. Beg pardon if you ain't in the business. Come on, Sal," and taking her under his arm, the couple sailed back to their wagon, which was waiting.

Then the barkeeper went out, and stood before the hitching place, and studied the sign, and smoked steadily for about the space of half an hour.—Texas Siftings.

AMERICAN WOMEN'S HANDS.

The American women have the smallest hands in the world. Gloves made in France for the American market are smaller and narrower than any other in the world, and the fingers are made more slender, as any American woman will discover who has to buy a pair of gloves in any provincial city in Europe. Probably no American with a smallish hand, which excites no remark here, has traveled long abroad without discovering that it is only large shops in big cities which keep gloves small enough for her, and a lady with a hand just below the American average, (four), living in one of the largest cities in Eastern Europe, recently found herself forced to send regularly to New York for her gloves.

A SAVING WOMAN.

A saving woman at the head of a family is the very best savings-bank established—one receiving deposits daily and hourly, with no costly machinery to manage it. The idea of saving is a pleasant one; and if the women imbibed it at once, they would cultivate it, and adhere to it, and thus, when they are not aware of it, they would be laying the foundation of a competent security in a stormy time. The woman who sees to her own house has a large house to save in. The best way for her to comprehend it is to keep an account of all current expenses. Probably not one woman in ten has an idea how much are the expenditures of herself and family. Let the housewife take the idea, act upon it, and she will save something where before she thought it impossible.

All pure, sweet laughter is a sign of happiness, and happy people are much more apt to be virtuous than the unhappy. Be good and you will be happy is hardly a more valid saying than be happy and you will be good.

Papers should talk fact and fun, the one to inform the mind, and the other to amuse the wearied mind.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

A GREETING TO OLD AND NEW FRIENDS.

The Boston WEEKLY JOURNAL has long enjoyed the deserved reputation of being the representative newspaper of its class in the New England States. It has a constituency second to none in numbers or intelligence, and is each year commanding a wider field of influence. Its success among the reading classes of New England has been due to the liberal policy of its management, to the care and skill employed in its preparation, to its extensive sources of information, to the variety and timeliness of its contents, and to the acknowledged honesty of its views. These qualities, upon which every newspaper must rely for permanent or worthy success, will characterize it in the future as they have in the past, and it is the confident expectation of its managers that the year to come will witness a better development of it than ever before. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in all respects a newspaper WHICH NO MAN IN ANY DEGREE REMOVED FROM THE GREAT CENTRES OF INFORMATION CAN AFFORD TO DO WITHOUT.

THE ADVANTAGES TO THE READER.

It has never been so well equipped as now for the securing and effective presentation of the facts and discussion of the tendencies of the times. With the growth of the country, and the increasing prosperity which may reasonably be expected to accompany it, a good newspaper becomes indispensable to the man who would keep himself informed upon whatever is interesting the world at large. A well conducted journal of the times gives men better knowledge, broader views and keener sympathies, and draws them out of the demands of their individual lives upon a higher plane of thought and feeling.

ITS PECULIAR CHARACTERISTICS.

THE WEEKLY JOURNAL aims to furnish those who have not much time for reading with a full and comprehensive digest of the events of the day. Its purposes are to inform men upon the courses of government, politics and business, to present the news of the day and show its tendencies, and to give instructive facts and desirable information. With every resource known to modern journalism at its command, it unhesitatingly asserts its ability to do this, and invites an examination of its claims.

A YEAR OF GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST.

The coming year bids fair to be one of exceptional interest. All citizens will look upon the condition of political affairs with intentness, and watch their development with care. Some of the most important questions of the day are awaiting discussion and solution, and in the close balancing of political parties in Congress a more than ordinary concern in national affairs will be excited. The course of the new Administration will also attract much attention, since a remarkable interest attaches to President Arthur in view of the melancholy fate of his predecessor, whose chair he was so suddenly called to fill. Washington, therefore, will for many months be a centre of gaze for Americans, and all will desire a full and intelligent account of what transpires in it.—THE WEEKLY JOURNAL, through its skillful and well-known correspondents, "Perley" and "Webb," will be supplied with the most exhaustive and careful accounts of affairs while the dispatches of the Associated Press will supplement their labors. "Perley's" accounts of social life in Washington, which are admitted to be among the best furnished to the press from the Capital will also, as heretofore, be a feature of the paper In the field of general news, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will display a greater energy than ever before. The general press dispatches will be supported by

SPECIAL ACCOUNTS OF MATTERS OF WIDE INTEREST,

And, especially, much space will be given to the material interests of the country. As the paper has a large support among the farming community, particular attention will be given

TO AGRICULTURAL AFFAIRS.

Special articles by the "Young Farmer" will be a marked feature of the coming year, and the markets for produce in this city, together with the condition of the crops in all parts of the country, will be fully reported from time to time.

ITS POLITICAL CHARACTER.

Politically, THE JOURNAL will remain in earnest support of the Republican party and its principles, criticising measures freely irrespective of party lines when occasion demands, but holding to the processes and theories of government which for the past twenty years have steadily improved their claims to popular confidence. The paper will support the principles of the freedom and integrity of the ballot, the maintenance of the national credit, the protection of American industries, a practical Civil Service system and a sound finance, believing that thus only can the dignity and power of the Government be upheld, or the prosperity upon which the country has entered be made permanent.

THE WORLD ABROAD.

THE JOURNAL will also continue the valuable and instructive discussion of foreign men and affairs which Mr. Edward King has so long and so ably carried on. He is admitted to be the best of European correspondents, and none other is so much quoted and commended. Other special features will be "The Kennebecker's" entertaining descriptions of sea life and strange countries, "M. F. B.'s" "Rambling Talks" and other papers of literary merit, besides which a wide and careful selection will be made of the best current reading of the day. Great attention will also be given to New England affairs, and matters of interest in which the paper circulates will be given special prominence. Correspondents from all important points will contribute information, to which the telegraphic dispatches and the exchanges of THE JOURNAL will add as occasion requires. Altogether, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will be better than ever before, and will commend itself to the intelligence and taste of the reading public of New England. Each issue of THE WEEKLY JOURNAL contains THIRTY-SIX LONG COLUMNS

THE SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL,

Published on Tuesdays and Fridays, is a paper of especial value to persons engaged in commercial pursuits outside the large cities. It contains, in addition to all the news of the day, the fullest possible market, commercial and marine reports, besides a large amount of valuable reading matter of a miscellaneous character. THE BOSTON SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL is a paper which no man actively engaged in trade and watching the course of mercantile affairs can afford to be without Scenes of Early English History.

The third lecture of the free course was delivered last evening by Rev. E. C. Bolles, of Salem, upon the above subject. The Institute, as is usual when such speakers as Mr. Bolles address them, was packed to its utmost capacity. The lecturer explained the rapid succession of beautiful and interesting illustrations in his usual eloquent and forcible manner. Little did the victorious Romans, when they overran Europe with their armies, think that the two islands rising out of the great northern sea, deserted and unknown, and which they supposed to be the home of the dead, would ever reach the proud eminence which they hold to-day —mother of nations and mistress of the sea. But deserted as they were, save by a few tribes of savages, these islands did not escape invasion from the ravaging armies which drenched the whole European continent with blood, at divers times, the first beginning one-half a century before the birth of Christ, and the last one-half a century more than a thousand years after the Christian era. The lecturer proposed to treat mainly of the two counties, Kent and Sussex, perhaps the most noted in all England for their historical associations, and within whose limits are such famous places as Canterbury, Hastings, Dover and Rochester. It was upon the coast-lands near the last place that the hardy sons of Britain repelled again and again, but in vain, the hordes of Cæsar led by the heroic standard-bearer of the tenth legion. Albion is the name which the ancients gave to England from the white cliffs and hills which stand prominent everywhere along its coast. Dover, formerly called the "advance guard of England," lies between two of these white cliffs, and was early taken by the Romans, traces of whom still remain in its ancient towers and battlements. Being the gateway to England, it is, like all gateways, liable to be hastily opened, passed through, shut and forgotten; but it deserves a closer study than is generally given it by the traveller, for it is the scene of many a stirring incident in English history. It was here that Stephen died the death which brought the Plantagenet family into power; here the timid John gave to the people the great bulwark of their liberty—the Magna Charta; it was here that Richard Cœur de Lion set sail when about to enter upon his crusade against the Saracens; Henry V., when returning from the glorious field of Agincourt, first landed here; in 1660, it was the first to welcome the exile king back to the throne of his fathers; and, later, Dover was the meeting place of Queen Victoria and Napoleon. Along the coast, for miles around Dover, are beautiful cliffs, surmounting each of which there was formerly a tower to guard against invasion.

In 449 the Saxons, under Hengist and Horsa, conquered the country, and nearly a century and a half later, in 597 forty monks were sent over by Gregory the Great, who first brought into the hitherto barbarous country the first softening influences of Christianity.—The ruins of St. Martin's Church in Canterbury, built 1300 years ago, mark the spot where King Ethelbert was baptized. But the glory of Canterbury is the Cathedral. This was commenced some 400 years ago, is 500 feet long and its tower is 235 feet high. The illustration given of the Cathedral when seen by moonlight, was entirely powerless to give a true idea of its sublimity. It seemed like a shrine dropped from the upper world beyond the stars, and yet casting forth its glorious radiance. Among the scores of tombs of England's noted men who are buried here, the most famous are those of the martyred Thomas a Becket—before whose tomb the instigator of the assassination, Henry II., was compelled to do penance—and of the noble and chivalrous Edward the Black Prince.

The scene of the country portions of Kent is beautiful, made up as it is of babbling brooks, and shaded lanes, and winding roads. Hops are the chief product, fully 30,000 acres being devoted to its cultivation. Rochester is also famous for its old castles, symbolic of the fierce strifes that raged in days of chivalry. A view of the house where Dickens lived and wrote, was shown.—Not far off is Hastings, where brave Harold resisted right manfully the haughty Norman invaders, and was at last defeated by the greatest soldier of his age—William the Conqueror—by a cruel strategy. To commemorate this bloody battle, William built a monastery, called "Battle Abbey," in which was kept the famous Doomsday Book, the register of all the estates in the kingdom. Descriptions of the home of the Sidney family were given, together with portraits of Sir Philip Sidney, author of "Arcadia," and of his sister, to each of whom the lecturer paid a glowing tribute. Sir Philip's last act was typical of his whole life; struck down in battle, and suffering from thirst, he presented his canteen of water to a dying comrade with the words, "Thy sufferings are greater than mine."

THE FAIR of the Volunteer Engine Company, for which extended arrangements have been made, opened last night most favorably. As is very well known, the proceeds are to be devoted to the aid of Mr. David T. Nolan, who lost both legs by the accident at the muster of firemen at Milford, and the brethren of the different companies in this vicinity, and throughout the State, have responded with more than their usual liberality in furtherance of the object for which the fair is held. The silver trumpet which is to be given to the company purchasing the largest number of tickets, is sharply contested for, the leading rivals thus far being the J. A. Lord Hose Co. of Salem, and the Gen. Putnam Engine Co. of So. Weymouth.

The Order of Hibernians, of Salem, attended the fair last evening in a body, accompanied by the National Band of Lynn. They were met at the Salem line by the Volunteer Co. and the Salem Brass Band, and escorted to Upton's Hall where the fair is held. A large crowd was present viewing the numerous and costly prizes which are to be drawn and distributed to the lucky holders of season tickets on the last evening of the fair. The prizes are all on exhibition, and it was seen that they were very valuable, and nearly all purchased of our home dealers, which is as it should be.

From Mr. C H. Goulding's comes the Black Walnut Chamber Set, Hair Cloth Parlor Suite, Ladies' Patent Rocker in Silk and Plush, Gents' Patent Reclining Chair, Dinner Set 159 pieces, Extension Table, Spring Bed, Domestic Sewing Machine and 30 yards Lowell Superior Carpet. From Caskin's is purchased the large Magee Advance Range, and one of Adams & Westlake's best gas stoves. From Norton & Gilman the parlor stove, an Octagon, No. 2. The lady's shawl, from the Boston Dry Goods Store, and the pair of large all wool blankets, web of the best cloth, and dress pattern, were from Fernald & Sawyer's. Geo. C. Prescott made the elegant harness, and also furnished the buffalo robe and gold-mounted whip. The watches, silver ware, knives, spoons and other jewelry displayed in the show case, came from Starr C. Hewitt's, and the student lamp, large clock, and copy of "Webster's Unabridged," from B. F. Stevens. The sleigh was made by Osgood of Amesbury. With these prizes is also shown the sword and belt which is to be given to the officers of the miiitary company in Salem having the largest number of votes.

The three tables are devoted to the display and sale of numerous fancy articles, some of which are to be sold directly, and many by tickets, and then drawn for, it being expected that several of these will be disposed of each evening in this way. We noticed in particular, at table No. 1, a suit of clothes made by S. Barnard of New York, for which Mr. Fred Edmunds, of this town, is agent; also, a large album and a loaf of cake. At table No. 2 a splendid fernery, furnished by B. D. Hill; a yellow canary with cage, an album, a parlor rag bag, and oil painting. On table No. 3 a real French doll, a speckled canary, and a very elaborate piece of glass work. These, and many other articles, are to be disposed of by lot.

To-night four companies of the Salem Fire Department are expected to be present, and the Peabody order of Hibernians; to-morrow night the balance of the Salem Fire Department; and it is expected that companies from Marblehead and other adjacent towns will visit the fair in a body later on in the week.

The limited capacity of the stage at the Peabody Institute again reminds us that we have not in Peabody a hall where a drama of any considerable magnitude can be brought out. Not only is the stage in the Institute small, but the arrangement of the seats is such that in no case can a good view of the stage be obtained from over half of them. Our town ought to afford a good Opera House, and if some of our citizens who are abundantly able to do so would form a Stock Company for the building of such an edifice, we think it could be made a paying investment. With a suitable piece of land in the centre of the town, the ground floor could be made into several large stores which would be readily taken, and the second floor in front of the Opera House itself, which could be made in the rear, could be fitted up for offices. This, in addition to the rent of the hall, would, it seems to us, pay.

MR. EDITOR, — In justice to Mr. Craig of So. Peabody, I would like to correct a statement I saw in your paper a short time since, about his transactions with Mr. Collamore of Boston.

Mr. Craig let Mr. Collamore have all the rooms he needed in his mill for two months, for nothing. On the 1st of November, when they met to talk about leaving or leasing, Mr. Craig proposed to Mr. Collamore to have any differences that had arisen between them quietly settled by their respective counsel, which Mr. Collamore positively declined, and would not even give his lawyer's address. Two weeks later, Mr. Collamore sent this same proposition to Mr. Craig, and while his clerk was writing an answer, two workmen of the Shade Co. reported they had been locked out of a room through which they had a right of way to their rooms, and that some of Mr. Collamore's men were in a room which they never had, the doors being locked and keys in Mr. Craig's possession. One of Mr. Craig's workmen, on attempting to open the door, found it fastened on the inside, broke one pane of glass to Mr. Craig's office, entered by the window and found half a sash smashed to a private storeroom, and one of Mr. Collamore's men in there with his arms full of Mr. Craig's property. When Mr. Craig saw this he told him to get out, and after he left covered the window with his revolver. He has never interfered with Mr. Collamore's work or men, and had not been to the miil for weeks before this Saturday, as he had been sick with hay fever and dumb ague. JUSTICE.

We are called upon to record the decease of Miss Florence Poole, which took place Saturday last. She was a young lady of unusually rare qualities of heart and mind, and by her warm friendship had endeared herself to many, who will sadly mourn her loss. The death of her father a few years since was a severe blow to her, and one from which it would appear she never fully recovered. She had been employed in the cloak and suit department of Messrs. Almy, Bigelow & Webber, until within a few months, which position her failing health compelled her to relinquish a few months since. Her funeral took place Monday afternoon, at which Rev. W. G. Sperry, officiated. The floral offerings were numerous and very elegant, among which was a cross of green and white, with "Florence" in purple immortelles, contributed by her Sabbath School Class, a wreath of white flowers, a crescent of fine and white flowers with the word "Rest" in purple immortelles, a crown at the head of the casket of white flowers and smilax, besides numerous other bouquets and floral offerings.

We are reluctantly compelled by the press of local matter in our columns this week, to leave out several letters of a very interesting nature, which we shall publish next week. We have also prepared a description of the new houses of Messrs. W. P. Clark, Thos. E. Wilson and Geo. A. Whitney, some or all of which will appear as soon as possible.

From the crowded houses that nightly witness the Boston Museum performance of Patience, it might well hold the board for an extended run. But Mr. Field has arrangements made for the production of other novelties, and this must give way after a limited season. The performance of the company is improving vastly each evening, and standing room only is the rule.

Naumkeag Encampment, I. O. O. F., of Salem, have voted to hold a fair at Mechanic Hall, and invite the hearty co-operation of the ladies connected with the order, (Daughters of Rebecca), and there will be a meeting next Friday evening, at Odd Fellows' Hall, Salem, where the subject will be discussed and arrangements made.

HOW TO MAKE A LIVE TOWN.—1. Sell your building lots at reasonable prices.

2. If you can afford to do so donate a building lot for some large business enterprise, and thereby enhance the value of town property.

3. Induce business men to locate in your town.

4. Always sum up your expenses when you visit places out of your own town to buy goods.

5. Speak well of worthy public enterprises.

6. Patronize the business men of your own town.

7. If anything should be undertaken that would be a benefit to the town, do not speak ill of it to others because you happen to be prejudiced against it.

8. Speak well to strangers of your town and people.

9. If you have surplus money, do not invest it in far off speculations, but give yourself and your town the benefit of it by establishing some profitable factory.

10. Encourage your local newspaper by subscribing for, advertising in, and paying for it.

Buy one of those imported Scotch Caps for 75 cents, at the Shawmut.

Haverly's mastodon minstrels were playing in London, and were singing to a crowded house the chorus in "Old Kentucky Home." When the last notes melted away, a strange looking figure advanced a few steps from his seat in a dark corner of the pit, and the audience was startled to hear a voice say earnestly and distinctly: "Sing the dear old song again,—sing it for me. I'm listening hard, and I'm listening low, boys, and every word is a friend to me, home to me—everything. Say, will you sing it once more for me, right now and here?" It was the figure and voice of Ben. Leland, an old minstrel, who left this country several years ago and after playing in Australia made his way, a broken-down old man, to London. Here he supported himself by playing the banjo, but eked out generally a miserable existence. The mastodons sang the chorus again, and the figure sank back into its seat. When the audience dispersed it remained motionless, and when an attendant came to arouse it he found Ben Leland dead.

It shows good judgment to buy a $3.50 Hat for $2.50, and it can be done at the Shawmut. Entire stock marked in plain figures, and at a small advance from factory prices.—Adv.

The individual or association that creeps into newspaper offices with reading notices for the purpose of getting them inserted gratuitously and then carries job printing elsewhere doesn't understand human nature sufficiently well to be appreciated.—Woburn Adver.

Potter Palmer, of Chicago, has a new idea in hotel clerks. At the Palmer House are three good-looking girls behind the office desk, two as cashiers and one as bookkeeper. The cashiers get $1,000 and $900 a year, and the bookkeeper $600 and board. They do their work well, and are a great improvement on the traditional male clerk.

KEEP YOUR SCALP CLEAN.

The best thing out for removing Dandruff is

HEYLINGBERG'S

EUREKA DANDRUFF REMOVER.

It has been thoroughly tested by hundreds of gentlemen, Ladies, and Children, and we have plenty of testimonials of its good results. It is cooling, removes Dandruff, invigorates the roots of the hair, and will quickly produce a strong and beautiful growth in all cases where the roots of the hair are not fully dead, and will stop this unpleasant itching; in fact it is the best hair dressing in use. It is not greasy or sticky, and is warranted free of all oils, and rosins, and will prove the cleanest, safest and most economical Hair Dressing to be found.

Peabody, Mass., Nov. 18, 1881.

Mr. J. J. Heylingberg, Dear Sir:—Both myself and wife have used your Eureka Dandruff Remover for some time, with the most satisfactory results, and recommend it as being indispensable for the toilet. Yours truly,
FRANK A. BRAGDON.

Many more testimonials furnished if desired.

Persons suffering from diseases of the scalp will be attended at the house when desired.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 22, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & Co., Gentlemen: I have taken Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and have derived great benefit from it. I have been troubled for about eight years with Kidney Disease and Gravel. I never suffered particularly from it until last fall. I was then afflicted with excrutiating pain that rose from my right kidney to my bladder. I was also greatly troubled with making my water. I could not retain it, and was obliged to go to the urinal a number of times a day. I tried a great many different remedies and took quantities of medicine without any seeming benefit or relief. I grew worse and I suffered distressing pains across my right kidney, and it was with great difficulty that I walked. Finally, about three weeks ago, I was induced to try your remedy. The first I took of it seemed to make me feel worse, but I continued, notwithstanding, and in a short time I began to improve. I have now taken a bottle of it, and am going to continue it. I have been wonderfully benefited. The pains have left me and I am not troubled with my water, and altogether I am feeling a different person. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has done it all.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 21, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & Co.,—Gentlemen: About 10 years ago my first trouble began with a falling and retrocession of the womb, and the tortures I underwent are beyond description. I was attended by two of the most eminent physicians in the country and underwent a number of operations for tumors; but all that science and skill could do was ineffectual. I grew worse and worse year after year until my sufferings, from a complication of diseases, turned into Bright's disease, and all hopes of recovery, even by my physicians, were given up. However, I recovered for a time from this spell; at times being better and at times being worse. An analysis of my water showed large quantities of albumen. I had excruciating pains in my kidneys and across my abdomen towards the bladder, which compelled me to lie on my right for so long a time that at last large bed sores formed. I tried different remedies which were said to be good for Bright's disease, but they were ineffectual and made me worse. Cold chills would creep over me, up my spine, and through my head. My appetite was entirely gone, and I was so thoroughly emaciated and in such a frightful condition that my living at all was a mystery, even to my physician. Finally, last January, my husband purchased 10 bottles of your remedy and prevailed upon me to use it: and although from my previous experience with proprietary medicine, I had little or no faith in them, yet I had read so much about Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure that I began taking it, and did not experience any benefit from it until I had taken the third bottle, when I began to improve. I persevered in taking your remedy, and before long I was able to be up and around. My appetite returned and I began steadily to gain flesh. I have taken altogether 27 bottles and still continue its use, and my friends and neighbors look upon me in astonishment. I would also say that before taking your remedy I suffered dreadfully with painful incustinations and great flowing and had convulsions, and I was also affected with hemorrhoids. It seemed as if I were to be a martyr to all the pains and ills that flesh is heir to. But thanks to Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, I am now entirely free from any sufferings in that respect. I feel, as it were, like a new being. It is at times hard for me to realize the wonderful change: I am endowed with new life, all owing to your magnificent remedy. It has saved my life, and my gratitude to you is unbounded. My case is so prominent here that any one who desires to know more about it can write to Beverly, and they can receive the desired information. I make this reference because those living away from here sometimes doubt such statements as I have made. Your remedy is a blessing.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.,—Gentlemen: The statement of my wife does not begin to express the suffering she underwent. We did not think it possible for her to live. Your remedy has no doubt saved her life. It is a grand thing, and you cannot think how thankful I am for it.

Henry B. Wallis

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where hope was abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in all diseases of the kidneys, liver or urinary organs. If any one who reads this has any physical trouble, remember the great danger of delay. nov 30—4w

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The first entertainment of the Holten Lodge, I. O. O. F., was given on Thursday (Thanksgiving) evening last. The drama of "The Octoroon" was presented by the Lyceum Dramatic Co. of Boston, to a full house. The Odd Fellows are to be congratulated on the successful inauguration of their course. It is to be regretted that we have not a hall in Peabody where a drama like the one presented in this course can be performed with proper stage room, footlights and change of scenery. As it was, the Company did better, much better, than might be expected under the disadvantages of Peabody Institute stage. It was necessary to drop the curtain for every change of scene, and if the play had not been cut, the number of original acts would have increased more than was apparent at this performance. The most important part of the play is that of Zoe, the Octoroon girl, which was taken by Miss Lizade Thompson.—Miss Thompson is a pupil of Miss Lucette Webster of Boston, and has been greeted with enthusiastic receptions in different parts of New England where she has appeared as a reader. Her lines were carefully rendered, showing much study, and her appearance on the stage was at once natural and easy; she gives promise of becoming an actress of no ordinary ability, and we trust an opportunity may be afforded of seeing her again in some other part. Mr. A. E. Washburne was excellent as Salem Scudder, notably so in his vigorous defense of Wahnotee, the Indian. Mr. Ottinger was perfectly at home in the part of Jacob McCloskey, the ex-overseer, planter and villain, and Miss Forrester made a very pleasing Dora Sunnyside. The remaining characters do not call for much mention, if we except the dancing of Mr. F. Harry Birch and singing of Mr. Chas. Redding, which was received by the audience with enthusiastic applause, and the appearance of Mr. Fred Leslie in the important part of George Peyton. Besides being unfamiliar with his lines, having to be prompted by Miss Thompson in the midst of the love scene with Zoe, he did not display the ability of an ordinary amateur. The part furnishes opportunity for much dramatic ability—which was entirely lost in this instance. With this exception, the play was received with favor by the audience. The next entertainment will be given Thursday, Dec. 8th, by the Park Instrumental Quartette and Joseph P. Cobb, Humorist. A few good reserved seats can be obtained at Hewitt's for the remainder of the course.

Last Sunday evening, at the Baptist Vestry, a very pleasant Sunday School concert was held. The subject was "Thanksgiving." Besides appropriate verses from the Bible, there were several recitations by older scholars, and an interesting sketch of our National Thanksgiving day was read by Miss Alice Hart. Mr. McGregor, of Salem, sang several solos with good effect, and the choir lent their aid in singing a number of selections. Remarks were made by the pastor, Rev. L. L. Wood, Mr. Colley of Salem, and by Mr. May of St. Johns, N. B.

A resident on Lowell street had been troubled for some time with a mephitis animal, which was making its home under his barn. Recently he set a large box trap and determined to capture the animal, and was successful to a certain extent, for on approaching the trap the next morning the black and white fur was seen through a crack in the trap. He immediately proceeded to Nelson's tannery and after holding the trap under water for half an hour concluded the animal must be dead and opened it, and found that he had only drowned a neighbor's pet cat.

We never saw such a sanguine man as Goulding. He is so confident that his prices for furniture, crockery, etc., are lower than anybody else that he publishes a long list of them in his large advertisement on the eighth page. He just the same as says that if anybody can beat his prices they are welcome to. But the long list is only a small part of his complete price list, which, as many people are finding out, is the lowest in this vicinity.

An immense stock of crockery and silver plated ware direct from the manufacturers, and the closing up of a bankrupt stock, is now being opened at the store corner of Caller and Main streets, Peabody, and offered at retail during the day at auction prices, and at auction every evening. Ladies are specially invited to attend this sale.—Adv.

Mr. John A. Lord is about to extend the basement floor of his leather factory on Hardy street, by building a flat roof covering on the south side, making an addition of 20x38 feet.

All kinds of Ladies' Fur Trimmings at the Shawmut, 191 and 193 Essex street.—Adv.

Once more that Sunday school cherub, boy martyr, our neighbor's protege, and Officer Parker's target, Patrick Ronan, has been arrested. The particulars are, that on Thanksgiving day Ronan, in company with other roughs, went into a saloon on Boston street, and after eating and drinking what they wanted refused to pay for it, and divided their time between insulting the bar tender and pelting him with pigs' feet. When the bartender objected and went outside to enforce his objections, the crowd assaulted him, and the next thing he knew Ronan was spitting out his ear, which he had bitten off. Ronan was arrested near Frost's currying shop by Officer Parker and taken to the Peabody Police Station, after which he was handed over to Officer Heathcote of Salem. The case came before Judge Osgood, who fined him $100 and costs. The judge was very lenient in this case as it was a States Prison offense.

Last Sunday the Catholics of Peabody celebrated the second anniversary of the dedication of their church. A Solemn High Mass was celebrated in the forenoon, with Rev. Father O'Reilly as celebrant, Rev. M. J. Masterson Deacon, and Rev. V. F. Borgialli as Sub-Deacon. Rev. J. J. Gray of Salem, delivered a very able and eloquent sermon upon the Last Judgment, previous to which he gave a short sketch of the parish. A comparison was made between the legal tribunals of men and the terrible judgment of Almighty God, the one transient and easily overcome, the other lasting till the end of time. We should prepare ourselves for this last judgment, that we may not hear the most terrible, yet the most just, of all sentences, "Depart, ye cursed," but that we might rather enjoy the happiness of eternal bliss. The singing was of high order, the bass and tenor duet being especially fine.

Thanksgiving evening Mr. Charles F. Foss and Miss Alcena Nichols were married by Rev. G. M. Harmon, at the home of the bride's father, and in the presence of the immediate relations of the parties. After the ceremony a collation was served, and very many valuable presents were received, among which was one of Rogers' groups, presented to Miss Nichols by her associate teachers, a handsome black walnut side board sent to the new home of the young couple in Dedham by the business associates of Mr. Foss, and many articles of silver ware and embroidery. Mr. Foss and Miss Nichols have lived in Peabody from their childhood, and are thoroughly respected by all who know them. We predict a successful life for them both.

The lecture which Gen. Stephenson will shortly give under the aupices of Union Post 50, G. A. R., will be worthy a large attendance for two reasons; first, the proceeds will be for the Bazar in Boston, in aid of the Soldiers' home; secondly, the lecture is upon a subject upon which few public speakers, however able, are competent to speak because they have not the experience of Gen. Stephenson. The subject, "The Battle of Gettysburg," can only be properly treated by a gallant soldier and an eloquent speaker, which Gen. Stephenson certainly is. It will be a fine opportunity for the scholars in the High and Grammar schools to get some very interesting and instructive information which we hope they will improve.

A good concert was given in the Universalist Vestry, last Sunday evening, by the first class of young ladies, and, though intended to be a "home concert," drew a good number from other churches. Each young lady recited a selection, and the school sang a number of pieces. Mr. George Randall, teacher of the class, contributed a song, which was set to music by Miss Nellie Bartlett, and which will be found on our second page. It was sung by the class, with Miss Bartlett at the piano. At the conclusion of the exercises, Mr. Randall made a few remarks upon the subject of the concert, "Thanksgiving," and was followed by Rev. Mr. Harmon, who spoke on the same subject.

At a meeting of the American Hibernian Benevolent Association held last Monday evening, the following officers were elected to serve for the next six months: President—Thos. F. Lyons; Vice President—John J. McCarthy; Secretary—Patrick F. Heffernan; Collector—James J. McCann; Treasurer—W. J. McCarthy; Auditor—James H. Crowley; Directors—John J. Bartlett, John Sullivan, John Murray, Wm. Sullivan, James Buckley; Visiting Committee—Daniel F. Calnan, Jeremiah Bresnahan, Thomas Hayes, James B. Carbrey, John Linehan; Librarian—Michael Quinn; Assistant Librarian—Thomas Sherry.—Reporter.

Philip Phillips and his son: These celebrated singers of sacred songs, who have entranced audiences in every civilized country in the world, will sing in the Methodist Church, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 7. This will be the only chance to hear them before their fifth voyage to England. Tickets 35 cents, children 15 cents, and for sale at B. F. Stevens' book store.

I love the playful little lamb—
I love him broiled or roast;
I love the feathered songster, too—
I think him best on toast.

I love the fish that swims the sea—
Fresh from the frying pan;
I love the retired oyster, too—
I'll eat him when I can.

Nearly all the ills that afflict us can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv. nov2—1m

It was a congregation in Manchester-by-the-Sea which presented the minister and his wife with new clothes, and when the couple marched up the broad aisle the choir struck "Who are these in bright array?"

Palpitation of the heart, nervousness, tremblings, nervous headache, cold hands and feet, pain in the back, and other forms of weakness are relieved by Carter's Iron Pills, made specially for the blood, nerves and complexion.

A ballet dancer died recently at Naples, leaving a large fortune. This shows how easy it is to accumulate wealth when one dresses economically.

If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for sick headache, and every woman should know this. Only one pill a dose.

They say that Hindoo girls are taught to think of marriage as soon as they can talk. American girls get into that line of meditation at an earlier period, and without any teaching, either.

MOTHERS DON'T KNOW. — How many children are punished for being uncouth, wilful, and indifferent to instructions or rewards simply because they are out of health! An intelligent lady said of a child of this kind: "Mothers should know that if they would give the little ones moderate doses of Hop Bitters for two or three weeks the children would be all a parent could desire."

Beecher did not welcome Patti when she landed at New York. His absence can only be accounted for on the supposition that he did not know that Patti would kiss all the gentlemen who met her.

Students of decorative art will find THE ART AMATEUR for November full of charming illustrations of quaint Chaffagiolo falence, "pilgrims bottles" decorated with Cupids, and rare ecclesiastical embroideres, etc. The frontispiece is a Deck plaque drawn by Camille Piton, and there are clever sketches by Edwards and Pilotell. The supplement gives a notable array of designs for plaque and panel painting, Christmas embroideries and other decorative work. The text includes valuable "Hints to China Painters," and articles on church needlework, altar paintings, etc. Price $4 a year; 35 cents a number. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

Mr. Elihu Vedder, the well-known American artist, lately returned from Rome, has been working since last summer upon a permanent cover for THE CENTURY MAGAZINE. The new over, which is just completed, is to consist, not of one design, but really of five—four of them for the different seasons of the year. Surrounding each are appropriate emblems for every month in the year, and in each will appear an emblematical female figure of great dignity. The midwinter cover will, perhaps, be the most striking of all, as in the background is the Aurora Borealis. The general color of the paper of the present cover will be preserved, whilst the ink will be of a somewhat deeper tint, and the general massing of the letters will also be retained; otherwise, the design is entirely fresh and original.

There came from the country a charming sweet maid
To buy in the city some laces and thread;
The papers of late she had often glanced o'er,
And read of the bargains at Peabody's Store.
So thither she went, gaily tripping along
With heart e'en as light as the bird of sweet song;
For low were the prices of goods she did know
At PEABODY'S Store, for the papers said so.

"Yes," said the boy to Mr. Barnum, "I'm ready to pay for my ticket, but I want the privlege of going in by crawling under the tent." And Mr. Barnum agreed, and ordered the guards not to interfere with the lad, and after the boy had performed the feat, Mr. Barnum went inside and asked his reasons for it, and the lad explained that he had got over seven dollars bet with boys, who had tried the crawl and failed that he would succeed in it.

A young man in Nebraska sent an offer of marriage to a girl in Iowa, whom he fancied, and in reply received this telegram; "Come on with your minister."

AN INTERESTING ACCOUNT!

STONE IN THE BLADDER EXPELLED BY USING DR. KENNEDY'S "FAVORITE REMEDY."

Mr. S. W. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y., the son of Mr. E. S. Hicks, whose name may have appeared in this journal in connection with an article similar to this, was, like his father, afflicted with Stone in the Bladder, only that his case was more serious than his father's. On the appearance of the disease the father advised the son to write to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who, he said, would tell him what to do. Dr. Kennedy replied, suggesting the use of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which had worked so successfully in his father's case. Mr. Hicks, who had been assured by the local physicians that they could do nothing more for him tried "Favorite Remedy" at a venture. After two weeks' use of it he passed a stone 3-4 of an inch long and of the thickness of a pipe-stem. Since then he has had no symptoms of the return of the trouble. Here is a sick man healed. What better results could have been expected? What greater benefit could medical science confer? The end was gained; that is surely enough. Dr. Kennedy assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the Blood, cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder complaints, as well as all those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists.

THE SUN.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1888 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discardad many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in o fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.

THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN'S political course.

THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like THE SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a perfect Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

Address, I. W. ENGLAND,

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY—16 PAGES.

Suited to Boys and Girls of from Six to Sixteen Years.

Vol. III. commences Nov. 1, 1881.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE.

The YOUNG PEOPLE has been from the first successful beyond anticipation.—N. Y. Evening Post.

It has a distinct purpose to which it steadily adheres—that, namely, of supplanting the vicious papers for the young with a paper more attractive, as well as more wholesome.—Boston Journal.

For neatness, elegance of engraving, and contents generally, it is unsurpassed by any publication of the kind yet brought to our notice.—Pittsburg Gazette.

Its weekly visits are eagerly looked for, not only by the children, but also by parents who are anxious to provide pure literature for their girls and boys.—Christian Advocate, Buffalo, N. Y.

A weekly paper for children which parents need not fear to let their children read at the family fireside.—Hartford Daily Times.

Just the paper to take the eye and secure the attention of the boys and girls.—Springfield Union.

TERMS.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE, Per Year, Post Prepaid, $1.50

THE INDEPENDENT.

The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—THE REV. JOSEPH COOK.

ESTABLISHED in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, THE INDEPENDENT at once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight Mormonism, for Civil-Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, more poetry and stories than popular monthlies, and gives more information than an anual cyclopædia. The long cable dispatches recently publ shed from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what THE INDEPENDENT is constantly doing. A list oo the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of THE INDEPENDENT. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science, Pebbles, Personalities, Ministerial Register, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday school, News of the week, Finance, Commerce, Insurance, Stories, Puzzles and Agriculture. 32 Pages in all.

Our New Terms for 1882.

One subscription one year,	$3.00
For 6 months,	1.50; for 3 months, 0.75
One subscription two years,	5.00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance,	5.00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance,	7.00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance,	8.50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance,	10.00
One subscription five years,	10.00

Worldly Trifles.

An eccentric minister was called upon to marry three couples at once. The parties were standing around promiscously, waiting the arrival of the minister, and when he came in he marched up to them, exclaiming! "Sort yourselves!"

During the past five years I have suffered from Catarrh and have used without relief remedies prescribed by various physicians. I was advised to try Ely's Cream Balm; am using it with beneficial results, and feel confident I shall be completely cured of a disease that has seriously affected not only my nostrils but also my eyes and hearing. W. A. Brintzinghoffer, Jr., Wholesale Tobacconist, Newark, N. J. May 29, 1879.

Ely's Cream Balm for the cure of Catarrh is having large sales with me. I think it the best article I have sold for the treatment of these diseases, and take great pleasure in recommending it to my patrons, as I am hearing the most favorable reports of its benficial effects. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.
For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.
I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.
My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the laryux into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.
The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.
I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.
I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufactuer, 185 Washington St., Boston
Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, Jr.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.
Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.
Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

My mother came very near dying from pneumonia last winter, and her lungs were left in a weak condition. Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has stopped the cough and has cured her dizziness. It is the only medicine that would help her. Yours truly. B F Holbrook.
A Boston Merchant's Testimonial
No 27 Court street, Boston, March 13, 1881.
My daughter was prostrated with a terrible cough, after other remedies had failed, and my daughter had become so much worse that we were all completely discouraged, she commenced the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam and after using it less than one bottle she is well. Shall be glad to answer all enquiries. B A Clark.
Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.
"Almost at Death's Door."
114 Shawmut street, Chelsea, March 1, '81.
I was almost at death's door with a cough—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam as strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.
Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs. N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.
Write or call upon Mrs. Russell, and also upon her family Physician for further particulars.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM,
IS SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
PRICES, 50 CENTS AND 1 DOLLAR.

A marked instance of financial integaity has been shown by a Philadelphia firm of dry goods jobbers — Messrs. Hood, Bonbright & Co. About nineteen years ago they failed and made a settlement with their creditors at 75 cents on a dollar. Being thus absolved from all legal complications, they resumed business, and have since enjoyed great prosperity. Last week the firm sent to each of its former creditors the following circular: "Kindly befriended by our creditors at a time when we were needing help, we in after years created a fund intended for their benefit. This we have the pleasure now to offer them. Covering in its equitable application more than the percentage abated in our settlement under the recommendation of their committee of creditors, the excess in each case will represent a pro rata apportionment of interest derived from said fund. In grateful remembrance, therefore, we inclose herewith our check." The total amount distributed by this rare act of integrity is more than $100,000, and the persons to whom it is due number about 150.

BEST ON RECORD.—I believe Ely's Cream Balm the best preparation for Catarrh now on record. My patrons all speak well of it. I have sold one hundred and forty-four bottles in less than five months. I ordered another gross a week ago, and have sold twenty-one bottles from the second gross. It sells upon its merits. John H. Phelps, Druggist, Scranton, Pa. Jan. 28, 1880.

There is no doubt in our judgment that Ely's Cream Balm has intrinsic worth. We hear from many who are using it for Catarrh, of wonderful cures being effected, and without hesitation offer it to our customers as the best remedy for its purposes in use. Dykeman & Mott, Druggists, Catskill, N. Y. Dec. 27, 1880. Price 50 cts. nov30-2w

An artist must be able to see without eyes, and hear without ears, and take the sense of things as though he were disembodied. Had they not ears nor eyes, some people might be artists, but now the outward sense overpowers the inward sensibility. Beethoven was deaf as an adder, but who ever had such ears for melody and harmony. Milton was blind as a bat, but who ever saw such wonders and glories? The true artist, whether sculptor, builder, painter or singer, must be able to make pale things blush and dead things live.—Who, then, in this "bread and butter" age, can, unless by birthright, be an artist?

The holidays are at hand. Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year follow each other in quick succession, as a recompence for a year of toil and care, and a suspension of the struggle for the gratification of the material wants in favor of the indulgence of domestic bliss and the social amenities of life. The holidays are an oasis in the desert of life, where verdure and cooling springs calm the fevered pulse and rest rejuvenates the weary traveller. Let us enjoy the festivals while we may, and carry the enjoyment over, so far as possible, into the stern realities of life beyond, so that every day may be tempered with so much sweetness and charity as to be not only a holy day but a holiday.

A correspondent of the Liverpool Mercury writes: I am willing to risk my reputation as a public man if the worst case of small pox cannot be effectually cured in three days, simply by cream of tartar. This is the sure and never-failing remedy: One ounce of cream of tartar dissolved in a pint of boiling water, to be drank when cold, at short intervals. It can be taken at any time, and is a preventive as well as a curative. It is known to have cured in thousands of cases without a failure. It never leaves a mark; never causes blindness, and always prevents tedious lingering.

Hood makes mention of his seeing a German painter's picture called "Cloud Sand." As he first looked at it, it was all dark, but continuing to look, one cloud after another turned into an angel until a thousand bright presences beamed their radiance upon him. The clouds of our affliction have angels in them. If we look long enough we shall see them.

A subscriber writes from Great Barrington, Mass., that the remedy for rheumatism, by Franz Seller, published January 11, 1877, is worth doubling our whole subscription list, having used it for inflammatory rheumatism with the best results. He took one drop of ammonia in a tablespoonful of water every four hours. The swollen joints resisted longest.

A young church-going lady of a microscopic morality, nearly fainted when a ballet girl lifted her leg somewhat loftily. As she recovered her virtuous complacency, she said: "Dear me, how dreadful it must be to show oneself in that way to so many people—at one time!"

DANIEL LOW,

SALEM.

Every person in Peabody is invited to see our exhibition of fine goods whether they wish to purchase or not. dec 7—3w

The retail stores are already in line with a full assortment of holiday goods and none are more attractive than the "Bee Hive" of FRANK COUSINS in Salem. He has devoted the second story of his store, reached by an easy flight of stairs, to the holiday business, and a glance up stairs reveals an endless variety of toys, games and all sorts of fancy articles. This portion of his store has never before been used by him except to keep duplicates of his general stock, and is devoted to the exclusive display of such goods as are sold at Christmas, not only relieving the other departments of his store from the crowd which is sure to frequent the counters but it gives room to show them to the best advantage. Nearly everything in the way of small articles as well as the most expensive can be found here. Fancy crockery, painted and gilded vases, cologne stands and bottles, all imported goods, are sold at the lowest prices we ever saw for them. Mr. Cousins has the finest assortment of this class of ware that we have seen either in Salem or Boston. His assortment of games, toys, illustrated picture books, etc., is complete and the prices such as to astonish you. He has a good line of standard books, for instance an edition of Dickens' works, finely illustrated, which he is selling at 66 cents per volume. The book would retail for $1.50 in most places. Photographic albums for 19 cents and up to $5.00; frames from a nice plush one for 50 cents to $2.50 and $3.00, very cheap and very pretty; Christmas cards from one cent upwards; very handsome chromos for 19 cents—these are only a few of the remarkable bargains to be found up stairs in Frank Cousins' Bee Hive. Remember the place, and don't forget to look his stock over before commencing your purchases, as you will save time and money by going there.

We call particular attention to the fact that the Essex Institute, of Salem, are to give a course of four chamber concerts, at Plummer Hall, under the direction of Mr. J. Phippen Jr., Curator of Music, commencing Monday evening next, with voice and piano, by Mrs. Georg Henschel (Lillian Bailey) Miss H. A. Brooks and Mr. Phippen. This is to be followed on Monday evenings, as per advertisement in another column. It will be seen that the course will be second to none ever attempted in our neighboring city, and our musical people will at once recognize this as an opportunity to be coveted and enjoyed. They will also remember that Plummer Hall will not seat a large audience, that the tickets are limited, and if the requisite course tickets are sold, there will be no opportuuity to purchase tickets for single concerts. Tickets can be had in Peabody at the drug store of Mr. D. P. Grosvenor.

In selecting useful presents for the holidays, what is a more serviceable and valuable gift than a fine cloak or shawl? In making such selections for Christmas gifts or otherwise, we advise our readers to visit Mr. William R. Weeks, No. 185 Essex street, Salem. In these goods he makes a specialty, as well as in the department of dress goods, of which he always has a choice and elegant assortment. His store is well lighted and easy of access, and he is receiving daily the choicest lines of useful gifts, such as handkerchiefs, embroidered, initial and plain, neck-wear, silk handkerchiefs, japanese ware, and the like. Visit his store and take a look at his goods, which will be cheerfully shown.

The work (Johnson's Encyclopædia) can be FREELY purchased in Boston of more than one dealer at over twenty per cent. less than the subscription rates, which fact any truth seeker can readily ascertain.—Peabody Reporter, Nov. 26.

Will our neighbor please inform us of the publishing houses in Boston other than Estes & Lauriat, at which Johnson's Encyclopædia can be purchased 20 per cent. less than the regular price?

Mr. William Peirce, one of our oldest and most respected citizens, died at his residence Monday, Dec. 5th. Mr. Peirce was identified with the early interests of this town, having engaged in the business of tanning leather at an early age, which business he had successfully carried on, in late years, in connection with his son, until the time of his decease. In all that pertains to the business of the town in this branch of industry, he has always taken an active interest. Quiet and unostentatious in his manner, he was honorable and just in all his dealings, and won the respect and esteem of all with whom he was brought into business relations.—His funeral will take place to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon, at one o'clock, from the Universalist Church, to which relatives and friends are invited.

We understand that a meeting of the directors of the Peabody High School Association is to be held to-morrow night. We trust they will take into advisement the feasibility of calling a public meeting of the Alumni, with a view either of renewing the meetings of the Alumni, or forming a new association. Our town is far behind other cities and towns in this respect. With the large number of resident Alumni of the School, there ought to be a flourishing association. In our neighboring town of Danvers, they have inaugurated and carried on very successfully a course of entertainments of a better character than is usually brought to that town. With the spasmodic attacks that are made by persons who are not in sympathy with the High School system, it should have an interested and enthusiastic alumni, to rally to its support.

The second entertainment of the Odd Fellows' Course will be given to-morrow (Thursday) evening, by the Park Instrumental Quartette, assisted by J. P. Cobb, humorist. This quartette consists of the Park family, who are all natural and talented musicians, and a really fine programme has been arranged for the occasion. We clip from the Lowell Citizen the following;

"The Park Quartette played three selections, two on brass and one on string instruments. To say they gave satisfaction is weak praise. They did more. The entertainment was so very pleasing that it is understood another concert will soon be given by the company."

Mr. Cobb is a humorist and vocalist who has acheived quite a reputation, and altogether the entertainment promises to be as enjoyable as any that has been given at the Institute this season. A few choice seats only for the rest of the course can be obtained at Fernald & Sawyer's, as also single tickets for this evening at 35 and 50 cents each.

Coasting.

A WINTER'S IDYL,

BY JENNIE MARTEL.
(V. M. S.)

FIRST MOVEMENT.

The moon and the stars pour their silvery light
Adown through the azure of winter's soft night;
The snow that has fallen lies quiet and sweet
On valley and hillside, and woodland and street;
Unsullied it lies, in a beauty not known,
To crystalline banks that are driven and blown;
A million pure flakes, like the dress of a bride,
When proudly she stands by her chosen one's side,
Have decked the old earth—'tis a beautiful sight—
In spangles and spars of a bridal of white;
In field or by fireside, a night such as this,
New England well knows, invites us to bliss.

SECOND MOVEMENT.

And nights like this, to joys,
God gives, out doors, for boys;
The snow is soft and white,
And all the flakes invite,
With common voice they call
On me, and you, and all;
As, with a voice of prayer,
They call, "Come where we are."

And out from many a home
The boys, they come, they come;
They hear the snow's sweet voice
Invite them, and rejoice.
They bless the stars of night,
Whose silver-shining light
Falls, like a bridal robe,
To dress and deck the globe.

Boys never dream of bliss
Indoors, such nights as this;
And girls do not expect
To find the full effect,
On moss or marble floors,
Of all their hopes—indoors;
But girls, as well as boys,
Look outward for their joys.

Away, then, what's sedate!
There is a book of fate,
And in that book 'tis writ,
That wisdom is but wit.
If this be so, then mirth
Is wisdom's child on earth,
And gentle, gleeful joy
Is God's sweet angel-boy.

Be gone, be gone, dull care!
The snow has heard our prayer;
Up where it hung, on high
In clouds, it heard our cry;
It heard our cry—"O Snow,
Come down to us below,
The boys and girls are sad,
Come, Snow, and make them glad."

And for their dear sport's sake,
The snow fell, flake by flake:
Too pure, too soft, too sweet,
It seemed for grown-up feet.
It had a voice to say,
"O earth, I'm here to-day
To help the outdoor joys
Of all the girls and boys."

The night comes on apace,
All set with spangled grace,
The rarest night the earth,
Since time's primeval birth,
Has ventured to display,
To match the blaze of day:
While sea, and earth, and air,
It's glories all declare.

"Come Sue, and Fan, and Bess,"
Said Fred. "and all the rest;"
And thus much having said,
He started with his sled;
As, when a single sheep
Jumps by a single leap
And leads the flock, so Fred
Led all, and went ahead.

And Bess, with the sweet grace
Of Cupids in her face,
Just slyly said to Fred,
"O take me on your sled."
It was a well-timed hit,
For Fred was just a bit
Before inclined, I guess,
To share his sled with Bess.

And many nights, since then,
Have shone on boys and men;
And stars and suns have set,
But Fred and Bess are yet
In life's delightful slide,
Still sitting side by side,
(With joy let it be said,)
Together on the sled.

And this of Fred we know,
He blesses now the snow,
And says, to girls and boys,
Outdoors for winter's joys.
And as for modest Bess,
You need not stop to guess,
That she is glad she said,
"O take me on your sled."

MORAL.

THIRD MOVEMENT.

If, out in the night, with the stars overhead,
The girl you love best should incline to your sled,
Just take her aboard, and with courage and cheer,
Start off for a slide and take care how you "steer;"
Once started together, you may not come back,
So stick to each other, the sled, and the track.

Selected Story.

An Incident of the War.

"Do you see that young lady in white talking with Clarke?"

The speaker was a tall distinguished-looking man of thirty-five, in the uniform of a cavalry company in the Confederate service. The time was a summer night in 1863; the place, a hotel parlor in a small village in Middle Tennesee. The occasion was a hop given in honor of "Forrest cavalry," the daring riders whose names are household words in Southern homes, from the mountains of Tennessee to the valleys of the Mississippi. The young lady referred to was a pretty, graceful girl, with dark gray eyes, waving hair of a dark, reddish gold, and the exquisite complexion that accompanies it.

"Who is she?" asked the Colonel's companion.

"That is Picton's sweetheart, Miss Garnet."

"Not the same that saved his life after Shiloh?" said Captain Barclay.

"The same," rejoined Colonel Terry. "She is a little creature to do such a thing, but she did. You see she was in the neighborhood at the time of the battle, and somebody told her that Picton was killed. She went over the field and found him badly wounded through the lungs, but still alive. She sent a boy that she had brought with her to hunt up a surgeon, and she stayed by Picton. The boy found Dr. Cowan, and when they had got back Miss Garnet had raised Picton up, with his head on her breast, so that he could breathe more easily. Dr. Cowan examined the wound without moving him, and told her that he was afraid it was hopeless, for the least motion, even laying him down again, might produce a fatal hemorrhage. If he could be kept perfectly quiet until morning, and the bleeding checked during the night, he might have a bare chance of pulling through. 'Well,' said the brave little woman, 'he shall be kept quiet' for I will stay just here, and not let him move.' And, by George, she did; she never stirred all night, and in the morning they carried him to the nearest house, and she nursed him until he was out of danger."

"That's a sweetheart worth having," said Captain Barclay, with a glance of admiration at the subject of their conversation.

Half an hour later Colonel Terry was at Miss Garnet's side, receiving a warm greeting that told her that the two were fast friends.

'Tell me of all my friends in the old battalion,' she said presently.

'How many?' he asked quizzically, 'more than one?'

'I mean what I said,' she answered, with a merry laugh and a quick, bright blush. 'I have heard from 'one' of them very recently.'

'Does Charlie know you are here?' asked the Colonel.

'No; it is a week since I left Memphis. Will they join you here?'

'They?' he replied, inquiringly.

'The rest of the command, I mean,' she replied, blushing again.

'A portion of it may, but for that part you are particularly interested in I cannot say. You know they are with the old General, and their movements can't be counted on with any degree of certainty.'

'They are the comets of the service,' said Miss Garnet. 'Quite as erratic, at all events."

'May I have the pleasure of this dance?' said the Colonel, as the band struck up a quadrille. 'I know it is useless to ask you for a waltz.'

The dance over he led her to a chair, and after a moment's gay badinage, was about to resign his place in favor of other claimants for her smiles, when he saw a sudden pallor overspread her features.

'Miss Alice, you are ill!' he exclaimed, anxiously. 'Let me get you some water.'

It was scarcely a moment before his return, but even then he was shocked at her white, drawn face.

'Call my sister!' she said to another gentleman with her, while Colonel Terry had gone for the water, and both reached her at the same time.

'Lucy, take me home,' she whispered. 'I am dying.'

'Oh, no, darling,' said her sister, tenderly; 'you will be well in the morning.'

As quickly as possible the carriage was called, and the sick girl placed in it.

When they were just starting, Colonel Terry wished them good night, expressing his hope that Miss Alice would have recovered by morning. She put out her hand, and exerting her strength, said distinctly: 'Yes, I shall be well in the morning. Tell Charley—' her voice failed, and lifting her slim, white hand, she loosened the flowers she wore at her breast and put them into the Colonel's hand. 'Give these to him—yes—in the morning.' Her voice died away into a faint whisper, and her head fell back on her sister's shoulder. The lady who had acted as their chaperon hastened to apply restoratives, and the carriage rolled swiftly away.

The next morning, when Colonel Terry called to inquire after the invalid hae had no need to ask, for from the door there floated the mournful insignia of death. Shocked beyond expression, that hardy soldier turned away, unable even to offer his services if they were needed. He went again after awhile, and saw Mrs. Cameron, the hostess of the sisters during their visit. From her he learned the brief details of Alice's death. Her attack had been a sudden spasm of the heart, and she had never rallied.—She had spoken but once, and they caught her lover's name and a repetition of the words, 'In the morning.'

'Poor Charley! Who will tell him!' groaned the Colonel when the lady's voice ceased. 'You are his best friend,' she answered. 'I think no one else can do it so gently.'

'I can't,' he replied, shaking his head 'I would rather face a battery. Why, you didn't know, you can't think how his very life seems bound up in her, and now—'

They buried her the next morning; six of Picton's friends carried his dead love to her grave, and then came sadly back, each questioning who would bear the tidings to the gallant sabreur far away with the old brigade.

That night the order came to join the old command, and by daylight the troops were miles away. As they reached the appointed rendezvous a desultory firing warned them of an approaching conflict. Presently they formed themselves in the midst of a portion of the command, drawn up in a piece of wood overlooking a sloping field, which, on the opposite side, rose to a sharp eminence, on the brow of which was posted a Federal battery.

Further to the right the firing had become sharper, and soon the roll of musketry swept all along the line.

'I say, Barclay,' called out Colonel Terry, as that officer passed him, 'have you seen Picton yet?' And as Barclay shook his head, added: 'Tell the boys not to let him know yet. Wait till this is over.'

'All right; I'll tell them,' answered Barclay as he rode away.

'The old General will be wanting that battery the first thing they know,' said one of the men, as a shell exploded over their heads.—'They had better keep it quiet.'

'Thar! what did I tell you!' he added, biting off a huge piece of 'long-green.' 'Thar go the Mississippi boys now.'

As he spoke a tawny column moved out and swept gallantly out of the woods. But as they reached the centre a murderous round of grape and canister tore through their ranks, and the column broke in confusion. Three times their leader rallied them to the charge, and three times they were shattered by the galling fire.

'Tell you what, boys,' called out the private who had before spoken, 'thar's fun coming now. That's Gage's bugle. The old regiment want some of the pie!'

He stooped and felt his saddle-girth as he spoke, then straightened himself and waited for the command, for he was 'one of the boys.' The next moment there was a ringing cheer from the ranks as General Forrest rode up.

'Boys,' he exclaimed, pointing with his sword, 'I want that battery captured. One regiment has tried and couldn't take it. Now I want you to do better than that. I am going to lead you, and I want you all to follow me.'

Another cheer was the answer, as the men fell into the ranks.

'Charge!' and up the slope rode the gallant old regiment, never faltering as the grape-shot swept through the serried ranks, closing each gap as it was made by the deadly fire; on, on, following the lead of the tall figure at the head of the column, till they rode right over the death dealing guns, 'sabering the gunners there,' and the woods gave back the ringing echoes of the famous 'rebel yell' as the victory was won.

Won! Yes, but at what fearful cost! The fatal slope was drenched with the blood of the Southland's bravest sons.

After the charge Colonel Terry found himself face to face with Charlie Picton. 'My God, how can I tell him?' muttered the Colonel to himself, as the gallant young fellow rode towards him, holding out his hand.

'It takes the old regiment to do things in style!' he said, grasping the Colonel's hand. 'Say, Terry, did you see Miss Alice? Coleman has just got back from Memphis, and he told me she had gone on a visit to some friends in C——'

But as he spoke he suddenly put his hand to his side. 'I am shot!' he gasped faintly. It was true. A stray bullet had struck him in the side, and Colonel Terry caught him as he reeled from his saddle and rode with him to the field hospital.

When the surgeon examined the wound he shook his head doubtfully. 'I know a nurse worth twenty doctors,' whispered Picton with a smile. 'Terry, can't you fetch her to me?'

Through the night the Colonel stayed with him. Once he awakened and repeated the question he had asked before he was shot.

'I saw her, yes,' the Colonel answered huskily. 'She sent you some flowers.'

The blue eyes lighted with a tender glow, and Picton held out his hand.

Silently Colonel Terry took from his breast pocket the withered flowers, a spray of ivy and a half-open white rose, and laid them in his outstretched hand.

The wounded man slept. But in a couple of hours he awoke, much worse, and the surgeon in his rounds told the bronzed watcher that the end was near.

'Terry,' and the Colonel bent his head to catch the faint accents. 'I am dying; I wouldn't mind—only—poor Alice! Tell her gently, please—she loves me, you know—and I, oh, Terry! it is hard to leave her. My poor darling!'

For a moment the Colonel could not answer. Then, choking back a sob, he said, slowly, and distinctly: 'Charley, Alice is waiting for you. You are not leaving her, but going to her.'

A bewildered troubled look came into the wistful blue eyes.

'Don't you understand me, Charley? She is dead. We buried her there in C——. I wouldn't tell you before, dear old boy. But now you will be with her before you have time to grieve after her. She died with your name on her lips murmuring of meeting you in the morning.'

He understood now, and a smile of relief flitted across his pale lips. 'Dear girl,' he murmured. 'I am so glad she will not have this grief to bear.'

Then he slept again and the hours passed on until the eastern sky brightened with the solemn dawn of light.

'Terry!' The word was but the faintest whisper, but the watcher instantly bent his head to listen.

'It is morning,' came the faint, gasping accents, and again the white lids drooped over the blue eyes. Five—ten minutes passed. Then Colonel Terry lifted the dead hands and crossed them over the pulseless breast, reverently covered the still white face, and turned away.

His two friends had met once more—'in the morning' of a fadeless day.—New York Express.

KEEP YOUR SCALP CLEAN.

The best thing out for removing Dandruff is

HEYLINGBERG'S
EUREKA DANDRUFF REMOVER.

It has been thoroughly tested by hundreds of gentlemen, Ladies, and Children, and we have plenty of testimonials of its good results. It is cooling, removes Dandruff, Invigorates the roots of the hair, and will quickly produce a strong and beautiful growth in all cases where the roots of the hair are not fully dead, and will stop this unpleasant itching; in fact it is the best hair dressing in use. It is not greasy or sticky, and is warranted free of all oils, and poisins, and will prove the cleanest, safest and most economical Hair Dressing to be found.

Peabody, Mass., Nov. 18, 1881.

Mr. J. J. Heylingberg, Dear Sir:—Both myself and wife have used your Eureka Dandruff Remover for some time, with the most satisfactory results, and recommend it as being indispensable for the toilet. Yours truly,

FRANK A. BRAGDON.

Many more testimonials furnished if desired.

Persons suffering from diseases of the scalp will be attended at the house when desired.

Anecdotes.

AFTER EIGHTY YEARS.

Many of those who are conversant with the history of the French Revolution may not be familia with the episode which France has just glorified by the erection of a monument to Joseph Barra. His name was almost unknown, even to his own countrymen; and this tardy recognition of his worth, eighty years after the deeds which gild his honorable name, has set the world wondering "who was Joseph Barra." His tale may be told in the few words addressed by Robespierre to the convention: "Joseph Barra was a boy who, at the early age of thirteen, preferred death to dishonor. The gallant boy was captured by the Vendeans, who offered him his liberty if he would cry Vive le Roi. He responded by shouting Vive le Republique, and they shot him. He was the sole support of his mother. His love for her equaled only his love for his country. It were impossible to find a nobler example, either for stirring up in the youthful mind the love for honor, country, and virtue, or for preparing the prodigies which the rising generation will be called upon to perform. I demand that the honors of the Pantheon shall be awarded with all pomp. The convention will thus reward every virtue—heroism, courage, filial affection, and patriotism." Robespierre called upon the sculptor David to illustrate the boy's great deed with his chisel, but all these arrangements were upset by the bullet which crashed through Robespierre's jaw into his brain. The posthumous honor to Joseph Barra was thus postponed for fourscore years, but at last his heroism was recorded in a monument.

REED BIRD SHOOTING IN DELAWARE.

As they go southward in the fall, our favorite meadow singers, the bobolinks, take to the marshes and become reed birds, much sought after by sportsmen and pot hunters. At Chester, Delaware, the headquarters of the bird shooters of the State, there are forty professional "pushers." The shooting begins the first of September. The Philadelphia Times makes a brief estimate of the results of a month's shooting. At Chester, at the Lazaretto, and the two hundred club houses that line both banks of the Delaware from League Island to Marcus Hook, there will be at least nine hundred shooters daily. At the former two places two thousand birds daily—taking the scores of those who push themselves and of the professional shooters—will be killed. Eight hundred gunners daily from the private club houses is but a fair count, and, giving them each a score of ten birds daily, the total will be ten thousand birds killed every day in the month of September, an aggregate of three hundred thousand scored at the above places alone. This is but a meagre approximation of the grand total, probably ranging over one million when the marshes from Bombay Hook to Bordentown are included in the estimate.

TIN CANS.

Who can assign bounds to the demand for tinned or canned oysters from Baltimore, lobsters from Maine, salmon from Alaska, peaches from Florida and Maryland? One petroleum firm in the city of New York is said to cut up six hundred boxes (thirty tons) of tin plate daily. No less than one million six hundred thousand boxes are already absorbed yearly by the United States, more than three-fold the consumption of the Continent of Europe, of which quantity a full tenth goes to pack sardines at Nantes. Australian meat craves an ever-increasing supply, while British biscuits, mustard and gunpowder range in bright canisters all over the would. The home consumption is variously estimated at between five hundred thousand and seven hundred and fifty thousand boxes per annum, but the returns to Government have not been ample and unreserved enough for any accurate figures to be laid down.—The Saturday Review.

RELIGIOUS NOTE.

"Now, my dear children," said an Austin Sunday-school teacher, "do you understand the meaning of the text, 'It is better to give than to receive?'"

They all said they did.

"Now, Johnny Fizzletop, give me an illustration of the text."

Johnny, who had just got through with the mumps, replied:

"I reckon it is better to give your neighbor's family the mumps than to take them."

"Next," said the indignant teacher, "what is it we should be more willing to give than to receive?"

"A cuff alongside of the head," was the response.

Then the teacher, who was from the North, sent in his resignation to the Senate. —Texas Siftings.

NOVEL FISHING.

One of the old domestic sports of the Earls of Montieth in their island home of Falla was fishing with trained geese. A line with a baited hook was tied to the leg of a goose, which, thus accoutred, was made to swim in water of a proper depth. A boat well filled escorted this formidable knight-errant. A marauding pike would take off the bait and put his mettle to the test; a combat ensued, in which both would show much strength and agility; but at length the goose invariably dragged the pike off a prisoner.

The world was never intended for a house of mourning. The flowers are not painted black, nor is every bird a crow.

A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck. James A. Garfield.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 22, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO., Gentlemen: I have taken Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and have derived great benefit from it. I have been troubled for about eight years with Kidney Disease and Gravel. I never suffered particularly from it until last fall. I was then afflicted with excrutiating pain that rose from my right kidney to my bladder. I was also greatly troubled with making my water. I could not retain it, and was obliged to go to the urinal a number of times a day. I tried a great many different remedies and took quantities of medicine without any seeming benefit or relief. I grew worse and I suffered distressing pains across my right kidney, and it was with great difficulty that I walked. Finally, about three weeks ago, I was induced to try your remedy. The first I took of it seemed to make me feel worse, but I continued, notwithstanding, and in a short time I began to improve. I have now taken a bottle of it, and am going to continue it. I have been wonderfully benefited. The pains have left me and I am not troubled with my water, and altogether I am feeling a different person. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has done it all.

Charles F. Kinsman

Essex street.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 21, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.—Gentlemen: About 10 years ago my first trouble began with a falling and retrocession of the womb, and the tortures I underwent are beyond description. I was attended by two of the most eminent physicians in the country and underwent a number of operations for tumors; but all that science and skill could do was ineffectual. I grew worse and worse year after year until my sufferings, from a complication of diseases, turned into Bright's disease, and all hopes of recovery, even by my physicians, were given up. However, I recovered for a time from this spell; at times being better and at times being worse. An analysis of my water showed large quantities of albumen. I had excruciating pains in my kidneys and across my abdomen towards the bladder, which compelled me to lie on my right for so long a time that at last large bed sores formed. I tried different remedies which were said to be good for Bright's disease, but they were ineffectual and made me worse. Cold chills would creep over me, up my spine, and through my head. My appetite was entirely gone, and I was so thoroughly emaciated and in such a frightful condition that my living at all was a mystery, even to my physician. Finally, last January, my husband purchased 10 bottles of your remedy and prevailed upon me to use it; and although from my previous experience with proprietary medicine, I had little or no faith in them, yet I had read so much about Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure that I began taking it, and did not experience any benefit from it until I had taken the third bottle, when I began to improve. I persevered in taking your remedy, and before long I was able to be up and around. My appetite returned and I began steadily to gain flesh. I have taken altogether 27 bottles and still continue its use, and my friends and neighbors look upon me in astonishment. I would also say that before taking your remedy I suffered dreadfully with painful incustinations and great flowing and bad convulsions, and I was also affected with hemorrhoids. It seemed as if I were to be a martyr to all the pains and ills that flesh is heir to. But thanks to Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, I am now entirely free from any sufferings in that respect. I feel, as it were, like a new being. It is at times hard for me to realize the wonderful change; I am endowed with new life, all owing to your magnificent remedy. It has saved my life, and my gratitude to you is unbounded. My case is so prominent here that any one who desires to know more about it can write to Beverly, and they can receive the desired information. I make this reference because those living away from here sometimes doubt such statements as I have made. Your remedy is a blessing.

Carrie L. Wallis

P. O. Box 398.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 21, '81.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.,—Gentlemen: The statement of my wife does not begin to express the suffering she underwent. We did not think it possible for her to live. Your remedy has no doubt saved her life. It is a grand thing, and you cannot think how thankful I am for it.

Henry B. Wallis

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where hope was abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in all diseases of the kidneys, liver or urinary organs. If any one who reads this has any physical trouble, remember the great danger of delay. nov 30—4w

A GREETING TO OLD AND NEW FRIENDS

The Boston WEEKLY JOURNAL has long enjoyed the deserved reputation of being the representative newspaper of its class in the New England States. It has a constituency second to none in numbers or intelligence, and is each year commanding a wider field of influence. Its success among the reading classes of New England has been due to the liberal policy of its management, to the care and skill employed in its preparation, to its extensive sources of information, to the variety and timeliness of its contents, and to the acknowledged honesty of its views. These qualities, upon which every newspaper must rely for permanent or worthy success, will characterize it in the future as they have in the past, and it is the confident expectation of its managers that the year to come will witness a better development of it than ever before. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in all respects a newspaper WHICH NO MAN IN ANY DEGREE REMOVED FROM THE GREAT CENTRES OF INFORMATION CAN AFFORD TO DO WITHOUT.

THE ADVANTAGES TO THE READER.

It has never been so well equipped as now for the securing and effective presentation of the facts and discussion of the tendencies of the times. With the growth of the country, and the increasing prosperity which may reasonably be expected to accompany it, a good newspaper becomes indispensable to the man who would keep himself informed upon whatever is interesting the world at large. A well conducted journal of the times gives men better knowledge, broader views and keener sympathies, and draws them out of the demands of their individual lives upon a higher plane of thought and feeling.

ITS PECULIAR CHARACTERISTICS.

THE WEEKLY JOURNAL aims to furnish those who have not much time for reading with a full and comprehensive digest of the events of the day. Its purposes are to inform men upon the courses of government, politics and business, to present the news of the day and show its tendencies, and to give instructive facts and desirable information. With every resource known to modern journalism at its command, it unhesitatingly asserts its ability to do this, and invites an examination of its claims.

A YEAR OF GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST.

The coming year bids fair to be one of exceptional interest. All citizens will look upon the condition of political affairs with intentness, and watch their development with care. Some of the most important questions of the day are awaiting discussion and solution, and in the close balancing of political parties in Congress a more than ordinary concern in national affairs will be excited. The course of the new Administration will also attract much attention, since a remarkable interest attaches to President Arthur in view of the melancholy fate of his predecessor, whose chair he was so suddenly called to fill. Washington, therefore, will for many months be a centre of gaze for Americans, and all will desire a full and intelligent account of what transpires in it.—THE WEEKLY JOURNAL, through its skillful and well - known correspondents, "Perley" and "Webb," will be supplied with the most exhaustive and careful accounts of affairs while the dispatches of the Associated Press will supplement their labors. "Perley's" accounts of social life in Washington, which are admitted to be among the best furnished to the press from the Capital, will also, as heretofore, be a feature of the paper. In the field of general news, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will display a greater energy than ever before. The general press dispatches will be supported by SPECIAL ACCOUNTS OF MATTERS OF WIDE INTEREST,

And, especially, much space will be given to the material interests of the country. As the paper has a large support among the farming community, particular attention will be given

TO AGRICULTURAL AFFAIRS.

Special articles by the "Young Farmer" will be a marked feature of the coming year, and the markets for produce in this city, together with the condition of the crops in all parts of the country, will be fully reported from time to time.

ITS POLITICAL CHARACTER.

Politically, THE JOURNAL will remain in earnest support of the Republican party and its principles, criticising measures freely irrespective of party lines when occasion demands, but holding to the processes and theories of government which for the past twenty years have steadily improved their claims to popular confidence. The paper will support the principles of the freedom and integrity of the ballot, the maintenance of the national credit, the protection of American industries, a practical Civil Service system and a sound finance, believing that thus only can the dignity and power of the Government be upheld, or the prosperity upon which the country has entered be made permanent.

THE WORLD ABROAD.

THE JOURNAL will also continue the valuable and instructive discussion of foreign men and affairs which Mr. Edward King has so long and so ably carried on. He is admitted to be the best of European correspondents, and none other is so much quoted and commended. Other special features will be "The Kennebecker's" entertaining descriptions of sea life and strange countries, "M. E. B.'s" "Rambling Talks" and other papers of literary merit, besides which a wide and careful selection will be made of the best current reading of the day. Great attention will also be given to New England affairs, and matters of interest in which the paper circulates will be given special prominence. Correspondents from all important points will contribute information, to which the telegraphic dispatches and the exchanges of THE JOURNAL will add as occasion requires. Altogether, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will be better than ever before, and will commend itself to the intelligence and taste of the reading public of New England. Each issue of THE WEEKLY JOURNAL contains THIRTY-SIX LONG COLUMNS

THE SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL,

Published on Tuesdays and Fridays, is a paper of especial value to persons engaged in commercial pursuits outside the large cities. It contains, in addition to all the news of the day, the fullest possible market, commercial and marine reports, besides a large amount of valuable reading matter of a miscellaneous character. THE BOSTON SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL is a paper which no man actively engaged in trade and watching the course of mercantile affairs can afford to be without

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

The President's Message.

The present week signalizes the re-assembling of Congress, and the publication of the first message to that body by President Arthur. For the first time for a number of years. the Republicans are in a majority in the House of Representatives, and have thus elected a Speaker. The leading point of interest has been, reasonably, the President's Message, which is given in full to the country this morning. It is longer than many anticipated, and is a clear and able paper, showing that President Arthur appreciates fully the responsibility of his position. He alludes feelingly, at the outset, to the tragic death of our late President; refers to the foreign sympathy which has been so strongly manifested towards this country, and gives this as the feeling which prompted the saluting of the British flag at the Yorktown Celebration. He thinks that the internal revenue taxes except in tobacco, and distilled spirits and fermented liquors can with safety be abolished. He also advises the repealing of the stamp law regarding matches, proprietary articles, cards and checks, which we think represents the almost unanimous sentiment of the people. In reference to the Star route cases, he takes a very decided stand, and states that he has enjoined upon the government officials the necessity of punishing all parties who have been guilty of frauds in this department. His recommendation in regard to polygamy is very positive, and he gives assurance that he shall gladly enforce a strict law in regard to this vexed question, and advises that a law be passed allowing the wife of a polygamist to testify in court against her husband. In civil service reform, much interest has been manifested as to what his views would be in his message, and it will be seen that they are clear and frank, and that he does not think favorably of a strictly competitive examination. Taken as a whole, the message we think will compare favorably with that of his predecessors, and will meet with general approval, especially if the measures recommended by him be carried out by Congress.

EIGHT DOCTORS who have made a study of mental diseases testified as witnesses for the defence in the Guiteau trial last Monday. A hypothetical question, in which the points relating to the prisoner's mental condition as set forth by the defence, including the insanity in his family, and his alleged belief that he acted upon inspiration, were assumed to be true, was read to them, and they were asked whether upon that state of things they thought Guiteau was insane. Seven of them gave it as their opinion that he was. Dr. Worcester, of Salem, would not express an opinion because he wanted a clearer explanation of the word inspiration than Mr. Scoville gave him. The prisoner informed him that he used the word inspiration as an interjection of divine power in his mind, and not as a conception of his own brain. The witness insisting upon a more precise interpretation, he was told by the prisoner's counsel, "with some asperity of manner," that if he did not understand the question he might stand aside. Dr. W. may be summoned by the prosecution.

Gen. Eben Sutton of No. Andover, accompanied by his wife and daughter, will soon sail for Europe where they intend to remain several months.

VOLUNTEER FAIR.

The fair of the Volunteer Engine company closed this evening with the drawing, in Town Hall, of the different prizes which had been selected to be distributed to the fortunate holders of the season tickets bearing the lucky numbers drawn. The Fair has been a decided success, and will net a handsome sum to the disabled comrade for whose benefit the proceeds are to be devoted. A very large number of season tickets have been sold, and the various articles at the tables, including the book prizes, have been disposed of readily. It is a high compliment to the generous spirit of the Volunteer Co. in suggesting and carrying out the project, and to the liberality, not only of our own citizens, but of the firemen of other towns and cities who have so eagerly co-operated in making the affair a deed of noble charity. It was intended to close the fair on Saturday evening, but the continued success warranted its closing to be still further delayed until this evening. As was stated in our last issue, the Order of Hibernians of Salem, accompanied by the National band of Lynn, attended the fair in a body on Tuesday, the opening night. They were met at the big tree by the Volunteer Co., headed by the Salem Brass band, and escorted to the hall. On Wednesday evening the Hibernians of this town and a portion of the Salem fire department, attended the Fair.—Thursday evening the Marblehead fire department, together with the remainder of the Salem department, were present, and after the fair closed, the Volunteers entertained them in royal style at their engine house. On Friday night the William Penn Hose Co. accompanied by the Salem Brass band made a visit with full ranks. This night the award was made of the silver trumpet to the J. A. Lord Hose Co. of Salem, they having sold 296 tickets. The companies selling the next largest number were the M. A. Pickett Engine Co. of Marblehead, who had sold 293, and the Gen. Putnam Engine Co. of So. Weymouth. who had sold 272. On Saturday evening there was a large sprinkling of firemen from all parts of the county. Music was furnished by Upton's Quadrille band. of seven pieces, who supplied excellent music. This evening the contest for the sword and belt, to be given to the officer of the military company in Salem receiving the largest number of votes, closed, and the counting of the vote showed that Lieut. Brown, of the Salem Light Infantry, had 1747 votes; Lieut. E. W. Abbott, of the 2d Corps of Cadets, 1742 1-2 votes; Lieut. Allard, of the Mechanic Light Infantry, 332 1-2 votes. The votes were 10 cents each.

On Monday evening the Volunteer Co., with the Salem Brass band, assembled at the engine house, and marched in a body to the hall of the St. John's C. T. A. Society, where the Society was taken under escort and marched through some of the principal streets of the town to Upton's hall.

The book prizes have been quite an important item in the receipts of the Fair, and they have been drawn on different evenings during its progress.—Below we give a list of them with the names of the parties obtaining them:

Bird and Cage, Ticket No. 42, Eunice Patterson, Boston.

There are a few book prizes, small articles, which are yet to be drawn. It will be done at the engine house, and announced at some future time.

The event of the evening was of course the drawing of the prizes which took place at the Town Hall at eight o'clock. The settees were removed, and the hall was packed. The drawing was under the supervision of the Board of Engineers, and 4836 coupons were in the wheel, which was the number of tickets sold. We give the full list of the drawing. Some of the lucky names did not have their residence put down in the book of record, consequently we are not able to locate all of them.—Those who hold the numbers will of course readily recognize them.

Philip Phillips, the celebrated singer, assisted by his son, gave an evening of song at the Methodist Church this evening. A fair audience was present, and the vocalists gave general satisfaction. Mr. Phillips has a national reputation as a singer of sacred song, and has given his entertainments in nearly all the countries of the civilized world. The charm of his songs is in his expression of the sentiment, and of his distinct vocalism. His son has a very sweet and powerful voice, blending very harmoniously with that of his father's. Mr. Phillips gave, among others, his song, "Your Mission," which was repeated in the Hall of Congress at the request of Abraham Lincoln.

The Naumkeag Clothing Co. of Salem, will soon have, with the exception of their large store in Boston, the largest store in Massachusetts. They have leased the art store adjoining their present one. The partition will be removed and new, large, plate windows put in the front, thus giving a frontage of between 40 and 50 feet, and the store will be 110 feet deep, besides a children's department 85 x 26 feet. This mammoth establishment will be lighted by ten electric lights, which will make it as light as day at all times. Such enterprise is deserving of success.

Our readers should not fail to attend the Art Exhibit at the Unitarian Chapel which opened this afternoon. It is the finest show ever attempted in this town, consisting of all kinds of fancy handiwork, painting, and art work.—There are also some specimens of very antique work, which alone are worth a long journey to see. We heard an art connoisseur remark that it surpassed the exhibit in the Mechanics' Fair. It will continue through Friday afternoon and evening, and the ladies hope to realize a handsome sum from the exhibition, which they certainly deserve.

POLICE NOTES. — Michael Ahern, for being drunk, 4 months in the House of Correction.

Patrick Gurham of Lynn, for being drunk, was fined $5.85, and was sent to Salem Jail.

Thomas Heeney, vagrant, 4 months in the House of Correction.

Found—A large brass key. Inquire at Station House.

The "Winter's Idyl," on our second page, our readers will recognize as from the pen of Rev. V. M. Simons, formerly of this town. It is taken from "Our Folks" a paper published by him in Woburn.

The official vote for Senator in the 2d Essex district gives Horton 2,158, Jos. Gregory, 1230, all others, 706; Horton's majority, 222.

The Unknown Prize at the Volunteer Fair was a Silver Water Pitcher, gold-lined, and is valued at $25.00.

Who's Billy—the lucky winner of the $500 prize at the Fair?

Look out for the grand circular announcement of the great sale of crockery and holiday goods at William Donnell's, Dustin Building.—Adv.

PROBATE NOTICE.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Essex, ss. Probate Court.

To the Heirs-at-law, Next of Kin, and all other Persons interested in the estate of EBEN M. TAYLOR, late of Peabody, in said county, shoemaker, deceased,
Greeting:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court for Probate by Mary A. Taylor, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her the executrix therein named, and that she may be exempt from giving a surety or sureties on her bond, for the reasons alleged in said petition. You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Salem, in said county of Essex, on the first Monday of January next, at nine o'clock before noon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said Mary A. Taylor is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Peabody Press, printed at Peabody, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE F. CHOATE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this tenth day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one. J. T. MAHONEY, dec 7—3w Register.

L. B. S.

There will be a meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent Society at the house of Mrs. Abel Proctor, Sewall street, on Wednesday afternoon and evening, December 14. Supper at 6 1-2.

NOW IS THE TIME

TO BUY GIFTS

FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Next week the regular Christmas rush will begin, and you cannot then select them with the same deliberation or comfort you can now, nor will you find so complete an assortment from which to do so.

Any lady or gentleman who has not yet decided upon what to give, will do well to call and look through our stock. It will assist you to come to a conclusion. In it you will find many articles that have never suggested themselves to your mind, and which may be among the most appropriate presents you could give.

For us to enumerate, in so limited a space, all the articles suitable for Holiday Gifts to be found in our large and varied stock, would be impossible, but we will mention a few of those most called for.

Plush Toilet Sets, Silk and Satin (painted and embroidered) Sets, Cushions, Handkerchief Holders, Whisk Broom Holders, Towel Racks, Thermometers, &c. Some of the above are worth $10 per set, and would make a really beautiful present from a gentleman to a lady.

Albums, Fancy Leather Goods, Fans, Fur-lined Circulars, Fur-trimmed Silk Dolmans, Silk Dress Patterns, Carpets, Rugs, Kid Gloves, Lace Scarfs, Handkerchiefs, Writing Desks, Children's Books, Baskets, etc.

Our stock is all new, and we sell you as low in price as any house in the United States.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The first meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was held at the West Peabody School House Hall, Friday evening, Dec. 2, the President, Mr. J. E. Herrick, presiding. The programme for the evening was a lecture by Mr. F. H. Appleton and election of officers. As the speaker was not able to be present, Mr. E. C. Farwell read the lecture as written for the occasion. He congratulated the officers and members of the club with the success of their last season's work, and urged them as they entered upon their second season to each and all so exert their energies and influence that their good work will so increase in interest that their membership will tell of its influence, too. The speaker spoke briefly upon the sad blot upon our nation's history by the death of our beloved President, James A. Garfield, as it is very fitting to every assemblage of citizens to reflect upon. The lecture was one touching upon the many important points which would be of most interest to the farmers as to the best ways to cultivate and tend our crops, encouraging the farmers to make selections of their best soil and cultivate it more thoroughly. After the lecture officers for the ensuing year were elected, viz.:

President—John E. Herrick.
1st Vice President—B. H. Taylor.
2d Vice President—A. T. Newhall.
Secretary—E. C. Farwell.
Treasurer—T. C. Durkee.

The W. C. T. U. propose to have Dr. H. A. Reynolds here in the Town Hall on next Wednesday evening, the 14th. The hall should be well filled to receive him. His work of six years ago has not stood in any very large degree, but we cannot understand that the fault was his. Men were weak and temptations have been many and seductive. Yet some were reformed and stand erect to-day, conquerors of an evil tendency and habit. In almost every case they are the men who shrank into the shadows and were not speakers in the days of enthusiasm. We owe the Doctor gratitude for the work he has done, and his friends will of course greet him most cordially. The wisdom of having him here more evenings than the 14th will be determined by the interest shown on that occasion.

One of those pleasant events that linger in the memory as bright spots in social life, and serve to bring those who participate into better and more intimate social relation to each other, occurred last Thursday evening, at the home of Mr. Bowman Viles, at West Peabody, when he entertained the party who went with him on the Eastern R. R. Excursion to the White Mountains last Summer, and their friends to the number of 50. The host and his wife dispensed cordial greetings to all. Pleasant social entertainment was the order of the hour and everything passed off finely and everybody had a good time.

The Marblehead Reform Club, at its sixth anniversary, which was held two weeks ago, reported over eighty members. The Beverly Club reports thirty-five active members. The Lynn Reform Club has a live organization, many of whom have become third party prohibitionists, while the Lynn Red Ribbon Club, a branch of the other, has raised one hundred dollars to carry on a Reynolds campaign in that city. The Swampscott Club is alive and active, while in Salem there are two Clubs in existence. Thus other places make a better showing on the subject than does Peabody. S.

The annual meeting of the Peabody Mutual Benefit Association, will be at the Hibernian Hall, Foster street, on Friday evening, Jan. 6th, 1882, to hear and act on reports, and elect officers for the ensuing term, and to transact any other business that may legally come before the meeting. This society was organized April 1, 1880, and has a membership of one hundred and sixty, having lost only one member by death.—This is a good showing for the society. Mr. James H. Thomas has been the efficient secretary since the formation of the organization.—Reporter.

As previously announced, the Essex Agricultural Society will hold an Institute at the Town Hall, Peabody, on Wednesday, the 14th inst., at 9 o'clock, A. M. Subject in the forenoon will be Farmers' Institutes: Their objects and the method of conducting them, opened by Rev. O. S. Butler, of Georgetown. Afternoon, Culture of Potatoes, opened by J. J. H. Gregory, of Marblehead. The meetings and discussions are open to the public, and all interested are invited to be present.

The C. B. X. entertainment and fair in West Peabody, Nov. 20, for the purpose of increasing the Sabbath school library, was largely attended and proved a decided success. The programme, consisting of readings, recitations, dialogues, and music, vocal and instrumental, was excellently carried out; much natural talent was displayed, as well as an unusual amount of practice and culture in music and elocution, rarely found among such young people. The whole affair was also a pecuniary success, considering the modest admission fee, receipts for the evening being forty dollars. We hope to hear from the young people again. o.

The scouring machine exhibited at the Mechanic Fair by Mr. Fitzhenry, has been put in at McClure's currying shop in this town. The Shoe and Leather Reporter says: The gold medal awarded to Edward Fitzhenry for his leather scourer and dressing machine was a well deserved tribute to inventive genius. This machine attracted great attention; many ladies spent hours in witnessing its automatic operations.—Mr. Fitzhenry sold several machines to curriers during the Exhibition. The same paper says: Mr. David T. Winter received the highest award, a silver medal, for his improved leather measuring machine.

The work (Johnson's Encyclopædia) can be FREELY purchased in Boston of more than one dealer at over twenty per cent. less than the subscription rates, which fact any truth seeker can readily ascertain.—Peabody Reporter, Nov. 26.

Will our neighbor please inform us of the publishing houses in Boston other than Estes & Lauriat, at which Johnson's Encyclopædia can be purchased 20 per cent. less than the regular price?

At a meeting of Union Post 50, G. A. R., held last Monday evening, the following officers were elected:

Commander—W. M. Ward.
S. V. C.—Geo. B. Miller.
J. V. C.—C. K. Hutchinson.
Q. M.—E. C. Spofford.
Surg.—Dr. C. C. Pike.
Chap.—E. H. Davis.
Officer of the Day—W. R. Armstrong.
Officer of the Guard—C. J. Linnehan.
Delegates to Department Convention—Geo. B. Miller, John J. Sheehan, W. H. Hildreth. Alternates—C. T. Batchelder, W. F. Wiley, W. F. Pingree.

Mr. Geo. Griffin, book-keeper at the store of Schollar & Donnell for the past year, has resigned, to accept a similar position in the "old store," with Samuel Donnell & Son. He takes the place of Miss Carrie Bomer, resigned, in regard to whom Mrs. Grundy says—well, we are not supposed to know what she says.

The Lynn & Boston railroad will petition the next session of the Legislature to change existing laws in order to enable the corporation to extend its tracks through Swampscott and to Peabody. There appears a very general desire among people of the former town to have the tracks farther extended into that town. It will probably not be long before the road will extend to Marblehead.

Our grocers are about the only ones that close their stores on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, and, as one of them remarked, "It gives us a chance to get acquainted with our families, and our clerks an opportunity to enjoy themselves in a social way." It seems as if all our store keepers should decide to give themselves a little more leisure from business by closing their stores at a more seasonable hour.

Some of the Peabody police need looking after, especially the truant officers.—Salem News.

If the correspondent of the News has anything to say, or any charges to bring, against our police, why don't he come out like a man and say them, instead of putting in these contemptible little squibs and insinuations intended to mislead the public.

Gentlemen who wear large sleeve buttons that are difficult to insert in stiffly starched linen will facilitate matters, spare their cuffs, and perhaps retain their own good humor, by slightly moistening the linen near the button hole on the wrong side. Another remedy is to insert a button hook, or some other article of similar size or form in the button holes, pressing it against the sides until they are somewhat crumpled, when the button may be easily adjusted.

The G. A. R. have voted to hold a grand fair and appointed the following committee: W. M. Ward, A. E. Johnson, T. J. Noyes, W. W. Reed, G. O. Peirce, George Randall, G. B. Miller, F. Osborn, Jr., G. S. Demeritt, David Casey, C. K. Hutchinson, Edward Meacom, S. G. Southwick, C. J. Linehan, C. K. Bailey, W. H. Hildreth, C. T. Batchelder, W. R. Armstrong.

It shows good judgment to buy a $3.50 Hat for $2.50, and it can be done at the Shawmut. Entire stock marked in plain figures, and at a small advance from factory prices.—Adv.

It is noticed by the Utica Observer that at some time or other the man who does not advertise is brought into prominence and a red flag is always used.

Nearly all the ills that afflict us can be prevented and cured by keeping the stomach, liver and kidneys in working order. There is no medicine known that will do this as surely as Parker's Ginger Tonic. See adv. nov2—1m

"'Empty is the cradle, baby's gone' Smith has it," was the way an unobserving New Haven music dealer's advertisement read.

"BUCKWHEAT CAKES AND THE MEASLES."—When a young husband had gone from home, and with fond solicitude telegraphed his little wife, "what have you for breakfast, and how is the baby?"—he received the brief suggestive reply,—"Buckwheat Cakes and the Measles." We have the report of a case in our midst, not where Measles was in the bill of fare, but where Sciatic Rheumatism confined Mr. J. Dawson, the well-known druggist, to his room for a long period. It was stated to our reporter in the following words: The senior of this firm was attacked with Sciatic Rheumatism December last, and for four weeks could scarcely leave his room. He used St. Jacobs Oil, and is now able to be at his place of business, feeling no worse for his recent affliction. The inference is convincing.—Rochester Sentinel.

In Cincinnati they have a "Society for the Prevention of Kissing Girls who Paint." Now if the girls would organize a society which would prevent their kissing anybody who drank liquor or used tobacco, we think one ordinary osculatory minister could do the business for that city.

Palpitation of the heart, nervousness, tremblings, nervous headache, cold hands and feet, pain in the back, and other forms of weakness are relieved by Carter's Iron Pills, made specially for the blood, nerves and complexion.

When so much is being said against the pernicious custom affected by some women of wearing flamboyant hats to the theatre, the following item about a young lady thus adorned, which is taken from the Utica Observer, is very refreshing reading: "As she glided toward the front the ladies and gentlemen in the row behind her began moving about uneasily, as if they feared a total eclipse of the stage for the remainder of the evening. They were not annoyed long, for after settling comfortably in her chair the lady coolly removed her large hat and hung it to the back of the seat in front of her. Then she extracted a worsted 'fascinator' and arranged it in the most fascinating manner upon her head, making her look 'too sweet for anything,' as an old bachelor expressed it. All of her neighbors exchanged approving smiles, and the stag coterie in that locality rewarded her with quite a ripple of applause. She set a good example for her older friends, and deserves a season ticket to the lecture course, for her good sense and regard for the comfort and enjoyment of others."

If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for sick headache, and every woman should know this. Only one pill a dose.

It has been frequently the subject of comment by many people here that nearly all the babies born to their acquaintances this year have been girls. Two out of three of Gen. Grant's grandchildren born since July 4, are girls, and both the grandchildren added to Gen. Sherman's family this year are girls. Nearly all the married officers attached to a certain man-of-war now at the navy yard have had daughters born to them within a few months.

MOTHERS DON'T KNOW.—How many children are punished for being uncouth, wilful, and indifferent to instructions or rewards simply because they are out of health! An intelligent lady said of a child of this kind: "Mothers should know that if they would give the little ones moderate doses of Hop Bitters for two or three weeks the children would be all a parent could desire."

Apropos of the troubles in the North Attleboro Baptist Church one of the sisters arose in meeting and propounded the query, "why it was that during the eighteen years I have been a member there has always been trouble with our pastors." A venerable deacon pointedly replied: "The sister can best answer her own question," and intense silence ensued, broken only by the fall of peanut shells.

Two well-dressed young men were passing down Munroe street, a day or two since, when one of them, observing a lithograph of Henry Ward Beecher in a shop window, remarked to his companion that they would "have to take that in." "What does he play?" "I don't know," said No. 1, "but I've heard that he is a mighty fine actor."—Lynn Bee.

A Yankee who had never paid more than a shilling to see an exhibition went to see the "Forty Thieves." The ticket seller charged him three shillings for a ticket. Passing the pasteboard back he quietly remarked: "Keep it, mister; I don't want to see the other thirty-nine," and out he marched.

A little boy in Belfast, Maine, attended church last Sunday for the first time. On returning home, he was asked what was done at church, to which he replied: "First they sang, then prayed, and then passed round a corn-popper."

The man who has been speculating in Confederate bonds, explains that he did so because he wanted to tackle something that was a little safer than the average mining stock.

THE INDEPENDENT.

The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—THE REV. JOSEPH COOK.

ESTABLISHED in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, THE INDEPENDENT at once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight Mormonism, for Civil-Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, more poetry and stories than popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopædia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what THE INDEPENDENT is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of THE INDEPENDENT. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science, Pebbles, Personalities, Ministerial Register, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday school, News of the week, Finance, Commerce, Insurance, Stories, Puzzles and Agriculture. 32 Pages in all.

AN INTERESTING ACCOUNT!

STONE IN THE BLADDER EXPELLED BY USING Dr. KENNEDY'S "FAVORITE REMEDY."

Mr. S. W. Hicks, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y., the son of Mr. E. S. Hicks, whose name may have appeared in this journal in connection with an article similar to this, was, like his father, afflicted with Stone in the Bladder, only that his case was more serious than his father's. On the appearance of the disease the father advised the son to write to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who, he said, would tell him what to do. Dr. Kennedy replied, suggesting the use of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," which had worked so successfully in his father's case. Mr Hicks, who had been assured by the local physicians that they could do nothing more for him tried "Favorite Remedy" at a venture. After two weeks' use of it he passed a stone 3-4 of an inch long and of the thickness of a pipe-stem. Since then he has had no symptoms of the return of the trouble. Here is a sick man healed. What better results could have been expected? What greater benefit could medical science confer? The end was gained; that is surely enough. Dr. Kennedy assures the public, by a reputation which he cannot afford to forfeit or imperil, that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the Blood, cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder complaints, as well as all those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists.

THE SUN.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in o fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.

THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN'S political course.

THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like THE SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a perfect Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

Worldly Trifles.

We ask you to read the advertisement of Darby's Prophylactic Fluid, which appears in our issue of to-day. It is a wonderful healing remedy, a most powerful disinfectant, and a positive germ destroyer, and is perfectly safe even in the hands of the most inexperienced. It is highly recommended by eminent physicians and chemists, and endorsed by hundreds of others who have used it and know its valuable properties. It costs but a trifle, and will save much suffering, time and money. Darby's Fluid has long been recognized as a household article for universal family use. Prepared by J. H. BEST ON RECORD.—I believe Ely's Cream Balm the best preparation for Catarrh now on record. My patrons all speak well of it. I have sold one hundred and forty-four bottles in less than five months. I ordered another gross a week ago, and have sold twenty-one bottles from the second gross. It sells upon its merits. John H. Phelps, Druggist, Scranton, Pa. Jan. 28, 1880.

There is no doubt in our judgment that Ely's Cream Balm has intrinsic worth. We hear from many who are using it for Catarrh, of wonderful cures being effected, and without hesitation offer it to our customers as the best remedy for its purposes in use. Dykeman & Mott, Druggists, Catskill, N. Y. Dec. 27, 1880. Price 50 cts. nov30-2w

It is a foolish mistake to confound a remedy of merit with quack medicines. We have used Parker's Ginger Tonic with the happiest results for Dyspepsia Debility, and know it to be a sterling health restorative.—Times. nov2—1m

WHERE THE DRUMS COME FROM.—Granville Corners is situated about two miles north of the Connecticut line. A large mill stream through the place (a branch of the Westfield river) furnishes a number of privilgees, most of which are utilized. Messrs. Noble & Cooley are by far the largest manufacturers in the place. They say that in December 1853 they first made a drum in Mr. Noble's father's kitchen, from a board found in the barn, steamed it with a teakettle, and used two hog's bladders for the heads. Next they made a dozen drums, and sent them away in a boot box. They now have a factory 110x40 feet, with five floors, and use steam and water. They have made and sold 79,000 drums. These were made of wood, tin, brass and nickel. They used for the heads of these drums, 30,000 sheepskins, which came from Liverpool, of the kind known as salted fleshes. Let none of your readers wonder where all the toy drums are made, hereafter.—Hartford Times.

ITCHING PILES — SYMPTOMS AND CURE.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes for $1.25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price in currency, or three cent postage stamps. Prepared only by Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, Pa., to whom letters should be addressed. Sold by all prominent druggists.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence. Nov. 4. 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
CURES DYSPEPSIA.

READ THE PROOF:

Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.

The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.

The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.

This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.

TESTIMONIALS from well known people, near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible disease, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.

We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.

J. W. Manning the Veteran Nurseryman, says: Having over-exerted myself in my nursery giving me a weakness of the Stomach and Kidneys, I used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam—which has given me an appetite and proves better than any bitters, and is the most pleasant preparation to the taste that I have ever used.

FAITH WHITCOMB.
"It Cured Mother."

Winchester, Mass., July 12, 1881.
My mother came very near dying from pneumonia last winter, and her lungs were left in a weak condition. Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has stopped the cough and has cured her dizziness. It is the only medicine that would help her. Yours truly, B F Holbrook.

A Boston Merchant's Testimonial.
No 27 Court street, Boston, March 13, 1881.
My daughter was prostrated with a terrible cough, after other remedies had failed, and my daughter had become so much worse that we were all completely discouraged, she commenced the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam and after using it less than one month she is well. Shall be glad to answer all enquiries. B A Clark.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well-known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.
Pine street, Swampscott, Sept. 15.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

"Almost at Death's Door."
114 Shawmut street, Chelsea, March 1, '81.
I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam is strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.

Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.

Write or call upon Mrs. Russell, and also upon her family Physician for further particulars.

It Cures the Shop Girls.
Last summer I was obliged to give up my work on account of severe cough; three physicians said I was going in quick consumption, but after using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam my cough is better, I gained in flesh and have a good appetite.

Memorial Hall, Boston, March 24, 1881.
Having suffered all winter from a distressing cough, I was induced to try Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using all of two bottles I find myself entirely cured and can truthfully recommend it as the best remedy I have ever used.
G. N. Veeder.

Saved! Saved! Saved!
I am happy to say that Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has cured my cough, of which I had despaired of ever being cured. I can now sleep without coughing at all, all of which I owe to Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. I only now need strength.

PRICES, 50 CENTS AND 1 DOLLAR.

A Fine Mansion.

Our readers have not failed to observe the fine mansion erected by MR. WILLIAM P. CLARK, almost directly opposite his factory on Main street. We have been privileged to notice favorably several new houses in Peabody of late, and none of them shows more clearly the good taste and skill of the owner and builder than the one above referred to. Standing as it does on an eminence from which a fine view can be obtained in either direction, it would seem that no better spot in the vicinity could have been chosen for its erection.

As we enter the vestibule we notice the very heavy black walnut doors, full two inches thick, through the open portals of which we pass to the hall in the centre and enter the large parlor on the left of the hall, 20 ft. by 14 ft. 3 inches, with white marble mantel, and elaborately finished and furnished, the wall being covered with a plain paper surmounted with a rich border. In the rear of this room, on the same side of the hall, is the dining room, the mantel being of shell marble, quite a novel design, and the doors and other finish being of ash. The floor is uncarpeted, a solid one of maple with black walnut border, giving a finer effect than the most elegant brussels carpet. In a little niche in the room is a set bowl with hot and cold water, every convenience being carefully studied in the most minute detail. Returning through the hall, we are shown on the opposite side on our right the sitting room, 15 ft. by 14 ft. 4 inches, nearly square. Here is a mantel of Tennessee marble, of a choice pattern. In the rear of this room is another one 14 feet square, which will be used as a library. This room is finished in cherry and has a mantel of Formosa marble. This is quite a study, it having come originally from the island of Formosa, and shows indisputable signs of the volcanic eruptions in that latitude. In the extreme rear of the house is the kitchen, pantry and closets, with plenty of room and every convenience. Here is a large refrigerator, so arranged that the ice can be set in from the outside, and there is a large closet for all the needed utensils, so that nothing further could seem to be desired.

As we ascend the stairs, a broad, straight flight, to the upper landing, we find a large hall which opens out on a bay window, and from which a view up and down the street for a long distance can be obtained. The rooms are here similar in size and finish to those below, and are neatly finished, and furnished with set bowls, facilities for hot and cold water, and bath room in the rear. Mr. Clark has finished two rooms in the attic story, which are unusually pleasant, leaving a large space yet unfinished. The house is heated by steam from his factory opposite, the pipes running across the street and furnishing him all the desired heat, at little, if any, additional expense. He has a roomy, cemented celler, in one portion of which is a room suitable for washing, containing a stove and set tubs of porcelain. The architect was William D. Dennis of Salem, Augustus S. Blake, of Salem, did the carpenter work, the mason was S. A. Merrill of Salem, the painting was done by Richard Skinner, Jr., and the plumbing and piping by F. A. Wendell. The carpets and shades were selected from the establishment of Goldthwait & Bixby of Salem. The house shows great thoroughness of workmanship in every part, and reflects great credit on the artisans who were engaged on its different parts.

PARIS AND ITS MONUMENTS.—The third lecture by Dr. Bolles was delivered last evening upon Paris and its monuments. At a few minutes after seven, standing room only could be had, and quite a number availed themselves of that privilege. Dr. Bolles first presented a picture of Paris, showing the large cathedrals, hotels, palaces, etc., and followed it with a map of that portion of the city that he proposed to illustrate. Paris was originally settled by the Romans on an island in the Seine, and spread like magic over the adjoining country. Commencing with the Egyptian Obelisk, of which there are three, one on the Thames in England, another recently placed in Central Park, New York, the lecturer showed a fine collection of pictures of Notre Dame, the Palais Royal, the monument of July, standing where the terrible Bastile once stood, and commemorating the slaughter of July, 1830 and 1841, one of the four arches which Napoleon caused to be erected as an emblem of the greatness of France, and particularly of his own greatness, the tower, surrounded by shrubbery, where Pascal achieved his great triumph of weighing air, the boulevards, with sidewalks nearly as broad, the magnificent crypt built to Napoleon after his death, the Seine, with its numerous bridges, and, finally, the New Opera House, the most beautiful the world has ever seen. Dr. Bolles, in his graceful and eloquent way, explained each illustration as it appeared, and the lecture, although short, was received with earnest attention, and evidently gave general satisfaction.

The Peabody Reporter, the least of our cotemporaries, swells with indignation at a four line item in our paper of last week—an item not original with us and which has been the rounds of our exchanges for the past month—and thinks it 'has a right' to ask if it referred to any of the numerous editors of that sheet. We might quote for our neighbor's benefit "A guilty conscience &c." but we won't. We are greatly surprised to think he should intimate that we could believe for a moment that he should be guilty of any such conduct—beneath the dignity of a high toned, moral, religious and strictly truthful editor like himself.

Pickering the Hatter, No. 200 Essex St. Salem, is ready for the holidays with a large and choice line of furs for gents,' ladies' and children's wear. Next week they will open a special line of fine neckwear made for the holiday trade, including all the new designs and colors, and an early inspection of their assortment is desirable to secure the best choice. Cut this out.

The New England Boot and Shoe Co. of Salem, advertise a special assortment of Christmas Slippers in another column. Their show window is very tastily arranged with some of the choicest patterns of them, and they are a very sensible and useful holiday gift. Prices from $1.25 to $2.50. Remember the place. Call and see them.

The Michigan City Dispatch says—"When a newspaper says a kind word of a man, he never knows it, but if it handles him a little roughly, he finds it out in less than a minute." Such is life.

BOSTON THEATRE.—"Michael Strogoff" closes this week with no abatement in its popularity. It might be profitably run all winter, but the contracts which had already been made when this unprecedented success was announced compel its withdrawal.—Large excursion parties have visited the theatre from various points in New England during this week, and no other feeling save that of delight has been expressed. The opera season opens at the Boston Dec. 26th.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

The Guiteau Trial — Meeting of Congress — President's Message, &c.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 12, '81.

EDITOR OF PRESS,—What with the Guiteau trial, the assembling of Congress, election of Speaker and officers of the House, and the President's Message, the past week has been one of more than ordinary interest and excitement at the national capital. About the Court House and the hotels scenes of unwonted liveliness have been witnessed. During the present week the committees of the House will be appointed and then Congress will settle down to routine business, but the trial of the assassin will go on, and the interest in it will increase in intensity until the end. The experts for the prosecution are yet to testify, and then will come the arguments of counsel, the charge of the judge, and the "waiting for the verdict," which may or may not be rendered, as Washington juries have almost become notorious for their failure to agree in important criminal cases. Besides, one of the jurors is quite sick, being threatened with erysipelas in the face. This may possibly cause a mistrial, which would be a calamity after the trial has "dragged its slow length along" through so many weeks.

Probably no trial in this country or any other has ever presented a more singular spectacle than this one. It is a remarkable phenomenon to see a prisoner on trial for his life taking an active part in the effort to prove his own insanity, and at the same time exhibiting the clearest memory of facts and dates of his whole life, and a keenness of intellect and sharpness of wit that would do credit to many who have made no inconsiderable reputation at the bar or in other spheres of public life. In fact, the testimony, as well as his own statements and admissions, has shown that he has lived by his wits, and has been sharp enough to live without a stroke of honest work, year after year, while his morbid and insufferable egotism has kept him afloat as if he was entitled to a position which can really be deserved and won only by labor and service in some worthy field of action. There is enough to deplore in the spoils of office system, which has to some extent fastened itself upon our politics, but it would be unjust to ourselves as a people to charge that system with the responsibility of producing or encouraging such an egregious fraud and dead-beat as Guiteau. I have watched and studied him now and then during the trial, and while I cannot help setting him down as crazy, yet that does not by any means settle in my mind the final question of his legal responsibility.

Dr. Harlam, a noted authority of a former generation, held that perfect sanity, meaning a brain so perfectly organized and balanced as always to insure sound thinking and steady impulsion towards right doings, does not belong to humanity, but is an attribute of the Deity alone. It is quite certain that there are among men ordinarily held responsible for their actions towards their fellows and society all degrees of natural capacity, and inclination towards good or evil, while circumstances and opportunities are so various that some are impelled in the right direction, and others as strongly impelled towards wrong-doing; yet where there is a consciousness of right and wrong, and a power of volition, they are, all alike, held amenable to punishment for violation of human laws. Our tribunals cannot so far weigh motives and moral responsibility as to graduate punishments as we trust will be done by that higher tribunal which can see our inmost thoughts and judge us accordingly. Insanity is not always a defence for violation of law; to make it so it must be such as to render its subject incapable of judging between the right and wrong of the particular act in question, or incapable of withstanding the impulse to commit the act. Many insane persons are so upon a particular subject only, and are capable of rational action upon any other subject, and it will be difficult to satisfy the American people, if the jury becomes so satisfied, that Guiteau did not act in the shooting of the President, out of a feeling of disappointment, and a spirit of revenge, at his failure to receive an office at his hands, which his inordinate egotism led him to ask and expect. His conduct during the trial has strengthened the impression that he is of a selfish, self-indulgent and vindictive disposition.

The Republicans are, after some years of Democratic rule, once more in the supremacy in Congress, and are ready for legislation. If they will not give us too much of it, but give us a little in the right direction, the country will be satisfied.

The President's message contains some good and quite positive suggestions which it is hoped will be adopted. It is generally commended as a judicious and practical state paper, and was, as it should be, sent to Congress in manuscript, and not addressed to the world at large before reaching the body to which it is addressed. This is a good innovation upon the practice that has of late years prevailed. DELTA.

Twenty-Dollar Bible Prize.

MR. EDITOR,—This apparently easy way of earning a small sum of money, has undoubtedly attracted the attention of a great many owing to its complicity. Two bible prizes have appeared in the columns of the Salem Evening News, the first, some time ago, for $10 on the word Abraham, and the above of $20 last week, for the longest verse in the Bible. Having swallowed the bait myself, and been caught, I wish to show that it is not so easy as it appears. By reading the notice you get the impression that by just sending the correct solution you receive in return the sum of money offered. But the paper failed to give the whole explanation. Of course there are a great many others as smart as yourself, and very likely a hundred will send in the right answer. Now they cannot afford to give $20 apiece to each one, and so here comes in a small lottery. From among the successful competitors twenty are chosen by lot, these twenty to receive $1.00 apiece. Therefore no one gets the $20, but only a few fortunate ones receive $1.00. The writer sent the correct answer on the word Abraham, and received in return, "nary red." Then again the magazine distinctly states that these prizes are for subscribers only. So unless you are one yourself, and unless you are lucky in drawing, and unless etc., etc., you lose your twenty cents which you are obliged to send with the effort, and also a great deal of valuable time.

MR. EDITOR,—It is still some time before our town election, but how can one resist the temptation to call attention to those admirable letters of Judge Crosby on temperance, published by Mr. Faxon. Is it too early for us also to agitate license or no-license? The license men are already in the field.—They are always there. They have money behind them. Temperance men stand by and give themselves no trouble. "Am I my brother's keeper?" is their excuse. Would that they might read those letters of Judge C. How they came home to us! Have we been sheltering ourselves behind that cry of Cain? Shall we say prohibition does not "prohibit?" What law does prohibit? Laws restrain! Do we say it infringes on a man's personal liberty? So do the laws against brothels and gambling houses. Why should not a man have as much right to keep them as a liquor saloon? They are destructive of public morals and good government, and the good citizen will repress them. Why not, then, the liquor saloon, which is as productive of evil, to say the least? Judge C. tells of 10,000 liquor sellers "bull-dozing" the Council of Lowell last year to obtain licenses. The Council represented 50,000 temperance people. Do we not remember the Molly Maguires of Pennsylvania? How they opposed, by secret murder, the carrying out of prohibitory movements in Titusville?

How shall we contend against this great, this growing curse? Has not that leader in municipal reform, Mr. Seth Low of Brooklyn, shown us the way? A personal canvass. Organize if need be. Better so. Let each consider it his duty to join and help on the movement. Pledge your candidates to an enforcement of the law. Manufacturers, you know how great is the loss to you from this habit. Workingmen, you see your fellows falling by your side. Perhaps have yourself been tempted by some open bar in time of great need or suffering. Vote to remove this stumbling block from your path. You, mothers and sisters, how much you have suffered from our vice. Cannot you lend your voice to suppress the traffic that causes it? Shall we not all, men and women, stand firm and fight the liquor traffic as we would a gambling-hell. If we neglect our duty at the polls, shall we not be accomplices in the ruin of so many families, the death of so many citizens, the loss of so many young men, starting out in the full glow of success? The law of last winter has to own the responsibility on our shoulders. Let it not be "everybody's business." Let us make it our own, individually. The burden rests on us; we cannot avoid it. Let us not have a conscience accusing us of these terrible crimes, the result of the traffic. Remember, license does not restrain; prohibition does. D.

Poet's Corner.

Silent, She Speaketh.

Oh, people of the pl asant town,
Whose homes I rise among,
Though calm and silent, I look down:
Yet silence hath its tongue!

Think not my spirit dead within
Its cold white granite wall;
I note alike the deepest din,
The lightest footstep fall.

Far more than ye of mortal ken,
I mark the passing strife,
And darkness brings to me, again
The dead past into life.

I hear again the tones long stilled,
I see the forms forgot;
Again their parts in life are filled,
On this familiar spot.

Come back afresh the scenes of yore,
The rattling drum's alarm,
The piercing bugle blast, once more
Calls patriots to arms.

In ghostly rank, they hold review,
The roll call rings out clear,
The names I keep are heard anew,
And hear the answering "here."

'Mid clang of arms, and stern command,
Are mingled sobs and prayers,
The solemn word, the lifted hand,
Give pledge to them and theirs,

The pledge, that come what may or can
In all the future dim,
The land he saves, to every man
Shall prove her care for him.

But morning's light dissolves the spell
Re-echoes busy care,
The present has its tale to tell,
Its accents rise in air,

"Disabled in his country's need,
And seeks the smoother path;
Away! no longer can we heed
Those ancient days of wrath.

Their well worn claims must yield their place
To issues of the day,
Our party hacks shall win the race,
And sentiment give way!"

Oh, people of the pleasant town,
When ye such counsel prize,
Let monument come crashing down!
And in its stead arise

A tower that more than that of old,
Shall tell of selfish strife,
Of greed of place, of lust of gold,
But not of nobler life,

And place thereon the statue Pelf,
Let the inscription tell,
Hail, Apotheosis of self!
Honor and worth, farewell!

A Silver Lining.

There's never a day so sunny
But a little cloud appears;
There's never a day so happy
But has its time of tears;
Yet the sun shines out the brighter
Whenever the tempest clears.

There's never a garden growing
With roses in every plot;
There's never a heart so hardened
But it has one tender spot;
We have only to prune the border
To find the forget-me-not.

There's never a son that rises
But we know 'twill set at night;
The tints that gleam in the morning
At evening are just as bright;
And the hour that is the sweetest
Is between the day and light.

There's never a dream so happy
But the waking makes us sad;
There's never a dream of sorrow
But the waking makes us glad;
We shall look some day with wonder
At the troubles we have had.

Origin of the Opal.

A dew-drop came, with a spark of flame
He had caught from the sun's last ray,
To a violet's breast, where he lay at rest
Till the hours brought back the day.

The rose looked down, with a blush or a frown;
But she smiled all at once, to view
Her own bright form, with its coloring warm,
Reflected back by the dew.

Then the stranger took a stolen look
At the sky, so soft and blue:
And a leaflet green, with its silver sheen,
Was seen by the idler, too.

A cold north-wind, as he thus reclined,
Of a sudden raged around;
And a maiden fair, who was walking there,
Next morning, an OPAL found.

Selected Story.

WAS I A FLIRT?

I was engaged to Angelina Melville, and I thought myself the luckiest man living. Angelina was so handsome that no stranger ever saw her without expressing admiration, and one did not weary with the face after years of familiarity with it. She was well-bred, accomplished and a great heiress. I had reason to believe she was very fond of me. No man could be more entirely content than I was as I leaned back in the first-class carriage which took me from Glasgow into the country to the Vale of Cruix, where I was to preach a few Sabbaths.

The pulpit was vacant, and I was going to try my wings. With my pecuniary prospects I hardly thought I should care to accept a call to the Vale of Cruix, but I had no objection to filling its pulpit for a few weeks, especially as Angelina had gone to the West coast, and Glasgow was warm and stuffy and stupid.

Casual remembrances of elegant parsonages built in Queen Anne's style; of a study where the footfalls were softened by Persian rugs, and the doors draped in portieres of velvet; chairs and a desk carved richly as some old confessional, flitted through my mind. And I thought also of a table, spread with silver and rare china, with a lady at its head, who resembled a queen. And I breathed a luxurious sigh as I awakened from my day-dream to a knowledge that the words 'Vale of Cruix' were being shouted on the platform, and that the train was coming to a standstill.

I seized my travelling bag from the rack overhead and hastened out of the carriage. The porters had just pulled four or five trunks on the platform. Two old wagons stood in the road, one driven by an old woman in a sun-bonnet, the other by a red-haired boy, with bare feet; and a queer, knocked-kneed horse, attached to a queerer old gig, was standing at a little distance.' A young man, in a light summer suit, and a city family bent on rural happiness, were my companions on the platform.

The former put his trunk in the first wagon, kissed the old woman in the sun-bonnet, took the reins and drove away. He was evidently the son of the family, come home to spend his vacation. The rest of the trunks and city family — mother, father, little boy, nursemaid and baby—were put in the wagon and driven by the boy.

When the train moved away I was left alone on the platform—alone but for the station-master, who sat upon a bench smoking an old clay pipe.

In a minute more the official, without looking at me, made the remark: 'Deacon Stevenson has come for the new minister. He's over in the hotel and will be back in a minute.'

'Thank you,' said I.

The station-master took no notice of me, but, having made some changes in a time-register on the wall of station, locked the door, put the key in his pocket and sauntered away down the railroad.

I took his place upon the bench, and waited. In a few moments a prim little old gentleman appeared upon the top of the hill, carrying in one hand a tin can, in the other a tin pail, and under either arm a brown paper parcel. I knew at a glance it was Stevenson.

'Are you Mr. Mactaggart?' he inquired, mildly, as he approached. 'I want to know! I hadn't any expectation of being kept so long, but, you see, it saves the women folks trouble to fetch things when I drive down. Step in, won't you? I'll jest hang this can of paraffine ile on behind. Some dislike the smell—maybe you do. The sugar-loaf, tea, and coffee can go under the seat as well as not. How's your health, sir, and how do you like Vale of Cruix?'

I answered that my health was good and that I had not, as yet, seen much of the Vale of Cruix.

'No, you haven't,' said the old gentleman. 'Well, you'll drive through it now.' And he shook the reins, and the old horse began to stumble along. And on we drove past certain rows of brick houses very much like each other, and with the same flowers in their front gardens, until, having passed the church, we came to one happily set about with old oak trees, before the gate of which we drew up.

A girl stood at the gate—a fair girl in a blue muslin dress and white apron.

'Take the sugar, Mary, before it gets upset,' said the deacon. 'This is Mr. Mactaggart, that's to preach for us. Mr. Mactaggart, this is my daughter Mary.'

We bowed, and she vanished with the parcels.

'What a lovely creature,' said I to myself. 'Nothing like Angelina, but so pretty!' And I found myself thinking of her as I washed my hands and brushed my hair in the blue-walled bed-room on the second floor, with the white-fringed counterpanes and curtains, and two black silhouettes over the mantelpiece, on either side of a China vase of roses.

There were only four of us at the table—the deacon, his wife, a stout lady who never said more than she could help, and Mary. She had spent the last winter at Glasgow, and we talked about all that she had seen. She was self-possessed, without being forward, and oh, so pretty! Now, Angelina was splendid and queenly, so this was mild praise that she could not have objected to, only I said it very often. I preached on the next Sunday. It was settled I should spend the summer there. I wrote this to Angelina:

'Since you cannot be with me it does not matter where I am—this stupid place as well as any other.—Address to the care of Deacon Stevenson. I shall remain with him while I preach here.'

It was a splendid summer, despite the dullness of the place. How good the quaint old deacon was when one really knew him! How motherly was Mrs. Stevenson! As for Mary, she grew sweeter every day! I have often wondered what Angelina would have said could she have seen me helping her to pick blackberries, to find the runaway cow, to carry home the milkpail, driving her over to the country grocery, and returning with a freight of groceries—Angelina, who knew nothing of domestic details, and whose monogrammed and perfumed letters were often brought over from the office in company with the paraffine can. I wrote my sermons at one end of the table, while Mary sat at the other sewing. Between us was a lamp with a green paper shade. Now and then a big bug would fly into the window and go humming about our heads, or a moth would try to singe its wings over the chimney, and I would drive it out. The old people would go to bed after a while, and then Mary and I would find ourselves hungry, and she would go into the kitchen to find 'something good.' I always held the light for her. And when something good was found we ate it on the back porch, sitting side by side on the step like two children.

She was so like a child, that little Mary, that it seemed no harm to ask her to kiss me good-night, or to hold her hand in mine, as it rested on my arm in our long walks home from church on Sunday afternoons.

The summer passed; October came. Angelina returned to the city and wrote to me. It was while we were eating peaches and cream in the back porch that evening that I said to Mary, 'I will tell you a secret if you will keep it for a while, Mary.'

'Of course I will, Mr. Mactaggart.'

'I am going to be married this fall, Mary,' I said. 'These pretty letters you always thought came from my sister are from the lady who is to marry me. She is very beautiful, very rich, very stylish, and very kind. You must come to see us, Mary, when we are married. I shall tell Angelina how good you have been to me—what a sweet little sister I found out here, in the Vale of Cruix. Why, Mary'—

For, as I spoke, I felt the little hand I held grow cold and heavy in mine. I saw her sink backward.—The big bowl of peaches and cream slipped with a crash to the ground and shattered to pieces.

I caught the poor child in my arms. In a moment she came to herself, and said she had overtired herself, she thought. They had been baking all day, and it was warm. And now she bade me good-night. But I did not see her next day, nor the next. She kept her room, and was not well enough to bid me good-bye.

Poor little Mary! I felt very miserable. However, Angelina met me at Glasgow. She was more beautiful than ever, more elegant in contrast with my simple country friend that I laughed at myself for the thought that had been in my heart. Of course I said it was the baking that had overcome Mary—it was not my news. I had only been to her as a friend—as a brother. I had not made love to her; above all, I had not flirted with her. But I thought of Mary a great deal, and missed her every hour—oh, yes, exactly—as I might a sister. I wrote to Mrs. Stevenson, and her answer was very brief.

'I havn't much time to write,' she said in her postscript. 'Mary is sick and, besides being driven, I am very anxious.'

This letter was in my pocket on that day when Angelina and I went together to the bazaar for the benefit of the church of St. Matthew.

After we had roamed about the bazaar and bought all sorts of knick-knacks, I escorted Angelina to a seat, and there sat down to wait while one of the ladies, who, on this occasion only, was doing good, onerous, hard work, brought us a tray of refreshments.

As we sat there sipping our coffee two women sat down at the next table with their backs to us.

'I am very tired, are not you, Mrs. Russell?'

'Yes, I am tired. I don't think it is worth while to come all the way from Vale of Cruix to Glasgow sight-seeing.'

This was the voice of Stevenson's nearest neighbor, and I liked her and respected her, but did not know how Angelina would like an introduction to her, and so refrained from looking around and making myself known.

'I think we'd better have tea,' said the voice; 'it is more refreshing than coffee. Oh, how is Mary today? Think of my never asking before!'

'Mary is poorly,' said Mrs. Russell. 'Oh, Mrs. Cullen, what a pity it is that flirting young minister came down to Vale of Cruix! I don't know what Mrs. Stevenson was about, to let him do as he did. We all thought he was courting Mary. She did, poor child! She just loved him dearly. And the day before he went away he told her he was engaged to some girl in Glasgow. I'm afraid it has broke her heart. She told me all about it.—'Oh, Aunty Russell,' she said, 'I know I ought to be ashamed, but I can't help it. He seemed to like me so. I hope I shall die of this fever, for life is nothing to me now.'—Ashamed! Why, it is he who ought to be ashamed. Of all things, a minister to be a cold, cruel flirt, and that is what Hugh Mactaggart is.'

I listened, but I could not move or speak. I felt as though my heart was also breaking, and oh! the time I suffered! The women drank their tea and left, and then Angelina turned to me with a cold, sarcastic smile.

'I see by your face that that little story is perfectly true, Mr. Mactaggart.'

'Angelina,' I faltered, 'I have done nothing that should give offence to you.'

'Nothing but love another woman,' she answered. 'Love her and let her see it, meaning to marry me. Don't think I am hurt; indeed, I am relieved! I should have kept my word to you but for this, but not so gladly as I once should. You are a very good-looking man, but on the whole you don't suit me. I met Mr. S. at Milport, and he does. Frankly, I have been thinking what a pity it was I must decline his offer. As for this—Mary, is it not?—wouldn't she make a very good minister's wife?'

It came to my mind that she would—that she was the only wife for me; that Angelina — splendid though she was — would never have made me happy.

But I only said: 'Miss Melville, if you desire to have your freedom, I have no choice.'

'I desire it greatly,' she answered.

'It is yours,' I said, with a bow.

After that I think we were both happier than we had been for days, and we shook hands before parting.

That night I went up to the Vale of Cruix, and I told Mary that my marriage was broken off, and that she was the only woman I had ever loved. She tried to summon up her pride to refuse me, but failed in the attempt and let me take her to my heart. To-day I am pastor of the church of the Vale of Cruix. Mary is my wife, and we are as plain and quiet a pair as you could fancy. I even help my wife pick currants for the market, and I have taken a turn in the garden when help was scarce. But I do not envy Mr. S. his wife, nor pine for the luxurious possibilities that I lost with Angelina. Mary and my little home content me.

THE TIDAL WAVE !

Sweeping Mark-Down Sale.

CLOTHING for the RICH and POOR.

$800,000.

EIGHT HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN

MEN'S, YOUTHS', BOYS' AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING.

To be Sold before January 1st, by our Great Combination Stores.

THE LARGEST SALE OF CLOTHING ON RECORD.

The immense wholesale stock has been distributed among the Retail branches with positive orders to sell, and as our store, the Naumkeag, is one of the largest of the retail stores, our share of the stock will be immense. These goods we must dispose of to our regular retail trade, and in order to do this, we have, with the consent of the proprietors, marked the goods at simply unheard of prices.

We shall make the prices so low that it will shake the foundations of the Clothing Trade from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

NOTE THE PRICES OF A FEW BARGAINS.

Men's heavy Oxford mixed Overcoats, well made and trimmed, price $2.50. Other dealers advertise to sell for $5.00, and call them great bargains.

Men's heavy diagonal worsted Overcoats, thoroughly made and trimmed, velvet collar, and bound with a fine mohair braid. The same garments are being sold by other dealers for $8 and $10. We shall close the lot at retail for $4, which is less than the actual cost of the material.

Men's heavy chinchilla Overcoats, handsomely made and trimmed, would be called remarkably cheap at $8 and $10. We shall close the lot at retail for $5.

Men's heavy all wool double breasted fancy mixed Scotch wool Overcoats, thoroughly made and trimmed, price $7.50, marked down from $10; a handsome, stylish garment, cut by our latest patterns and perfect in fit.

Men's heavy, strictly all wool black beaver Overcoats, thoroughly made and trimmed, velvet collar, and lined with a heavy serge, all sized, price $7, marked down from $12. This is the lowest price ever named for an all wool beaver Overcoat.

Men's heavy, dark, fancy mixed, strictly all wool, double breasted Overcoats, made and trimmed in first class style, a handsome stylish garment marked down from $16.50 to only $9. A garment good enough for anybody.

Men's heavy plain and fancy mixed strictly all wool Overcoats and Ulsterettes, thoroughly made and trimmed, marked down from $15 and 16.50 to only $10 and 12.

Men's heavy seal brown strictly all wool chinchilla Overcoats, made and trimmed in first-class style, with silk velvet collars and lined with a fine heavy all wool plaid cassimere; a superior garment in every respect marked down from $20 to only 13. A wonderful bargain.

Men's heavy, plain and fancy mixed, fine strictly all wool Overcoats and Ulsterettes made and trimmed equal to custom work, marked down from $18 and 20 to $15. For the quality of goods and trimmings it is the greatest bargain ever offered for first class clothing. This lot represents 20 different styles.

Men's heavy, plain and fancy mixed Overcoats, manufactured from foreign and the finest domestic goods, made and trimmed equal to the best custom, marked down from $24 and 25 to $18 and 20; these are bargains unsurpassed.

Men's heavy and medium weight extra fine Overcoats, made and trimmed in the best possible manner by journeymen tailors from English and French goods, marked down from $30 and 32 to 25. Same garments made to order would cost nearly double.

Men's heavy, dark colored cassimere suits, handsomely made and trimmed, marked down from $9 to 5.

TRIPLE SHEET.

We again present to our readers a TRIPLE SHEET, containing seventy columns. That our advertisers appreciate the value of the PRESS as an advertising medium, we think no one who examines our paper to-day will doubt. Without the enlargement it would have been simply impossible for us to have inserted their favors at any price. We wish at the same time to call attention to the fact that we have not neglected our readers, but give them 22 columns of reading matter; more, we think, than the majority of our cotemporaries at this time. We have delayed a few hours to give an account of the Institute of the Essex Agricultural Society, the Convention at the Universalist Church, and other matters of a local nature. We have not space to refer to all our advertisers. But we advise all our readers to examine this paper in full. If they do not and then pay high prices for their holiday goods, they will have only themselves to blame.

Fraud.

We give place in another column to a letter from a correspondent in reference to "Bible Prizes," and we take occasion at the same time to refer to the fraud which is constantly attempted in various ways through the columns of the newspapers. Most of the originators of the various schemes for swindling the public are at a long distance from the paper in which they advertise, thus rendering it difficult for the publishers who would be on their guard in this respect to protect their readers by making inquiries as to the standing or responsibility of the advertisers, and where they are sent to them through reliable advertising agencies, it is frequently the case that no thought is given to the matter. It is our intention not to publish any of these advertisements, and if we can prove in any way that any of our readers have been defrauded by these rascals, we shall promptly expose them. We are not able to say that the Rutledge Publishing Co. are frauds, as our correspondent would seem to intimate; a small advertisement inserted by us was settled for as per agreement, but we shall be glad to hear further in regard to them.

But we do desire to caution our readers against Dr. M. E. Bell of Baltimore, Md. His proposition to give free the results of his valuable (?) experience ought not to deceive anyone. If he gets a name, and any recipe is sent the inquirer, it is probably with the information that the ingredients composing the medicine can be obtained of him only, and with the expectation of getting money out of the public, for which he will give no value. A proposition to insert his advertisement in the PRESS was received by us last month. It did not look right, and we determined to test him. He offered a fair price, and promised advance payment after the the first insertion. We therefore set it up, put it in once, sent him the bill, and as we expected there was no response. We took the advertisement out, and notified him that it would not appear again until paid for. We have no hesitation in pronouncing him a fraud, and as other papers in this vicinity have inserted the advertisement, we warn our readers to beware of him.

The lecture this week in the Peabody Institute was given by Hon. A. W. Tourgee, on the "Era of Humanity." The lecturer prefaced his subject with the poem of "Abou Ben Adhem," and gave the twenty-five years previous to the beginning of this century as the era of which he was to treat. Commencing with our Declaration of Independence, and the grand principles of humanity which it inculcated, he stated that not over three of the signers actually believed what they wrote, and that they had no idea of including in their equality of men the colored race and Indians of the country. The fruits of this declaration were visible throughout the world. Previous to this era no provision was ever made for the humane treatment of the insane, and not till 1787 were any steps taken regarding them as human beings. One can hardly realize that previous to 1785 there was no system of public schools, Prussia being the first to make provision at the above date for the education of all her children. It was not until 1830 that England made the first application of the public school method, by making any provision for the education of other than the children of the rich. In our mother country, also, prior to 1808, one out of five of all insane people lost an arm by being dragged at the cart wheel. The lecturer stated that, after all, we are not very far from barbarism, it being only in 1866 that schools in England were open to all her children, poor as well as rich. It was not till 1787 that any education of the blind in handicraft was attempted. In 1794, at the suggestion of a clergyman of the English Church, it was recognized that he was a man. There is nothing in ancient history or language of humanity save the name. Even Christ found the language of the time inadequate to express what he would utter of humanity, and he found deaf ears to his sayings. But from the beginning of the present century, humanity has been king. The words, "I am a man," came at the close of the 18th century, and since that time humanity has at no time lacked a voice somehow to plead its cause.

The speaker referred to Sherman's entering Raleigh, and finding 1500 mutes there without food and keepers. His supplies being in the rear, a division was made of a portion of every man's rations with these starving creatures for the aid of suffering humanity. At the close, the lecturer ridiculed very severely the attempts to throw contempt upon our age by going back to mediæval times and imitating their customs, and also by putting the morals and education of our time below that of the preceding age. He gave a very graphic picture of the progress of our times in science, stating, also, that the requirements made by us in morality were higher than half a generation, even, ago, and closed by an eloquent appeal to the people of the North to complete the freedom of the colored race of the South, which the proclamation of emancipation did not do, by educating them and making them, with ourselves, useful citizens. The lecture occupied over an hour and a half, and was listened to with the closest attention.

Mr. Thomas E. Wilson, our well known machinist, has recently erected a substantial and beautiful mansion on Lowell street, which is a great improvement to the vicinity, as well as a mark of the enterprise of Mr. Wilson in adding another to the new dwellings in Peabody. The house has been constructed in all its details under the personal direction of Mr. Wilson, and is highly complimentary to his good taste and judgment. The rooms are well arranged and convenient, and fitted up with all the modern appliances for comfort and home enjoyment. The parlor on the west side of the house is the largest room by far, being 20 feet by 14, with a mantel of white marble, and commands a good view of the vicinity. In the rear of this room is a smaller one, fitted up very neatly as a library, and still further to the rear is the dining-room, which is finished entirely in cherry, with cherry mantel. It is 14 x 16, and neatly frescoed. Directly opposite is the kitchen, finished in maple, 14 feet square, with large and commodious closets and conveniences for cooking. There is also on this side of the hall a small room similar to the library, to be used as a sewing room, and in the front on the east side a sitting room 14 feet square, and also frescoed, which adds very much to the beauty of the room.—The frescoing is also shown to fine advantage in the halls, and evidences superior taste and workmanship on the part of Mr. William Blaney. The house is finished up stairs in a similar manner to the ground floor, with hot and cold water, and all conveniences, including a bath room, finished in black walnut and ash. The house is heated by steam, furnished by an eight horse tubular boiler, and the piping is of brass. Mr. Wilson has an open grate in a portion of his rooms, also, and has arranged a very convenient way of sifting the ashes from the grate, so that they will go at once into a receptacle below provided for them, without the annoyance frem dust occasioned by the removal of them in the usual way.

The architects of this house were Lord & Fuller, of Boston, the builder Robert Coldfleet, the painter William Blaney, of Peabody, and the plumbing was done by Daniel B. Lord, Jr. Mr. Wilson expresses himself as perfectly satisfied with the workmanship in its different parts, which he certainly has abundant reason to do. We wish him many years of joy and happiness in his new home.

The first concert of the Essex Institute Course, in Plummer Hall, Salem, under the direction of J. Phippen, Jr., curator of music, was given Monday evening. The hall was well filled, and a fair sprinkling of the musical people of Peabody were present. The concert was instructive in every respect. To hear the works of the best masters, interpreted by artists of such acknowledged ability as took part in this concert, is a rare treat. The vocalist was Mrs. Georg Henschel, (Lillian Bailey) who has recently returned from Europe.—Those who had heard her previously were certainly surprised at her marvellous power, and ease in executing the most difficult passages. Her intonation was almost perfection, and she was in superb voice. She was encored at every appearance. The instrumental part of the program consisted of selections, on two pianos, performed by Mr. Phippen and Miss H. A. Brooks.—Themes from Mozart, Beethoven and Wagner, composers, each, of a different style of music, were given with great clearness and beauty. The Andante of Mozart and the variations of St. Saens, were perhaps the best of their performances. The Essex Institute are to be highly commended in giving to the people of this vicinity such a class of concerts. The next one will be given Monday evening, Dec. 26th, at which Messrs Arthur W. Foote, C. N. Allen, Wulf Fries, and Miss S. C. Fisher will be the performers.

The work (Johnson's Encyclopædia) can be FREELY purchased in Boston of more than one dealer at over twenty per cent. less than the subscription rates, which fact any truth seeker can readily ascertain.—Peabody Reporter, Nov. 26.

Will our neighbor please inform us of the publishing houses in Boston other than Estes & Lauriat, at which Johnson's Encyclopædia can be purchased 20 per cent. less than the regular price?

FERNALD & SAWYER have placed in their windows, at No. 60 Main st., two new signs, in one window "Millinery," in the other "Worsteds." They are a great improvement, and can not fail to attract the attention of passers. Their department of worsteds, patterns and designs for Christmas is crowded with purchasers, and every thing desirable and novel can be purchased of them at the lowest prices. Next week they will have a special holiday announcement, which will be of interest to our readers.

At this season of the year it is worth one's while to visit such stores as Daniel Low's, in Salem, where can be seen a carefully selected stock of foreign and American novelties. Every article is of the first quality. Mr. Low prefers to sell the best goods at a smaller profit, believing it will pay in the long run. You can buy your friend a gift of real merit and intrinsic value for a little more than trash would cost. We advise all to examine these goods before purchasing.

The December number of The Pavilion reaches us in a greatly enlarged form well filled with choice selected reading matter, the whole combining to make the issue one of interest. The publisher, D. Conrad, has a page advertisement, announcing some of the bargains to be obtained at his establishment.

We are in receipt of the first number of the Rockport Review, published by Mr. Cheever, formerly of the Essex County Review of Danvers. The sheet is well printed and spicy. We wish its publisher success in his new field.

Our readers will bear in mind that WINSLOW advertises in this week's issue some special bargains in clothing, which must be sold to make room for Christmas goods. He has a nicely selected stock in both the store on the Square and in Salem, and we know it will be for the interest of our readers to look through his stock before making their purchases.

The season is at hand when all are looking around at the fine stock of Holiday goods displayed by various dealers. The attention of all is directed to the adv. of Mackenzie's Jewelry store, 220 Essex St. with A. J. Swain. An inspection of his stock is solicited, whether parties purchase or not. Remember the number, 220 Essex St., Salem.

If you want to buy Fur Trimming, examine the stock at the Shamwut.—Adv.

Farmers' Institute.

The first Farmers' Institute ever held in this town took place to-day at Town Hall, under the auspices of the Essex Agricultural Society. A farmers' institute is similar to a farmers' club, but with a broader field, as all interested are invited to take part. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Benj. P. Ware of Marblehead. There were some 75 present when the meeting was opened, including one lady, but as the exercises progressed, the hall filled up till there was a goodly number present. Before introducing the speaker the committee on Farmers' Institutes held a session and decided to hold the next Institute at Ipswich, January 11, 1882. Subject for the forenoon, "Plowing and Plows," by Ansel W. Putnam. In the afternoon, "Reclaiming of Wood and Pasture Land," by Jas. J. H. Gregory of Marblehead.

Rev. O. S. Butler of Georgetown, was then introduced and announced the subject for the forenoon discussion, "Farmers' Institutes: their objects and the method of conducting them." Mr. Butler, after a few preliminary remarks, said: Farmers' Institutes are a modern institution. Three years ago, the legislature enacted a law compelling agricultural societies to hold at least three institutes a year. The Essex Agricultural Society was among the first to comply with the law, and since they commenced, the interest has so increased that last year five were held, and efforts made for even the sixth.—Farmers' Institutes are not only modern, but peculiarly our own, of New England origin; they are Democratic in form, in fact, "for the people from the people." We have the State board, the county fair, etc., but the institute comes nearer the practical farmer and the people than the others. The state board has a most honorable record.—(Here the speaker paid fitting tribute to Mr. Flint, the late secretary.) The county society is of great value by encouraging improvements and experiments for which premiums are offered. The Essex Agricultural Society has been sustained for the past sixty years by the most eminent men of the county, $100,000 have been spent in premiums and the Society is an honor to the farmers of this county. Not only are we honored with the best stock, the best fruit, best work of the mechanic, but by our best men. Men of character and ability are as anxious to enjoy our feast of reason as our annual feast at our fair. Farmers' Institutes are a necessary adjunct to agricultural societies among us. Here the farmers come together to ask questions and receive answers that they can understand. But there are many important questions that remain unanswered, and these must come before Farmers' Institutes. Those who manage them should make them the most practical possible, and the most practical men should be obtained to present the most practical views in the most practical way; men of experience who know the ins and out of farming, the breeding and training of stock, culture of root crops, corn crops, insilage, etc.; we want to know more about these things, of which we have yet to learn of a single failure. We want to know more about the evaporation of fruits, of which we know but little as yet. At the evaporating works in my town, the only ones in the county, we have used 18,000 bushels of apples and produced about 18,000 pounds of evaporated fruit, which has gone into the market at a good profit. From the waste apples, cores and peels, besides making a large amount of jelly, we have made 300 barrels of clarified cider. The average cost of apples for evaporation was 30 cents a bushel and 10 cents a bushel for cider apples. Then we have the making of butter and wool growing, (although they would first have to exterminate the dogs or make the owners keep them at home,) all these subjects should be considered and given to the farmers in a practical way. In conclusion, the farmer has every incentive, has the means about him to be an inspired philosopher in his way, and he will be a success.

Mr. Ware said the question was open for discussion, and he would ask the members to confine themselves to the subject.

Mr. Gregory then told his experience in the state senate in regard to the dog tax. He was in favor of taxing the female dog, so that it would not pay to keep them. Said he was well pleased and proud of the society. He thought it best to present only original ideas, and such things must be learned from experience.

Mr. Jas. P. King said he must apologize for the farmers of this town who were not present, and said that no one valued these meetings more than he did. Here he met old friends and associates, the farmers of Essex county. He considered the occupation of farming of as much importance as any profession in New England. He spoke of ensilage and against the raising of sugar beets for sugar, fertilizers, etc., and paid his compliments to the State Board of Agriculture.

Mr. F. H. Appleton of West Peabody, said there was much value in a silent man, and one object of the Institute should be to encourage him to come out and give his opinion, and the chances were that a good deal of information could be obtained.

Other speakers followed, including Mr. Andrews of Andover, Mr. Frank Marsh of Peabody, Mr. Dale of No. Andover, Mr. Walcott of West Peabody, Mr. Low of Essex, Mr. Newhall of Lynnfield, Mr. Hawkes of Saugus, and the Secretary of the meeting, Mr. Chas. P. Preston of Danvers.

At 1 o'clock the company sat down to an excellent dinner at Baldwins's Hotel. The celery was furnished by Mr. Luther Hanson of this town.

The afternoon subject was "The Culture of the Potato," and was opened by J. J. H. Gregory of Marblehead. The speaker in commencing said that there were five varieties, but we cultivate but one genus. They are found in Peru, Chili, Spain and Italy. Tomato, Belladonna and Egg Plant all belong to the same class or species. The potato was introduced into England by Sir Walter Raleigh, in 1586; it is not known where it originated. They were not used as an article of diet until within a hundred years. In France and Germany, they are treated as a fancy article; never being put on the table plain with meat, as it is here. The leaves of the potato plant, when steeped are a very active poison. The potato is a tuber, not a root; it is an enlargement of an underground branch. The blossoms differ in size, color, and abundance. There has been a great change in the potato of late years; the old fashioned varieties had become run out, the rot came on, and in 1850, Rev. C. E. Goodrich obtained native seedlings, and to him we owe the potato of to-day, the point being to get back to the original stalk

The defect of the potato as nutriment is in its albumen and phosphates, which is offset in some countries, where the potato is eaten largely, by cabbage and buttermilk. It is not a nutritious food. The speaker referred to the prizes given by the Society for potatoes, stated that in 1870 the country produced 173,000,000 bushels, and that this county was a great potato growing one, hence the reason and propriety of so doing. He spoke of the fancy price paid for some potatoes, and gave it as his judgment, that it was more than offset by the returns. He mentioned the difference in this part of the country and the South, where potatoes are used principally for soup, and where they want a heavy potato, while we here want a light flowery one. He next referred to the enemies of the potato bug, which are about a dozen, the principal ones being a triangular shaped insect something like our common fly, the soldier bug and the lady bug. The speaker said that these bugs should be left on the vines, and in using paris green it is the best dry, and mixed with flour. The arsenic in it, which does the good, changes when it enters the ground. There is also another bug, the cantharides, found on the vines in August in the morning and evening. It is of a bright bluish green color. The speaker referred to other vegetables, contrasting with them the potato as following us all the year round; he spoke of the apple belt and the potato belt, which is between latitudes 42.30 and 46, and that the two belts overlapped, we being in both and nearly in the center. In this belt is grown all the first-class potatoes. Mr. Gregory gave as his opinion that the potato has its youth, maturity, and old age. It reaches maturity in the fourth year, and after that it may be irregular and worthless. Our market shuns the yellow-faced potatoes—in England they prefer them, and also the kidney shaped. As a rule our potatoes are a failure in England, and vice versa. In regard to manure, the speaker thought the best way was to test the soil, some wanting phosphate and potash. New England soil lacks potash. In his opinion, in regard to planting, the tendency was toward level culture, to plough deep, at least 4 inches, and have the land fine. He spoke of salt as making, mixed with manure, very smooth potatoes; but if too much is used the potato is not so good. New land was, as a rule, the best for smooth potatoes. He also spoke of guano as a manure, using about 500 lbs. to the acre. He mentioned Chandler's horse hoe for covering and Allen's potato plough for digging.

At the close of Mr. Gregory's remarks, a discussion, consisting mostly of questions to Mr. G. on some of his points, followed. All seemed to be greatly interested in the subject, which they so ably discussed.

THE ESSEX COUNTY UNIVERSALIST S. S. UNION held its regular quarterly meeting with the Peabody school this (Wednesday) afternoon and evening. Representatives were present from Lynn, Beverly, Marblehead, Danvers, Gloucester, Rockport, Essex and other places, to the number of more than two hundred. After the meeting had been called to order by the president, Amos Merrill, Esq., prayer was offered by Rev. S. P. Smith, of Marblehead, the friends from abroad were welcomed to Peabody by the resident pastor, whose welcome was responded to by the Secretary of the Union, W. W. Wright of Lynn. The topic, "What Shall we Teach?" was then taken up by Rev. A. B. Hervey of Taunton, who took the ground that Christian religion and Christian morals should be taught, that Sunday schools were mainly engaged in teaching something else, instancing the International series as an example, arguing that the study of the sacrificial law, rites and ceremonies, is not the study of the Christian religion. The speaker referred to the morals of Japan as a rebuke to the dishonesty in New England, and said that we need to dwell more upon the spirit of Christianity, and less upon dogma and theology. He was followed by Dr. E. C. Bolles of Salem, who endorsed the words of the previous speaker, and drew attention, pointedly, to certain practical details of Christian living, such as work for the poor by the children, temperance, and reverence toward God.

Dr. G. H. Emerson, of Salem, spoke in criticism of Rev. Mr. Hervey's position, holding that it is the business of the Sunday school to teach the Bible, and the philosophy of living as expressed in theology. He was followed by Rev. J. N. Emery of Beverly, and Mr. E. D. Draper. The meeting then adjourned to partake of refreshments prepared by the Peabody ladies.

In the evening, after prayer by Rev. W. S. Perkins of Lynn, and singing by the young people of the Peabody Sunday school, the topic, "What to Do, and How to Do It," was taken up by Rev. Dr. A. J. Patterson of Boston Highlands, who said we all speak of our work from our failures as well as our successes. The Sunday school was not to take the religious education of the young out of the hands of the parents, which he declared a wrong to both, and to the church. The church was not to amuse people. Amusement was the spice of life, but people would die if they lived on spice alone. The speaker declared that the leading men of the land are country bred and country born, because the amusements and frivolities of city life weaken the manhood of city dwellers. The business of the Sunday school is to make men well founded in virtue and wisdom, to teach the Bible to the young. To do this there must be a man of culture and character at the head of the church, and he must have the help of all his teachers in his work, and of all interested in the cause.

Dr. Patterson was followed by Rev. J. N. Emery of Beverly, who spoke of making the exercises of the Sunday school attractive, and of enforcing the fact that the children belong to the church. He was followed by Rev. W. S. Perkins and Mrs. Langley of Lynn, and Rev. F. Dillingham of Danvers. The Union meets next with the 2nd Lynn Sunday School.

Mutual Council R. A. have a meeting for the election of officers to-morrow (Thursday) evening.

One of our citizens who believes that "it is well for man to live alone," has been troubled with rats lately, and recently caught one in a trap, that weighed 2 1-2 pounds.

The new thing in Christmas bookmarks is satin with a taper-fingered hand half covered with a lace mitt showering roses down upon the seasonable inscription at its lower end.

The arrival of delegates from Salem prevented the election of officers of the Peabody branch of the Land League, last night, and it is expected to take place next Tuesday evening.

The hall entertainment of the Odd Fellows last evening consisted of sleight of hand performances, etc. An hour was passed very pleasantly. Another will occur three weeks from last night.

The tannery and shop of Samuel Haight & Co, at Milton Center, N. Y. where Mr. C. W. Estes of Peabody, has been in charge for the past three years, was totally destroyed by fire last Sunday night.

Evangelical services every evening at 7.30, and every afternoon at 3, except Mondays and Saturdays, will be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The pastor is assisted by Rev. D. J. Griffin of Wareham.

It is said that the Eighth Regiment want a more convenient rifle range than the one at Framingham, and that Peabody has been suggested as a good place to lay out one, as it is about the central portion of Essex county.

The show windows of some of our stores are displaying lithographs of a soldier in full uniform and gun in hand, while in the background is the capitol at Washington. These are to help advertise the Soldiers' Home Bazaar.

Mr. Henry Tilton, while attending divine worship at the So. Church last Sunday forenoon, became unconscious from a rush of blood to the head. He was conveyed to his home at Estes' boarding house and attended by Dr. Pike.

The fair of the Espiscopal Church was opened and closed to-day, the attendance having been very fair, and will net the society a neat sum. There was issued a very readable paper in connection, which was liberally patronized by our business men.

News was received in town on Monday of the decease, very suddenly, of Miss Elizabeth, the oldest daughter of A. P. Phillips, formerly of this town, but now residing in Medway. This estimable lady had many friends in this town, formed by her long residence here.

Our office has been visited by the largest number of handsome men to-day for a long time, among them was Bro. Shepard of the Danvers Mirror, Bro. John L. Shorey, late of the Nursery. Bro. Pease of the Salem Observer, Mr. Chas. P. Preston, Secretary of the Essex Agricultural Society, besides a number of our citizens from the west part of the town.

of new and handsome patterns. Anticipating a splendid trade, I have invested largely in these goods, and have now a stock that I shall be pleased to exhibit to anyone.

Starr C. Hewitt.

The meeting at Town Hall this evening to formally receive Dr. Henry A. Reynolds by the W. C. T. Union, was fairly attended, the inclement weather no doubt preventing many from attending. The meeting was called to order by Miss Mary J. Floyd, and "Nearer my God to Thee" was sung by the audience. This was followed by reading from the Bible by Miss Floyd, and prayer by Rev. L. L. Wood. Dr. Reynolds was then introduced. He looks a little older, his hair is a little thinner, but he holds his own very well, and is as fine-looking a man as when he was here six years ago.

He said it gave him great pleasure to be permitted to again stand in the state of Massachusetts, to stand in Peabody as in times gone by and receive the right hand of fellowship. He hardly knew what to say. He had been advised of how things stood in Peabody, at some parts he could rejoice, at some his feelings were in an opposite direction but he felt he had done his whole duty, and was not responsible for the seeming disasters. He was glad that so many had stood firm. He then related his own experience during the eight years that he had been a temperate man. He was listened to very attentively throughout and was followed by other speakers.

Conscientious conductor, "I'm afraid sir, the young lady can't be permitted to travel on a half-ticket: she's much over twelve years of age!" Irate papa: "Do you mean to inform me, sir, that my daughter and I are endeavoring to swindle the railway company? Let me tell you, sir, that we've never been so grossly insulted on this line before, although we've both traveled on it for over fifteen years!"

Everybody should attend Wm. Donnell's opening of Christmas goods, on Saturday next.—Adv.

The acme of politeness was reached by the Nevada mining superintendent who posted a placard reading: "Please do not tumble down the shaft."

The rush for crockery and silver-plated ware at corner of Caller and Main streets, continues. Call and see for yourselves. You get goods at your own price. No such slaughter ever known before in Peabody. At auction every evening; at retail during the day. Ladies especially invited.

The man who manufactures the celebrated "A. W. Faber" pencils was recently married. Small Fabers, thankfully received.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The second entertainment in the Odd Fellows' course was given by the Park Instrumental Quartette, assisted by J. P. Cobb, humorist. It is a matter of regret that there was such a small audience at the hall, as the concert was a fine one, and worthy of a larger attendance than was visible on the occasion. Certainly it is poor encouragement to the artists, as well as to the enterprising managers of this course, when an entertainment of such merit fails to meet with a hearty response from our musical people. Compared with other towns of the size, Peabody has few entertainments and concerts of a nature similar to that attempted by this course, and it is not to be wondered at, judging by the patronage which they receive.—The Park Quartette played three pieces, two for brass instruments, and one for strings, in a very superior manner, the selection for the stringed instruments, from Flotow's Opera of Martha, being exceptionally fine, and eliciting a general and enthusiastic encore, when they gave another piece equally well rendered. A zither duet was well performed by Misses Annie and Nellie, Miss Annie played a cornet solo, one of the gems of the evening, and Miss Georgie executed "Believe me," on glass goblets, bringing down the house, when she gave as an encore "Home, sweet home." The youth of the performer, together with her great musical ability, gave much charm to her performance. Not the least of the enjoyments of the evening was the humorous singing of Mr. Cobb. He was applauded at every appearance, and if it had not been imposing on his good nature, the audience we believe, would have kept him singing all the evening. We think all considered themselves fortunate at being present. The next entertainment is announced for Thursday evening Dec. 22d, by the M'lle De Mont Concert Co.

The Art Exhibition, by the ladies of the Unitarian Society, was a success, netting them over one hundred dollars: a good sum, when it is considered that very few of the articles there exhibited were for sale. The variety and unusual beauty of the work attracted our best judges of art, and the exhibition was pronounced by all as well worthy the patronage bestowed upon it. The table on the left of the entrance to the chapel was covered with antique work, nearly every article exhibited there having a history. Further on a collection of quilts, bed coverings and afghans was shown, among them being a quilt woven in 1822. Fancy articles of every description filled up the rest of the space in the room, and the whole affair reflects great credit on the ladies of the society.

The Soldier's Home Bazaar has opened successfully in Boston, and an excursion has been arranged with the Eastern R. R. to Boston on Friday afternoon, in which Post 50 of this town and their friends will participate. Post 90 of Danvers, and J. H. Chapman Jr., Post 89 of Beverly will also attend on that evening. This will afford our citizens who desire an opportunity of visiting the bazaar, or any of the various places of amusement in Boston. Tickets to go and return will be sold for 45 cents from Peabody and 55 cents from Danvers and Beverly. Train leaves Danvers at 5, and Peabody at 5.08. Returning at 11.15 from Boston, the train will run through to Peabody and Danvers. Comrades of Post 50 are requested to assemble at headquarters on that day, at 4.30 P. M. in full uniform.

A meeting of the Peabody High School Association has been called in Temperance Hall for Friday evening. A disposition seems to be manifested in favor of reviving the old association, or taking steps toward the formation of a new one. We are glad to note the fact. We hope graduates who are interested in this matter will turn out. If there have been any mistakes in the past in conducting the re-unions or other business, a full meeting and a free interchange of opinion will correct them. Don't stay away, and then find fault if the management should fall into the hands of those who might make the Association other than you would have it. We hope a large attendance of the older graduates, especially, will be present.

It has been rumored that a second trumpet was to be given to the M. A. Picketts, of Marblehead, they having claimed a tie vote in the number of tickets sold, with the J. A. Lord Hose Co. of Salem. We are advised that their claim is not a just one, 293 votes being all that can really be credited to them, and that to the J. A. Lord Hose Co. rightfully belongs the trumpet. It has, however, been suggested, in view of the large number of tickets sold by them, to present them with a trumpet, but nothing definite has yet been decided.

Last Monday evening, by invitation of Essex Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Salem, Holten Lodge, of this town, paid a fraternal visit to their lodge room on Washington street. Essex Lodge is one of the oldest in this vicinity, having been instituted in 1843. Holten Lodge of this town, is an outgrowth of Essex Lodge, and many of its charter members were from Essex Lodge. After arriving in the ante-room, the brothers were given seats in the main hall, where were assembled about 100 members of Essex Lodge. Noble Grand Frank Cousins conducted the exercises, and on the "good of the order," remarks were made by members of the different Lodges present, and included, among others, remarks from Brothers Sawyer, Chadwick, Lewis, Littlefield, Teague, Fornis and others of Holten Lodge, Fowler and Hill of Fraternity, Dr. Miller of Elliott, besides members of Essex Lodge, including Prof. Hagar, Gifford and Dr. Morse. After the speeches, the company repaired to the banquet hall, where a fine oyster chowder was served, which was enjoyed by all present. At about half past ten the arrival of Bro. Quint's barge warned the brothers that it was time to return, which they did, after giving three cheers for Essex Lodge.

On Saturday afternoon a fire was discovered in a small building used for the shelter of pigs, on the premises of Everett E. Shaw, of So. Peabody. The burning building was in close proximity to the barn, and but for the timely aid of Justin Reed and Nathan Alley, who happened to be near, a serious conflagration would have been the result, as there is a deficiency of water in this vicinity. The fire probably originated from some children with matches who had been playing in the building.

The following were elected as officers of the National Labor Club, Friday evening, Dec. 2d: President—Richard Kimball; Vice Presidents—Ira Foster and Jas. F. Sullivan; Secretary—Edwin E. Boxwell; Financial Secretary—H. J. G. Kimball; Treasurer—Wm. F Sumner; Executive Committee—Edw. Trask, George F. Barnes, John J. O'Leary.—Reporter.

A free fight took place last Sunday evening, near Spring street, on the street leading from Spring to Oak, and bearing the euphonious name of 'Bloody lane,' between two burly Irishmen under the influence of liquor. Their friends separated them in a short time but they must have gone to work the next morning with pretty sore heads.

Jas. L. Hill of Lynn, will lecture at the So. Peabody Chapel to-morrow, Thursday, evening in the regular course. His subject is "How we struck each other, Europe and I." The lecture will be illustrated by a stereopticon, and the gentleman's well known eloquence and entertaining style of delivery should recommend him to the citizens in that vicinity.

While two ladies were returning home from church last Sunday evening, and when near the depot, some low or drunken person grasped one of the ladies by the waist, drew her toward him and attempted to kiss her. Who he was is not known, and it is just as well for his personal safety that such is the case.

We hope all will remember Gen. Stephenson's lecture of the "Battle of Gettysburg," at the Institute to-morrow evening. You will not only get your money's worth in an entertaining and instructive lecture that is fully illustrated, but also help a worthy cause. See adv.

Quite a handsome sum was realized for Mr. Nolan, at the Volunteer Fair, but we are unable to give the exact figures as the Committee have not yet finished the work of settling the outstanding bills, and rendered in their account.

Remember our Home dealers at Christmas. Don't go to Boston for your presents. You can do just as well here and in Salem. Read the adv. of Fernald & Sawyer. Their assortment of holiday goods is complete and their prices way down.

The "Billy" of Marblehead, who drew the first prize at the Volunteer Fair, turns out to be a dog, owned by Messrs. Paine and Humphrey of that town. Hereafter people who buy tickets at fairs will be giving the name of their pet dog or cat, instead of their own.

Mark Donlan of Peabody, was found at an early hour last Sunday morning, lying upon the sidewalk of Boston St. by the Salem police, in an unconscious state from intoxication and exposure. Dr. Goodell attended him at the Salem Police Station.

Rev. Dr. Steele will give a Bible Reading at the Tabernacle chapel, Salem, to-morrow evening, the subject being "The bearing of the revised New Testament upon questions in dispute between Liberalism and Orthodoxy."

It shows good judgment to buy a $3.50 Hat for $2.50, and it can be done at the Shawmut. Entire stock marked in plain figures, and at a small advance from factory prices.—Adv.

Home.

Home's not merely four square walls,
Though with pictures hung and gilded;
Home is where affection calls,
Filled with shrines the heart hath builded.

Home! Go watch the faithful dove
Sailing 'neath the heaven above us;
Home is where there's one to love;
Home is where there's one to love us.

Home's not merely roof and room;
It needs something to endear it;
Home is where the heart can bloom;
Where there's some kind lip to cheer it.

What is home with none to meet,
None to welcome, none to greet us?
Home is sweet—and only sweet—
When there's one we love to meet us.

A TASTE FOR READING.—Time should be devoted by every young man and woman entering life, were it only half an hour a day, to the development of their mind, to the gaining of useful information, to the cultivation of some ennobling taste. A taste for reading is worth more than any sum we can name. A rich man without this or some similar taste does not know how to enjoy money; his only resource is to keep on making, hoarding money, unless he prefers to spend it, and a mind that is not well developed does not know how to spend wisely. A well known millionaire used to say that he would gladly give all his money if he could only have himself the education which his lazy, stupid boy refused to acquire. Be advised, make it a rule, never to be broken, to devote at least half an hour a day to the reading of some useful and instructive book. Every man needs a knowledge of history, the elements of science, and other useful subjects, and, if only half an hour a day is given to reading, he will find the advantage of it. Be hungry and thirsty after knowledge of all kinds, and you will be none the worse, but all the better, as business men and women. Beware of novels, unless they are of first-class character; otherwise they are ensnaring and pernicious.

Dr. D. H. Agnew has returned to his clinical work, and as he entered the amphitheatre for the first time the students all arose and broke into a storm of applause. The Doctor colored, bowed, and proceeded quietly with an operation. He is said to have the gift of inspiring a feeling of actual affection as well as a sentiment of respect among his students.

Luther said: "If a man is not handsome at twenty, strong at thirty, learned at forty, and rich at fifty, he will never be handsome, strong, learned or rich in this world." "Statistics" observes Dr Beard, "supply this prophecy with a most remarkable fulfillment.

I wish to say to you that I have been suffering for the last five years with a severe itching all over. I have heard of Hop Bitters and have tried it. I have used up four bottles, and it has done me more good than all the doctors and medicine they could use on or with me. I am old and poor, but feel to bless you for such a relief by your medicine and from torments of the doctors. I have had fifteen doctors at me. One gave me seven ounces of solution of arsenic: another took four quarts of of blood from me. All they could tell was that it was skin sickness. Now, after using these four bottles of your medicine, my skin is well, clean and smooth as ever.

KEEP YOUR SCALP CLEAN.

The best thing out for removing Dandruff is

HEYLINGBERG'S

EUREKA DANDRUFF REMOVER.

It has been thoroughly tested by hundreds of gentlemen, Ladies, and Children, and we have plenty of testimonials of its good results. It is cooling, removes Dandruff, invigorates the roots of the hair, and will quickly produce a strong and beautiful growth in all cases where the roots of the hair are not fully dead, and will stop this unpleasant itching; in fact it is the best hair dressing in use. It is not greasy or sticky, and is warranted free of all oils, and poisins, and will prove the cleanest, safest and most economical Hair Dressing to be found.

Peabody, Mass., Nov, 18, 1881.

Mr. J. J. Heylingberg, Dear Sir:—Both myself and wife have used your Eureka Dandruff Remover for some time, with the most satisfactory results, and recommend it as being indispensable for the toilet. Yours truly,

FRANK A. BRAGDON.

Many more testimonials furnished if desired. Persons suffering from diseases of the scalp will be attended at the house when desired.

Anecdotes.

PARISIAN PECULIARITIES.

Am living near the "Mairie," which is the Mayor's office. Every ward in Paris has a Mayor. Principal business seems that of marrying. Continual stream of weddings at the "Mairie." Between eleven and twelve daily seems the regulation time for these ceremonies at the Mairie by the Maire. Cabs with wedding parties are continually driving into the courtyard of the Mairie. French houses generally are so built as to allow carriages to drive inside. Entertainment for man and beast. Also prevents ladies driving out from getting wet when it rains. Crowd always outside the Mairie peeping through iron bars of gate at wedding show. Strange curiosity, peculiar to all civilized nations, that of seeing a man and woman swearing they'll love each other for life. Or just before they swear they'll love each other all their days, or just after. It's a big contract to take in some cases, isn't it? Don't all speak at once. In France they have double-ender weddings. The Church marries the couple first, the Republic by the Maire at the Mairie second. Vive la Republique! In law a marriage won't stick here unless the Republic marries. In religion it won't stick unless the Church marries. One saves the property, the other the soul. The priest sanctifies the knot; the magistrate ratifies and legalizes it. Between courts of heaven and earth, the French knots are tied pretty fast. Legal and ecclesiastical ceremonies entirely independent or each other. To suit all parties, the Church must clinch the nail at one end, the State at the other. It is well. Going to Versailles the other day saw a wedding procession coming along the road on foot, bound for the church. Bride at the head in white and orange blossoms, on pa's arm, trailing a foot and a half of trail in the dust for a mile and a half. From behind in black, dusty and uncomfortable and perspiratory garmeuts, villagers running from all directions to see the show. Saw two large women with wooden shoes running down a narrow, stony street. Much clatter. Small boy between them. Large women each holding one hand of small boy, and as they ran small boy was yanked over the gutters at the rate of ten feet to the yank. All to be in time to see the wedding procession pass.—San Francisco Chronicle.

WORTH KNOWING.

A poultice of fresh tea leaves moistened with water will cure a stye on the eyelid.

For earache, dissolve assafœtida in water; warm a few drops and drop it in the ear, then cork the ear with wool.

The true physiological way of treating burns or scalds is to at once exclude the air, with cotton batting, flour, scraped potato, or anything that is handiest.

Use fresh water. Water that has stood in an open dish over night should not be used for cooking or drinking, as it will have absorbed many foul gases.

Mix a little carbonate of soda with the water in which flowers are immersed, and it will preserve them for a fortnight. Common saltpetre is also a very good preservative.

Take a new flower-pot, wash it clean, wrap in a wet cloth and set over butter, will keep it as hard as if on ice. Milk, if put into an earthen can, or even a tin one, will keep sweet for a long time if well wrapped in a wet cloth.

Common soda is excellent for scouring tin, as it will not scratch the tin and will make it look like new. Apply with a piece of moistened newspaper and polish with a dry piece. Wood ashes are a good substitute.

To cure bunions, use pulverized saltpetre and sweet oil. Obtain at a druggist's five or six cents' worth of saltpetre; put into a bottle with sufficient olive oil to dissolve it; shake up well, and rub the inflamed joints night and morning, and more frequently if painful.

Flies may be effectually disposed of without the use of poison. Take half a teaspoonful of black pepper in powder, one teaspoonful of brown sugar and one teaspoonful of cream. Mix them well together and place them in a room on a plate where flies are troublesome, and they will very soon disappear.

A CIVILIZED BABOON.

Henry, the large Chacma baboon in the Philadelphia "Zoo," has been taught to dine in a civilized fashion. At first he opposed dining at a table very vigorously, but he soon grasped the idea that if he did as his keeper wanted him he would be rewarded with a lump of sugar, and after that he became a very apt scholar. He has recently been fitted out with a blue canvas coat, trimmed with red and white bands and buttons as large as trade dollars. He now takes his meals in public, a special table having been built for him. At a sign from the keeper he seats himself upon the stool and demurely waits to be helped. The bill of fare varies, consisting of rice, sweet potatoes, bread and butter, milk, etc., given at different times. As the keeper sliced the potatoes, the baboon leisurely and demurely picked up the pieces and placed them in his mouth, taking from the cup, which he held in both hands, a draught of tea occasionally. The young female baboon will be put through a similar course of training, so that she can take the place at the table now occupied by the keeper.

Every person has two educations—one which he has received from others, and one, the more important, which he gives himself.

Keep well insured and watch your policy.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 22, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & Co., Gentlemen: I have taken Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and have derived great benefit from it. I have been troubled for about eight years with Kidney Disease and Gravel. I never suffered particularly from it until last fall. I was then afflicted with excrutiating pain that rose from my right kidney to my bladder. I was also greatly troubled with making my water. I could not retain it, and was obliged to go to the urinal a number of times a day. I tried a great many different remedies and took quantities of medicine without any seeming benefit or relief. I grew worse and I suffered distressing pains across my right kidney, and it was with great difficulty that I walked. Finally, about three weeks ago, I was induced to try your remedy. The first I took of it seemed to make me feel worse, but I continued, notwithstanding, and in a short time I began to improve. I have now taken a bottle of it, and am going to continue it. I have been wonderfully benefited. The pains have left me and I am not troubled with my water, and altogether I am feeling a different person. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has done it all.

Charles F. Kinsman

Essex street.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 21, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.—Gentlemen: About 10 years ago my first trouble began with a falling and retrocession of the womb, and the tortures I underwent are beyond description. I was attended by two of the most eminent physicians in the country and underwent a number of operations for tumors; but all that science and skill could do was ineffectual. I grew worse and worse year after year until my sufferings, from a complication of diseases, turned into Bright's disease, and all hopes of recovery, even by my physicians, were given up. However, I recovered for a time from this spell; at times being better and at times being worse. An analysis of my water showed large quantities of albumen. I had excruciating pains in my kidneys and across my abdomen towards the bladder, which compelled me to lie on my right for so long a time that at last large bed sores formed. I tried different remedies which were said to be good for Bright's disease, but they were ineffectual and made me worse. Cold chills would creep over me, up my spine, and through my head. My appetite was entirely gone, and I was so thoroughly emaciated and in such a frightful condition that my living at all was a mystery, even to my physician. Finally, last January, my husband purchased 10 bottles of your remedy and prevailed upon me to use it; and although from my previous experience with proprietary medicine, I had little or no faith in them, yet I had read so much about Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure that I began taking it, and did not experience any benefit from it until I had taken the third bottle, when I began to improve. I persevered in taking your remedy, and before long I was able to be up and around. My appetite returned and I began steadily to gain flesh. I have taken altogether 27 bottles and still continue its use, and my friends and neighbors look upon me in astonishment. I would also say that before taking your remedy I suffered dreadfully with painful incustinations and great flowing and had convulsions, and I was also affected with hemorrhoids. It seemed as if I were to be a martyr to all the pains and ills that flesh is heir to. But thanks to Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, I am now entirely free from any sufferings in that respect. I feel, as it were, like a new being. It is at times hard for me to realize the wonderful change; I am endowed with new life, all owing to your magnificent remedy. It has saved my life, and my gratitude to you is unbounded. My case is so prominent here that any one who desires to know more about it can write to Beverly, and they can receive the desired information. I make this reference because those living away from here sometimes doubt such statements as I have made. Your remedy is a blessing.

Carrie L. Wallis

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 21, '81.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.,—Gentlemen: The statement of my wife does not begin to express the suffering she underwent. We did not think it possible for her to live. Your remedy has no doubt saved her life. It is a grand thing, and you cannot think how thankful I am for it.

Henry B. Wallis

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where hope was abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in all diseases of the kidneys, liver or urinary organs. If any one who reads this has any physical trouble, remember the great danger of delay. nov 30—4w

A GREETING TO OLD AND NEW FRIENDS.

The Boston WEEKLY JOURNAL has long enjoyed the deserved reputation of being the representative newspaper of its class in the New England States. It has a constituency second to none in numbers or intelligence, and is each year commanding a wider field of influence. Its success among the reading classes of New England has been due to the liberal policy of its management, to the care and skill employed in its preparation, to its extensive sources of information, to the variety and timeliness of its contents, and to the acknowledged honesty of its views. These qualities, upon which every newspaper must rely for permanent or worthy success, will characterize it in the future as they have in the past, and it is the confident expectation of its managers that the year to come will witness a better development of it than ever before. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in all respects a newspaper WHICH NO MAN IN ANY DEGREE REMOVED FROM THE GREAT CENTRES OF INFORMATION CAN AFFORD TO DO WITHOUT.

THE ADVANTAGES TO THE READER.

It has never been so well equipped as now for the securing and effective presentation of the facts and discussion of the tendencies of the times. With the growth of the country, and the increasing prosperity which may reasonably be expected to accompany it, a good newspaper becomes indispensable to the man who would keep himself informed upon whatever is interesting the world at large. A well conducted journal of the times gives men better knowledge, broader views and keener sympathies, and draws them out of the demands of their individual lives upon a higher plane of thought and feeling.

ITS PECULIAR CHARACTERISTICS.

THE WEEKLY JOURNAL aims to furnish those who have not much time for reading with a full and comprehensive digest of the events of the day. Its purposes are to inform men upon the courses of government, politics and business, to present the news of the day and show its tendencies, and to give instructive facts and desirable information. With every resource known to modern journalism at its command, it unhesitatingly asserts its ability to do this, and invites an examination of its claims.

A YEAR OF GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST.

The coming year bids fair to be one of exceptional interest. All citizens will look upon the condition of political affairs with intentness, and watch their development with care. Some of the most important questions of the day are awaiting discussion and solution, and in the close balancing of political parties in Congress a more than ordinary concern in national affairs will be excited. The course of the new Administration will also attract much attention, since a remarkable interest attaches to President Arthur in view of the melancholy fate of his predecessor, whose chair he was so suddenly called to fill. Washington, therefore, will for many months be a centre of gaze for Americans, and all will desire a full and intelligent account of what transpires in it.—THE WEEKLY JOURNAL, through its skillful and well - known correspondents, "Perley" and "Webb," will be supplied with the most exhaustive and careful accounts of affairs, while the dispatches of the Associated Press will supplement their labors. "Perley's" accounts of social life in Washington, which are admitted to be among the best furnished to the press from the Capital, will also, as heretofore, be a feature of the paper. In the field of general news, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will display a greater energy than ever before. The general press dispatches will be supported by SPECIAL ACCOUNTS OF MATTERS OF WIDE INTEREST,

And, especially, much space will be given to the material interests of the country. As the paper has a large support among the farming community, particular attention will be given

TO AGRICULTURAL AFFAIRS.

Special articles by the "Young Farmer" will be a marked feature of the coming year, and the markets for produce in this city, together with the condition of the crops in all parts of the country, will be fully reported from time to time.

ITS POLITICAL CHARACTER.

Politically, THE JOURNAL will remain in earnest support of the Republican party and its principles, criticising measures freely irrespective of party lines when occasion demands, but holding to the processes and theories of government which for the past twenty years have steadily improved their claims to popular confidence. The paper will support the principles of the freedom and integrity of the ballot, the maintenance of the national credit, the protection of American industries, a practical Civil Service system and a sound finance, believing that thus only can the dignity and power of the Government be upheld, or the prosperity upon which the country has entered be made permanent.

THE WORLD ABROAD.

THE JOURNAL will also continue the valuable and instructive discussion of foreign men and affairs which Mr. Edward King has so long and so ably carried on. He is admitted to be the best of European correspondents, and none other is so much quoted and commended. Other special features will be "The Kennebecker's" entertaining descriptions of sea life and strange countries, "M. E. B.'s" "Rambling Talks" and other papers of literary merit, besides which a wide and careful selection will be made of the best current reading of the day. Great attention will also be given to New England affairs, and matters of interest in which the paper circulates will be given special prominence. Correspondents from all important points will contribute information, to which the telegraphic dispatches and the exchanges of THE JOURNAL will add as occasion requires. Altogether, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will be better than ever before, and will commend itself to the intelligence and taste of the reading public of New England. Each issue of THE WEEKLY JOURNAL contains THIRTY-SIX LONG COLUMNS

THE SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL,

Published on Tuesdays and Fridays, is a paper of especial value to persons engaged in commercial pursuits outside the large cities. It contains, in addition to all the news of the day, the fullest possible market, commercial and marine reports, besides a large amount of valuable reading matter of a miscellaneous character. THE BOSTON SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL is a paper which no man actively engaged in trade and watching the course of mercantile affairs can afford to be without

Over 5000 Druggists AND Physicians

Have Signed or Endorsed the Following Remarkable Document:

Messrs. Seabury & Johnson, Manufacturing Chemists, 21 Platt St., New York:

Gentlemen:—For the past few years we have sold various brands of Porous Plasters. Physicians and the Public prefer Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster to all others. We consider them one of the very few reliable household remedies worthy of confidence. They are superior to all other Porous Plasters or Liniments for external use.

Benson's Capcine Plaster is a genuine Parmaceutical product, of the highest order of merit, and so recognized by physicians and druggists.

When other remedies fail get a Benson's Capcine Plaster.

You will be disappointed if you use cheap Plasters, Liniments, Pads or Electrical Magnetic toys.

A SURE REMEDY AT LAST. Price 25cts. MEAD'S Medicated CORN and BUNION PLASTER.

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

FASHIONABLE ELEGANCE IN PARIS.

There is no city in the world that has grown to such refinements in personal belongings and in the arts of the toilet as Paris, and the actual status of a lady or gentleman, and particularly of a lady, is much more clearly exhibited by her personal habits and surroundings than by her clothes. There is none of the bareness even in hotels abroad that we are so apt to find at home, and the care which in hotels gives sofa and mantel and toilet drapery, a lavatory furnished with elegance, a draperied bed, and mirrors in abundance, in private life supplements all these with dozens of little niceties all tending toward delicacy and an exquisite refinement in the care of the person. There are dainty instruments, fine as jewels, for the care of the nails, the eyebrows, the teeth, the skin, and even the ears. Brushes for all uses include a dozen ivory-mounted and inclosed in satinwood, satin-lined cases. Perfumed waters are distributed from crystal flasks with silver tops that can be graded for removal so as to give it in quantity or drop by drop. Softening creams and velvety powders are concealed in priceless little jars of Indian or old china, and gloves and mouchoirs are kept in cases that communicate to them an indescribable odor, faint yet most delightful.

The underclothing used in the daytime, instead of being folded as formerly, a custom considered the very pink of neatness and order, is now hung upon the pegs of a tall revolving stand which occupies a very small space in the dressing room, and over this is thrown a light cover of linen, which may be ornamented with German embroidery or etching. Under a cotton dress a lady will not unfrequently wear silk underclothing, the underwear being much finer and more daintily trimmed than the outside. Combs of every description, when not of ivory, are of thin tortoise shell—and the shell are more desirable. When a lady goes to her bath, over her nightdress of batiste she puts a dressing gown of pale pink or blue flannel, and the small slippers into which she thrusts her white feet are satin, lined to match. Toilet covers and draperies are trimmed with quantities of exquisite lace, and chairs, baskets, hanging-baskets, and bird cages with ribbons and flowers. How it is all kept so pretty and fresh looking is a mystery, but the French woman gives her mind to the care of her body.—Albany Evening Journal.

A CLEVER CROW.

I have had my Australian piping crow for about two years. At first he was quite uneducated, and rather a disreputable looking party, but, with good food and exercise, his talent soon developed itself. He began with the first part of "The Bells," then he got off perfectly the trumpet calls of "Cease Firing," "Charlie is my Darling," "Nix my Dollie," and he is diligently at work at "God bless the Prince," and has the first part fairly well off. He fetches and carries like a dog, and seems never tired of running after a ball of crumpled paper, and bringing it back and putting it into one's hand and waiting for another throw. He will tumble about on the floor, and play more like a monkey than a bird. He will get into a slipper with a string tied to it, and allow himself to be coached round and round the room, holding on all the time to the string. Some time ago we were troubled with mice, but "Peter" soon brought them to a sense of their situation. He ferreted them out, chased them, killed them, and, having washed them in his water tin, hung them up to dry, picked them and swallowed them. It requires great perseverance training these birds. They will eat almost anything. Some days ago our bird swallowed a piece of glass, and for two days and nights was very ill, moaning pitifully, but he at last brought it up in the usual way hawks and owls do. He is now quite recovered, and in full song.—The London Field.

WIFE SELLING.

So recently as July 7, 1881, a case of the kind was reported in a local English paper, as follows: William Dunn, of Ripon, was summoned before the beak for instructing his son Thomas in his trade, although the Education act had provided that he should not do this until Thomas had learned certain other things which will be no manner of use to him. Mrs. Dunn, like a brave woman, came forward in defense of Thomas; whereupon the lawyers, always desirous of a side issue, suggested that she had been married to another man. This Mrs. Dunn at once admitted. "Yes, I was once married to another man," she said, "but he sold me to Dunn for 25s., and I have it to show in black and white, with a receipt stamp on it, and I did not want people to say I was living in adultery." These, I believe, were the ipeissima verba of Mrs. Dunn; and I venture to think that the exorbitant price (as it might appear to some) which her present husband gave for her, was fully justified, not only by her timely vindication of him and his son, but also by her prudence in having evaded the breath of calumny by obtaining a properly stamped receipt for herself.—Notes and Queries.

Good is positive. Evil is merely privative, not absolute. It is like coal, which is the privation of heat. All evil is so much death or nonentity.

As sins proceed they ever multiply; like figures in arithmetic, the last stands for more than all that went before it.—Thomas Browne.

Life, as we call it, is nothing but the edge of the boundless ocean of existence where it comes upon soundings.

THE INDEPENDENT.

The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—THE REV. JOSEPH COOK.

ESTABLISHED in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, THE INDEPENDENT at once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight Mormonism, for Civil-Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, more poetry and stories than popular monthlies, and gives more information than an anual cyclopædia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what THE INDEPENDENT is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of THE INDEPENDENT. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which includes Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science, Pebbles, Personalities, Ministerial Register, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday school, News of the week, Finance, Commerce, Insurance, Stories, Puzzles and Agriculture. 32 Pages in all.

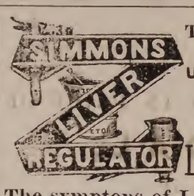
A true Church must have a true dogma. In the constant whirl of opinions the Church must have a fixed pole. A Church without a dogma was in the long run simply an absurdity. Such a Church was a lamp without a light; she was like a party without a policy; she was like a dial that was placed in the dark, and had no sunlight to fall on its face. The Church must have the dogma of dogmas—the truth about Jesus Christ, He who was Himself the living theology of His Church.—Bishop of Derry.

In Cincinnati they have a "Society for the Prevention of Kissing Girls who Paint." Now if the girls would organize a society which would prevent their kissing anybody who drank liquor or used tobacco, we think one ordinary osculatory minister could do the business for that city.

If all the salt in the sea were collected together, it would cover the entire surface of Europe with a layer one mile in thickness.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.



Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Ellsworth, of Port Ewen, Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth. His disease involved the whole of his thigh bone and the sufferihg man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consultnd, held a different opinion, and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Ellsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottld. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY. THE SUN.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy. Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1878 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN's example.

THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN's political course.

THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like THE SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a perfect Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

We ask you to read the advertisement of Darby's Prophylactic Fluid, which appears in our issue of to-day. It is a wonderful healing remedy, a most powerful disinfectant, and a positive germ destroyer, and is perfectly safe even in the hands of the most inexperienced. It is highly recommended by eminent physicians and chemists, and endorsed by hundreds of others who have used it and know its valuable properties. It costs but a trifle, and will save much suffering, time and money. Darby's Fluid has long been recognized as a household article for universal family use. Prepared by J. H. GOD'S POWER AND MAN'S WORK. There is a good sermon to our anti-mission and do-nothing brethren, in the following words from the National Baptist:

The intelligent reader of the New Testament has not failed to remark the frugality with which miraculous agency is used. It is a rule, to which we do not now recall a single exception, that nothing is done miraculously that could have come about by natural means.—When our Lord stood by the door of the tomb, where Lazarus had lain four days, He said: "Take ye away the stone." He would exert the supernatural power needed to recall the dead to life; but He would not use the same power to roll away the stone, since man was competent to do that. Nor did the voice of power release Lazarus from the swathing grave-clothes; but He bade the bystanders, "Loose him and let him go." Our Lord did not exert His miraculous power to feed the multitude, till the resources of the disciples had been employed and exhausted. "How many loaves have ye? Go and see." Nor did He at the close of the meal propose to depend on miraculous means for the coming day; but rather, "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost."

The same thing is to be observed in the wonderful display of divine power which confounded the priests of Baal. It was man that hewed the wood and laid it in order, and poured on the water: it was GOD who commanded the fire to descend from Heaven.

As soon as the children of Israel had entered Canaan, and had eaten of the new corn of the land, the miracles of the manna ceased.

GOD is always Himself; He never does for us what we can do for ourselves.

ITCHING PILES—SYMPTOMS AND CURE.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.

Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.

Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.

Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.

Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

R. S. LAMBERT.

Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,

A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,

Mrs. M. A. EMERY,

359 Lowell Street,

Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,

Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.

The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.

The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.

This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.

TESTIMONIALS from well known people near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible destroyer, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.

We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.

J. W. Manning the Veteran Nurseryman, says: Having over-exerted myself in my nursery giving me a weakness of the Stomach and Kidneys, I used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam—which has given me an appetite and proves better than any bitters, and is the most pleasant preparation to the taste that I have ever used.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.

The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:

To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.

Respectfully yours,

Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.

Pine street, Swampscott, Sept. 15.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.

South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.

Editor Boston Herald:

My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

"Almost at Death's Door."

114 Shawmut street, Chelsea, March 1, '81.

I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy. Faith Whitcomb's Balsam is strange as it may seem: a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.

Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.

Mrs N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.

Write or call upon Mrs. Russell, and also upon her family Physician for further particulars.

It Cures the Shop Girls.

Last summer I was obliged to give up my work on account of severe cough; three physicians said I was going in quick consumption, but after using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam my cough is better, I gained in flesh and have a good appetite.

It gives the best satisfaction of any cough remedy I ever sold. Ira P. Jefts, Druggist,

Memorial Hall, Boston, March 24, 1881.

Having suffered all winter from a distressing cough, I was induced to try Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using all of two bottles I find myself entirely cured and can truthfully recommend it as the best remedy I have ever used.

G. N. Veeder.

Saved! Saved! Saved!

I am happy to say that Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has cured my cough, of which I had despaired of ever being cured. I can now sleep without coughing at all, all of which I owe to Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. I only now need strength.

Mrs. Charles G. Gardner.

Rev. Octavius B. Frothingham, one of the most widely known among what have been classed for want of a better term as free-thinkers, announces a change in his views of religious truth. Mr. Frothingham closed his connection with the "First Independent church," New York, a year or two since and went abroad for his health and to study. It was announced from Europe while he was there, through M. D. Conway, another so-called free-thinker, who preaches to a small congregation in London, that on his return Mr. Frothingham would begin to write the life of George Ripley, a work for which he is especially well-fitted, having been associated with the Brook Farm movement and having written a history of transcendentalism in New England, besides having known much of Mr. Ripley's life in New York. Mr. Frothingham is now engaged in this work of love.—Mr. Frothingham, however, has altered his mind somewhat about religious truth. Doubtless he thinks just as freely as ever, perhaps more so, but he certainly thinks differently. He has got tired of negations and wants something affirmative. He says that while in Rome he watched the work of Catholic priests and talked with many of them, not the ecclesiastics of place and power, but the working priests who attended to their duties and went among the people as spiritual helpers. He found them, he says, often ignorant, unambitious and superstitious, but he found them sustained and guided by a power which thinks must mystify philosophers. What the power is he does not know, but "I, for one," he adds, "do not care to go on denying the existence of such a force." For twenty years he has been in the free religious movement and has got tired of it. He does not see anything coming of the preaching of himself, of Chadwick in Brooklyn, of Felix Adler among the Jews, or Pere Hyacinthe in Paris, and he is satisfied that it is the men and not the truth which keeps the free religious movement alive. But Mr. Frothingham did not need to go all the way to Rome to find out that there is something in Christianity. He was formerly Unitarian. There are devout men in that denomination, to say nothing of others, who could have told him what the mysterious power is that animated those unpretending priests he saw in Rome. He might have learned it from Channing, a man of deep and pervasive piety. He might have learned it from James Freeman Clarke, a man of a thoroughly religious spirit, honest, frank and intelligent. He might have learned it from thousands of men and women in his own land. Any of them, priest or layman, would have told him that the essence of religious life is rightness of motives, and that he whose heart is right will desire to help mankind to a better condition, outward and inward. At any rate, Mr. Frothingham says that while he is not ready to recant he has stopped denying and will wait a while for more light. It is rather a melancholy confession for a man who has been preaching religious truth, or something regarded as that, for twenty years or more.—Lawrence Eagle.

VIRGINIA COCOANUT CONES.—Whip the whites of five eggs, as for icing; add one pound of powdered sugar as you proceed, also one-half grated cocoanut until it will stand alone.—Mould the mixture with your hands into small cones, and set far enough apa t so as not to touch one another, upon buttered paper in a baking pan. Bake in a very moderate oven.

ENGLISH POTATO BALLS.—Boil some potatoes very dry; mash them as smoothly as possible; season well with salt and pepper; warm them, with an ounce of butter to every pound of potatoes, and a few spoonfuls of good cream; let them cool a little, roll them into balls; sprinkle over them some crushed vermicelli or macaroni, and fry them a light brown.

MUFFINS.—One and a half pints new milk, one egg, one tablespoon sugar, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon salt, one cake yeast (or better half cup home made yeast), mix the flour until a very stiff batter is formed; leave in a warm place during the night and bake in the morning in rings.

CORN BREAD.—One pint sweet milk, one pint sour milk, pint flour, two pints meal, one tablespoon syrup, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon soda. Steam three hours.

OYSTER PIE.—Line a deep plate with pie crust; fill it with pieces of bread; cover it with nice pastry, and bake it in a quick oven till a little brown; have the oysters stewed and seasoned; just as the pastry is baked take off the upper crust, remove the bread, and put in the oysters; cover it and serve while hot.

CREAM PUFFS.—One-half pint of boiling water, one cup of butter, two cups of flour. Let the water and butter boil, then stir in the flour. Let it cool. Add five eggs well beaten. Beat all well; drop in muffin rings; bake thirty minutes; boil one pint of milk; beat together one cup of flour, one cup of sugar and two eggs, add this to the boiling milk and boil three minutes; cut a hole in the top of each cake and fill with cream, putting the piece of crust back.

GLOVE CLEANING.—One gallon of benzine, one-half ounce of chloroform, one-half ounce of ether, one ounce of alcohol, and one ounce of oil of wintergreen.

SPONGE CAKE.—Six eggs, one-half pound white sugar, one-fourth pound sifted flour, one-half lemon, juice and rind; beat the yolks of the eggs very smooth and light with the sugar; then add the lemon, next the flour, and lastly the whites of the eggs, beaten to a stiff froth. Bake in a steady oven, and cover the cake with paper to prevent burning.

In a low sense poetry is composition in metre. It may be heroic, or dramatic, or lyric, or ironic, and in this low sense it may have a value to be named and measured. But in the high sense, poetry is the language of the affections and the imagination, without regard to certain standards of measure and movement. Phidias was as truly a poet as Milton, Raphael as Gœthe, though one wrought his creations in stone, the other in colors. Much that is called poetry is but the swelling or the "swabbing" of words. Genuine poetry, whether in marble, or on canvas, or in verse, is instinct with the presence of angels.

A RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER.—We desire to call the attention of our readers to one of the greatest newspapers of the age—and that secures the best writers in this country and Europe, regardless of expense: has the best and fullest book reviews of any paper in the country; has able articles upon financial subjects; has departments edited by specialists and devoted to Music, Fine Arts, Science, Religious Intelligence, Missions, School and College, News of the Week, Hymn Notes, the Sunday School, Legal and Sanitary questions, Biblical Research (something that cannot be found in any other newspaper in the United States.) Farm and Garden, Insurance, Weekly Market Reports, etc.,—in fact, a newspaper fully suited to the requirements of every family, containing a fund of information which cannot be had in any other shape, and having a wide circulation all over the country and in Europe. We refer to THE INDEPENDENT, of New York. "The Largest, the Ablest, the Best." See advertisement, in another column, and send a postal card for free specimen copy.

"Sacrifice to the Graces," once said Plato to a writer, who had real merit, but whose compositions were rough and unfinished. There are not a few folks whose solid and valuable qualities would be greatly improved by better manners. Paul made much, in religion, of common courtesy.

It is said that the ladies of Saugus are agitating the project of forming an association which is to "embrace the whole town." Hereafter we will make our home in Saugus.

Gen. Hancock has been examining a cannon, invented by a humane society man, that will shoot eight miles and send five hundred shots in sixty-eight seconds. It will get so after a while that our goverment can whip any government on earth and never see one of the corpses. Five hundred shots in sixty-eight seconds, kept up for a week or two, would starve the enemy to death, by keeping them flying around, if none of them were hit. We should like to see Guiteau on a barrel out on the prairie, and let Hancock get up a turkey shoot with that new gun, at ten cents a shot. It would scare the cuss to death, and pay all the national debt.—Puck's Sun.

BOSTON THEATRE.—"Michael Strogoff" closes this week with no abatement in its popularity. It might be profitably run all winter, but the contracts which had already been made when this unprecedented success was announced compel its withdrawal.—Large excursion parties have visited the theatre from various points in New England during this week, and no other feeling save that of delight has been expressed. The opera season opens at the Boston Dec. 26th.

We desire to take our readers by the elbow and whisper a few words in their ear. When selecting a present for a friend, select something that is useful. It is not the cost of the article, but the appropriateness of it. In procuring presents of this kind, remember A. J. Swain, 220 Essex street, Salem.

The Danvers Mirror is enjoying an advertising boom. Glad of it. The Mirror is an ably conducted paper and a credit to the town.

Jewelry is always appropriate and acceptable for holiday presents. You will find an elegant assortment of lockets, pins, charms, etc., at C. A. McKenzie's, with A. J. Swain, 220 Essex St., Salem.

The time has arrived when our readers are wont to turn their attention to making selections for holiday presents. Attention is called to the magnificent stock of elegant goods at Chamberlain & Son's, 190 Essex street, Salem, consisting in part of gold and silver watches, solid silver and plated ware, French clocks, rings, pins, etc. Space will not allow of a detailed description of all the beautiful and costly things to be seen there, and only a visit will suffice.

The Produce Exchange Association of Salem, have some prices in our advertising columns that are worth the perusal by our readers. The prices of provisions, as all know, are held at very high prices in this vicinity, but if the gentlemen in control of the Association fullfil their promises, and we are assured that they do, it will pay our readers to call and see them. Goods are delivered in Peabody free of charge, and they are selling meats and all other kinds of produce way below the price usually asked for them. Don't forget it.

Conrad has a show in his window which attracts all persons who pass up and down Essex street, in Salem. A table is spread with all kinds of goodies, and is a representation of dolls at supper. The surroundings in the window all correspond with the scene, and crowds are gathered in front, before passing in to the store to purchase some of the wonderful bargains to be found there.

Mr. A. B. Cross, the artist photographer, has several new novelties to offer his patrons for the holidays. Those contemplating having pictures taken should call at once.

Everybody should attend Wm. Donnell's opening of Christmas goods, on Saturday next.—Adv.

Among the residences lately completed in town, that of Mr. George A. Whitney upon Central street, is particularly noticeable, being a creditable and ornamental addition to the vicinity.—The house which is painted (by Geo. F. Ward) with the fashionable color of olive green shaded by another tint of green, with red trimmings, is excellently arranged, its exterior being tasty in design and thorough in workmanship. The house stands on the corner of Stevens street, facing Central. A flight of granite steps, over which is a porch, admits through a handsome black walnut door to the front hall, which presents a cheerful and harmonious appearance, the dark wood of the balustrade being well matched by the pretty paper on the walls. The hall is lighted by a handsome gas fixture rising from the post of the stair-railing. The parlor opens from the left. It is a good-sized room, and particularly pleasant. A bay window is on the Central street end, making a pleasing effect outside, and adding to the effect inside. In this room there is a handsome white marble mantel, beneath which is arranged a register for heating. From the side window which overlooks a piazza a full view of the square is presented. The sitting room is entered from the parlor and is likewise on the Stevens street side. It is the size of the parlor with a bay window on Stevens street; one window of this room looks directly out on the side piazza. Opposite the sitting-room, and back of the hall from which an entrance can be made, is the dining room which, as well as the sitting room, is furnished in ash. This is a very pleasant room. In the rear of this is a pantry with every convenience of drawers and tables, with a refrigerator built in, into which the ice can be placed by a back entrance. A smaller room makes the kitchen. Soapstone sink, with hot and cold water, good closets and convenient drawers make up a combination which should render house work comparatively a recreation. In the rear of the hall, between the sitting and dining rooms, are a nice china closet and set bowl for a lavatory. In the cellar a large Magee furnace from Caskin Bros., sends up its generous volume of warm air, keeping the whole house comfortable. A nice basement room is arranged for washing with a set of three soapstone tubs, each furnished with hot and cold water. The splendidly arranged system of piping both for gas and water was put in by D. B. Lord. Jr

From the lower front hall we ascend to the upper, and turning to the left at the end overlooking the porch, into Elm St., is a room to be used as a library. The rooms upstairs correspond very nearly with the rooms below. The front chamber overlooks Central street to the square, with even a clearer and nicer view than the room below, while from all the chamber windows there is a good outlook. In the chambers over the parlor and sitting rooms there are set bowls with the woodwork of which the chamber sets match. These bowls are in the corner and the slabs are so shaped as to be pleasing in appearance and convenient to use, which is not always the case, a square edge coming out often in the way. A small entry way in the rear leads to the bath room, which, made as is usual in such rooms, is so arranged as to combine utility and comfortable space. A back flight of stairs beneath this entry leads to a back entry below between the sitting room and dining room. The attic which is large and light, would make two or three very pleasant rooms. From either window of it the view is excellent, that in the rear looking out on Buxton's Hill.

Excellent taste is displayed about the house in all respects, the papers being very pretty and harmonizing well in each room with their surroundings.—They were purchased of the firms of Goldthwait & Bixby, and Merrill & Mackintire in Salem. Mr. Whitney is pleased to speak of the faithful manner in which all have done their work.—The mason work was done by E. D. Trask & Son. The principal work of course was the carpentering or building, which was done by Messrs. Wingate & Israel, who have certainly displayed good taste and done work which redounds to their credit. The grading, by Mr. N. M. Quint, was of course done well. The front steps and all the granite work speaks well for Mr. N. T. Clark of Salem who furnished it. The house is slated and there is an electric bell at each door. Of course there are many little things to be attended to before Mr. Whitney has the place exactly as he desires, but while there are larger houses in town, there are few, if any, which display more taste, comfort and beauty. In this connection Mr. Wm. D. Dennis, of Salem, the architect, is entitled to credit. Every such house is a compliment to the workmen who make it, to the owner who procures it, and to the town in which it is. We congratulate Mr. W. and family upon possessing so desirable a home, which we trust they may for many years enjoy. We are told that Mr. W. has secured control of a part at least of the adjoining estate, and that it will be improved, thus making the surroundings more in keeping.

Mr. M. W. Ray, who recently leased Mr. G. M. Teel's stable on Central St., placed at the depot a new coupe, last Tuesday for the accommodation of the traveling public. See adv.

The following is the report of the Committee on the Volunter fair: Total amount of money received, $5695.04; total expense, including season ticket prizes, $2583.59; balance, $3111.45.

Mr. David Bailey, engineer at the Bleachery, is still suffering severe pain in the hip, caused by being thrown from a wagon last Saturday week, but his forehead and face are doing nicely.

The Essex Congregational Club celebrated Forefathers' day last Monday evening, at the So. Church Chapel, Salem. Mr. T. M. Osborne had charge of the musical selections, which were very fine.

Among the musical selections to be performed at the Barton Square church, next Sunday, will be a hymn written by Gen. H. K. Oliver on his 81st. birthday and dedicated to Miss Grace F. Dalton.

Mr. Chas. Tucker, who has for several years been foreman in the beam house of Isaac Hardy, has accepted a similar position with a firm in Pennsylvania. Mr. B. Frank Goodwin succeeds him.

The sparring match at town hall, last evening, was indefinitely postponed. The gentlemen who wear the gloves were present, but as their audience consisted of three persons they decided not to give the exhibition.

Since the large advertisement in the PRESS, Sawyer's business has been wonderful. It has been one continual picnic of prosperity, and he has been surrounded by a clamorous crowd of customers hungry for goods.

E. W. Locke of Chelsea, will speak at Ashland Hall, Sunday, Dec. 25th, 1881. Afternoon at 2 1-2, subject, "The New Birth;" evening at 7, subject, "Thrilling scenes of camp and battle field," interspersed with army songs. Admission as usual.

Mr. J. M. Ward, the florist, on Endicott street, has his greenhouses very conveniently arranged, and is receiving many orders for flowers for Christmas. Ladies will find just what they want by calling on him. A call at his greenhouses at this season is quite refreshing.

Jennie B. Hagan, assisted by Mr. Fred Hansell, whistle soloist, will hold an informal entertainment at Ashland Hall, on Thursday evening, Dec. 22, commencing at 7 1-2 o'clock. Crowded houses have greeted them at New Bedford, Easton and other places where they have appeared.

The Odd Fellows have received notification that they will be assessed the sum of five cents each, for the purpose of erecting a monument over the grave of Chas. H. Ridgely, who died at Baltimore a short time since, and who was formerly Grand Secretary of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. of O. F.

At the meeting of the Peabody branch of the Land League last night, the remainder of the officers were chosen. The following is the full list:—Spiritual Director—Rev. M. J. Masterson; President—P. H. O'Connor; Vice Presidents—John J. Bartlett, Mary A. Masterson, Katie O'Keefe; Secretary—Richard Barry; Collector—Patrick Heffernan; Treasurer—Thos. H. McGrath; Counsellors—John Murray, David Moore, Richard Lyons, John Motley, Patrick Kirwin, Thomas Carroll, Michael Kelley, Jeremiah Bresnahan; Counsellor-at-large—Patrick A. Masterson.

THE HOLIDAY season which approaches is one which the whole Christian world observes. It is peculiarly a church festival. In Puritan days our fathers paid little regard to Christmas because of its associations with the English Church. But time has worn this prejudice away, and not only in the Catholic and Episcopal Churches, and among their people, but in all denominations and churches, extensive preparations are made for the event, and special services, including the Christmas tree for the children, are held.—This year the holiday comes on the Sabbath, and the music and services in the different churches will be, therefore, of a more interesting and appropriate nature. At the South Congregational Church, Rev. W. G. Sperry, pastor, the following selections will be rendered:

Anthem. And there were Shepherds. Millard
Response. Lord have mercy. Hodges
Carol. Listen, Lordlings, unto me. Osgood

The choir consists of

Mrs. B. F. Upton, Soprano.
Mrs. George Upton, Contralto.
Mrs. F. W. Stanley, Tenor.
Mr. S. P. Chase, Bass.
Mr. F. W. Taggard, Bass.
Mr. Frank Upton, Organist.

At the Unitarian Church, Rev. J. W. Hudson, pastor, the following selections will be performed:

Anthem. Sing O Heavens. Tours
Chant. Speak ye Comfortably. Howard
Introit. O sing to God (Noel). Gounod
Carol. Say, where is He born. Mendelssohn

The choir consists of

Miss Grace F. Dalton, Soprano.
Mrs. George Upton, Contralto.
Mr. F. W. Stanley, Tenor.
Mr. S. Chase, Bass.
Mr. Frank Upton Organist.

They will be assisted on this occasion by

Miss Alice Nelson, Soprano.
Miss M. K. Felt, Contralto.

In the evening a Sabbath School Concert will be held appropriate to Christmas.

At the St. John's Church, Mass will be celebrated at 6, 8 and 10 o'clock A. M. The following musical selections will be performed at 10 o'clock:

Second Mass. Hadyn
Duet, tenor and bass, "Justus et Patma." "Adestes fideles," arranged by Novillo.
Miletair March. Schubert

At 3 P. M., Rossie's Vespres, for which the following programme has been prepared:

Grand Magnificat. Emory
"Alma Redemptorus Mater." Rampas
"O Salutaris." Dana
'Tanta Mergo," duet, tenor and bass. Rossi Processional Chant." Batiste

The solo quartette consists of

Miss Minnie A. Smith, Soprano.
Miss Nellie Noonan, Contralto.
Mr. William Millea, Tenor.
Mr. Thomas McGrath, Bass.
Mr. J. J. Carew, Organist and Director.

At the Universalist Church, special services will be held in the afternoon, the church will be decorated, and a sermon appropriate to Christmas will be preached by Rev. Mr. Harmon. In the evening a Christmas Sabbath School Concert will be given. Special musical selections will be rendered by the choir under the direction of Mr. W. P. Clark:

Anthem. And there were Shepherds. Millard
Hymn. Song of the Angels.
Response. How lovely are the messengers. Gould
Hymn. Kingdom of Christ.
Anthem. With glory lit the midnight air. H. Dielman

Miss Delia Roe, Soprano.
Miss Annie Hubon, Contralto.
Mr. W. P. Clark, Tenor.
Mr. F. W. Taggard, Bass.
Miss Nellie Bartlett, Organist.

At the St. Paul's Episcopal Church there will be morning prayer at 8.30, Holy Communion and sermon at 9 A. M., and evening service at 7. The services in the evening will be a service of song illustrating the early life of our Blessed Lord, from His birth until the age of 18, which is all the record which the Holy Word contains until His ministry begins. The church will be decorated as usual.

Services in Calvary church, Danvers, at 10.45 A. M. and 3 P. M.

Christmas trees for the children will be held on Saturday afternoon at the South Church, on Saturday evening at the Methodist and Unitarian, and on Monday evening at the Baptist.

In the Guiteau trial, which was resumed to-day, Dr. Worcester of Salem, was called by the government as an expert, and testified that he considered the prisoner sane.

Poet's Corner.

The Blessing of Bliss.

TUNE—"I LONG TO BE THERE."
(Tribute of Praise. page 257.)

FIRST PART.

I have wandered, O Lord, from the fold,
I am ragged and ruined in sin;
But thy mercy doth sinners behold
And thy mercy, O Lord, takes them in.
CHORUS.
O, the peace and the blessing of bliss
Unto all who with Jesus abide;
There is never a blessing like this,
Hallelujah! Hallelujah! He will guide.

I return, like the prodigal son,
Humbly hoping Thy favor to win;
In my sorrow a servant I come,
Blessed Lord, take me in, take me in.
CHORUS.

O, my feet, they are tender and tired,
And my heart is so sad and so sore;
In the house anywhere I'd be hired,
And I promise to leave it no more.
CHORUS.

The old home has its bread and to spare,
I belong to its kith and its kin;
I belong where the family are,
Blessed Lord, let a prodigal in.
CHORUS.

I am sick of the world and its strife,
And I'm sick of my sorrow and sin;
So I flee to the "Way and the Life,"
Blessed Lord, take me in, take me in.
CHORUS.

THE BLESSING OF BLISS.

PART SECOND.

Of my fears and my fights I was tired,
Of my troubles without and within;
Of the good of the earth I desired,
And the Lord took me in, took me in.

CHORUS.
O, the peace and blessing of bliss,
Unto all who with Jesus abide;
There is never a blessing like this!
Hallelujah! Hallelujah! He will guide!

O, I know I am safe in the fold
Where so long with the Shepherd I've been;
There's no fear of the heat nor the cold,
For my Savior has taken me in.
CHORUS.

O, to tell of his wonderful grace
I am sure I can never begin;
So I look through my tears to His face,
And I sing, "He has taken me in."
CHORUS.

O, I find sweet repose in His arms,
And I pillow my head on His breast!
I am safe from all fears and alarms,
For I've peace and the blessing of rest.
CHORUS.

O, the rest He doth give me is sweet—
'Tis the rest of a Heaven in Him;
With His blood I am covered complete,
For my Saviour has taken me in.
CHORUS.

Wanderer.

CHARLOTTE L. SEAVER.

O tired, wandering feet
That in life's path have trod
So far away from Him, come back,
Poor weary child, to God.

O wayward, aching heart,
That seeks to gain
A respite here from life's deep thorns
And from its pain,

Why strive for that which here
Ye will not find?
God only, dear, gives perfect rest
To heart and mind.

O longing, tearful eyes,
Remember He wept too,
And that, though others grieve and wound,
He cares for you!

If thou wilt say, as Jesus did
In dark Gethsemane,
"Thy will be done!"—thy Father, child,
Will send his peace to thee.

At Church.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

So, Harold, you wondered, you say, at my smile,
(Nay, my sneers! Well, i' my faith, you're not wrong)—
When that elegant lady swept up thro' the aisle
And knelt in the front pew so long.

She was very devout, and so liberal too—
How freely she gave of her gold
When the mission plate passed for the heathen Hindoo,
Whom she longs to bring into the fold!

Yet, Harold, I know of a grand life gone out
In a madness of pain and despair,
Because of that woman, so sweetly devout:
That Christian who knelt near us there.

And I know a young wife who has death in her face,
Tho' she smiles and strives hard to seem bright,
Whenever she looks on the beauty and grace
That robbed her of what was her right.

So, Harold, you see if I sneered, I had cause,
At that Christian in velvet and furs;
And I wondered what pagan or heathen there was
Whose chances were poorer than hers.

Selected Story.

Song.

Our friends are treasures of a day,
As fleeting as the breath.
How often are they torn away
By envy or by death!

We watch them vanish one by one
Until the last is gone,
And then in sorrow and alone
We sadly journey on.

And still for them the heart will yearn
When weary is the mind,
And often will the fancy turn
To cast a look behind

Upon those days of pleasure strewn
Along the backward path,
And where that blighted seed was sown
That bitter harvest hath.

And on those treasures of a day
Our friendships of the past,
That withered one by one away,
Too beautiful to last.

Pumpkin Pies.

Pinkie was balanced on the toes of her slippers, upon the top of a cider-barrel, gathering hops, when Tom Carroll drove along with his wagon, piled up with red and yellow apples, and a big, lusciously-golden pumpkin in the corner, and stopped at the gate.

Pinkie immediately hopped off her perch, and hid behind the barrel; but Tom, coming up the walk with the pumpkin, saw the edge of her pink dress.

"Can't fool me, Miss Pink Pendleton," said he, rolling the golden sphere upon the porch. "I can see through more things than a barrel. There's the first pumpkin of the season.

Pinkie scrambled up, shook out her skirt and surveyed the pumpkin, half-wonderingly, from under the brim of her hat, turning her back upon Tom, who, however, only went off down the path, whistling carelessly, and drove off to town with his apples.

Tom and Pinkie having indulged in a neat little tiff the week before, had since amused themselves with trying to freeze each other, very unsuccessfully, it would seem, judging by the warmth of temper both could exhibit on the smallest provocation. And this was the first time Tom had called since the last "unpleasantness."

"Did I ever!" said Pinkie, and glanced over her shoulder to see if Tom was looking back, which, of course, he was, whereat Pinkie turned scarlet and scowled, though Tom was too far off to see that. "If he's trying to make-up," she continued, "what does he be such a stick about it for? Expects me to go two-thirds of the way, of course; men always do. But he began the row, and if he wants to make it up, let him say so, out and out. See through more than a barrel! Just him—always insinuating things."

And Pinkie, thus foolishly fanning her anger, sat down on the step and kicked her toes against a peck measure.

The bone of contention which had served Tom and Pinkie with excuses for more than one squabble was a gentleman from the city, who was spending the summer at the farm owned by Pinkie's brother-in-law, a comfortable, old-fashioned homestead, with clover carpeted orchards, cooled with dense shade, and haunted by the gurgling murmur of a brook and the slumberous hum of bees.

Perhaps the boarder found an added charm, though possibly a fleeting one, in Pinkie's spirited brown eyes and piquant manners. And Pinkie—why Pinkie would have been coquettish to a mullein stalk and never thought seriously of the matter at all.

Why shouldn't she walk to church with Mr. Hatherton and pin a red rose-bud in his coat? Why, then, should Tom loom up like a cloud and cast cold water on her innocent amusement? To-be-sure they had been the same as engaged—Tom and Pinkie—since the days they went nutting together and quarreled over their grammar. But that was no reason—so Pinkie thought—why she should not look at any one else.

To make matters a little worse, Tom had a stylish young lady cousin visiting at his house, whose company, Pinkie had told him, he no doubt found a very agreeable substitute for hers, a supposed fact she thoroughly resented, notwithstanding the proverb says it is a poor rule that will not work both ways.

But here on the porch lay Tom's gift, and (probable) peace-offering for having been unusually bitter at their last tilt, and perhaps—. The scowl had departed from Pinkie's forehead; her eyes were growing tender.

Young Hatherton strolled around the corner, with his straw hat tilted gracefully to one side, and a handful of early wild purple asters, which he presented to Pinkie.

"These," he said, "are a much more fitting offering to beauty than is a pumpkin."

He pronounced the word scornfully; he had witnessed Tom's visit, and now eyed his gift with much disdain, which unaccountably nettled Pinkie.

"They are prettier to look at," she answered, "but I don't suppose they would do quite as well to cook."

The young man shrugged his shoulders and sauntered away indifferently; his gallantry of late was growing rather careless and fitful.

And Pinkie was inconsistent enough to put the asters in her hair, and then pull them out and throw them under the step. After which method of relieving her feelings she picked up the pumpkin to carry into the kitchen, and so made the discovery that there was a scrap of paper attached to the bit of stem which remained to the pumpkin. And this was written on the paper:

"Coming over to-morrow. Forgiveness and pumpkin pies can solace an injured spirit."

How like Tom!

A small dimple found its way to Pinkie's rosily-velvet cheek; and Pinkie's married sister, Flora, a plump, white and generally sweet-tempered little woman, came in and saw it.

"Have you and Tom made up?" she asked.

"I haven't," answered Pinkie.

"Are you going to?"

"Don't know," perverse Pinkie returned.

"You are a very foolish girl if you don't," said Flora, "and I will say he is too good for you."

Pinkie scratched her rosy ear with her hair-pin, and smiled at the pumpkin.

"What do you think," she asked, "of a man supposing he could find balm for his wrong in pumpkin-pies?"

"I should say," answered Flora, "if the man was Tom, you had better make the pies, and make 'em as good as possible."

"Oh, you're so awfully practical," said Pinkie, darting off, with her chestnut mane flying.

But all the same, before next morning's sun had mounted very high in the heavens, a trim little lady, neatly done up like a brown-paper parcel, in a very large linen apron, betook herself to the kitchen and prowled about in the pantry, seeking the sugar, cinnamon, ginger, and all the various ingredients necessary in the manufacture of pumpkin pies.

A sound of wheels was heard in the lane, and Pinkie tripped out to the porch, the nutmeg-grater in her hand, as an elegant buggy rolled by, driven by Tom Carroll, and—Pinkie dropped the grater suddenly and caught her breath—there was the stylish cousin beside him, the plume in her hat fluttering, and a faint breath of rose drifting up to the house.

Pinkie went back to the kitchen and shoved the pumpkin into a corner, and flung the nutmegs under the table and the cinnamon after them, pulled off her apron and went into the house.

Mr. Hatherton met her in the hall.

"Shan't we take a ride, Miss Pinkie?" he asked, wondering a little at the sparkle in her eyes, and the deep bloom in her cheeks.

"All right," said Pinkie, and dashed up stairs for her habit.

The shadows were falling eastward from the trees on the lawn when Pinkie again crossed it on her way to the house after her ride, her habit gathered up in her arms, and a cluster of scarlet trumpet-bells in her belt.

Flora, who was on the step, bestowed as dark a frown upon her as her fair, placid countenance was capable of getting up.

"You've lost him now forgood," was her first remark.

"Lost whom?" quoth Pinkie, staring with wondering eyes at her sister.

"Tom, of course! Didn't he stop in when he came back after taking his cousin down to catch the train, and found you gone off with Mr. Hatherton."

"And—and she's gone home?" gasped Pinkie, feeling suddenly guilty.

"Of course she's gone home. She was engaged to the minister, anyway; and you've made a nice mess of it all now."

Flora flounced away, looking indignant. Pinkie followed her

"Don't you think he will ever come back?" she asked, meekly.

"H'm!" said Flora. "He may come to-morrow, but only to see John about the cider-mill, mind you!"

Pinkie had little appetite for dinner; even Flora's jam-puffs had no charm for her; and her usual archness had so completely disappeared that Mr. Hatherton felt called on to become injured, and indulge in a fit of the sulks.

But the moderate bit of hope Flora had held out concerning Tom's possible appearance next day comforted Pinkie a little, and inspired her with a secret resolution.

Long after the dinner hour was past, the neat little figure, done up in the big brown cooking-apron, again stood beside the long, white kitchen-table, where a row of bright, scalloped pie-pans were shining. Spices perfumed the air, and a dozen eggs were piled in a cake-pan.

The sun had fairly gone down when Pinkie set her last fragrant, golden-complexioned pie in the window-sill to cool, and stood looking down at it, absorbed in her own reflections.

"The queen of hearts, she made some tarts," chanted a voice behind her, and before she knew it she was whirled around, apron and all, in some one's arms and kissed.

"They're not tarts," said Pinkie, when she recovered her breath. "But oh, Tom, how did you happen to come back? I was afraid you wouldn't speak to me any more."

"Oh," said Tom, "perhaps I wouldn't have come, if I had not seen some one come out on the steps this morning, to see who who was going by, with her usual curiosity, and then bounce in like a little, enraged yellow-jacket. I suspected which way the wind blew, and I knew Flora would tell you the truth when I came back; and when I saw the pies just now, I knew it was all right."

"And now you'll stay to supper, of course?" said Pinkie.

"Of course," said Tom. "It would never do to let all those pies waste their sweetness on the desert air.

TRIPLE SHEET.

Fraud.

We published last week a few remarks in regard to Dr. M. E. Bell, of Baltimore, and the Rutledge Publishing Co., both of which, we are satisfied, are making statements in their advertisements to the public, tending to mislead the readers, and in our judgment are unworthy of the patronage of the public. Here is another case in point, and we quote from the Sunday School Times, of Philadelphia, the following:

It is not an easy matter to keep such an oversight of the advertising columns of a paper as to guard against the admission of false statements intended to deceive the readers to their injury; but it is none the less a duty, because a difficult one. The truer test of the character and spirit of the managers of any paper is what they will consent to put into their columns if they are paid for it, rather than what they will put in without pay, or which they will pay to have put in. Here is a new illustration in our own experience. The advertisement of "Ozone," which has for a few weeks appeared in our advertising columns, was not admitted until after satisfactory correspondence concerning it with gentlemen in prominent official position in Cincinnatti, to whom the advertisers referred. But subsequent personal examination has convinced the Publisher that some of the declarations in the advertisement are unqualifiedly false, and that, however good Ozone may be as a preserver, the statements of its Cincinnatti advertisers concerning it are not worthy of confidence.—Ozone as now advertised cannot keep their reputation from tainting. The advertisement has been shut out from our columns, and we advise our readers to let the Prentiss Preserving Company alone.

The advertisement of Ozone has appeared in many papers in this vicinity. It was offered to the PRESS. We were somewhat surprised at the unqualified statements made by the Co., and were not favorably impressed with its assurances. It is not unfrequently the best test, to the publisher, of the honor and integrity of the advertiser, especially if he be a stranger, and residing at so long a distance from us as Cincinnatti, that home of rascality, to ascertain, if possible, whether he purposes paying for what he contracts. We desired to know if they were willing to pay for a month only in advance, to which we received no response. We therefore drew our inferences, which, in our judgment, were correct, and are strengthened by the above showing. We desire again to state that we purpose keeping this paper free from fraudulent advertisements, and shall consider it a favor, if any of our readers who may be deceived by any thing that appears in our advertising columns will advise us of it.

AT THE last meeting of the stockholders of the New York and New England R. R., Jay Gould was elected one of the directors; the significance of this lies in the fact that better facilities will be given patrons of the road, and arrangements are likely to be made for the extension of their road directly to New York. The New Haven and Hartford road have heretofore controled all the business from Hartford to New York, all the lines of travel having to use their rails to the great metropolis. If this new line is completed, it will not only be for the advantage of the New York and New England road, but will bring a competition which will be productive of good results to the business and traveling community.

Stockholders' meeting of the Warren National Bank, Jan. 10, 1881.

MR. GEORGE MAKEPEACE TOWLE of Boston delivered the fifth lecture in the free course last evening. It was announced that his lecture had been changed, at the request of prominent citizens, from "Bismarck" to "Ireland's Struggles." Mr. Towle said that it was necessary to a full understanding of the situation in Ireland at the present time, to know of its past history and the causes which had led to its present unhappy condition. He then gave a graphic description of the cruelty and oppressions under which she had suffered for the past seven centuries, beginning in the reign of Henry the second, in 1169. Following him, King John was more brutal than any of his predecessors and under him land was confiscated and Irishmen everywhere persecuted and wronged. Under Charles the first and Cromwell the Protector, the Catholic religion was the subject of continual warfare and any Protestant could murder a Catholic without fear of being brought to trial. With King James' ascendency, a change occurred in which the Irish were allowed an Irish Parliament, recovered their land and enjoyed great freedom in religion. During this short period no English Protestant in Ireland was ever harmed by an Irish Catholic. The Irish rallied to the support of King James, who was the first king since 1169 who had not had the bitter hate of the Irish people. But soon the power of James was overthrown and at the battle of the Boyne the Catholics received their final defeat. Under William of Orange, the English landholders once more received the lands and the Irish owners were compelled to leave or pay excessive rent. The Penal laws were then enacted and was a scheme by which the Irishman was cheated out of his last possession of the land. Soon the English Protestants had entire control and now one third of the land is owned by three hundred persons, one half by eight hundred and less than ten thousand people owned the land which is inhabitated by five million people. The rack-renting system was described; it consisted of raising rent on a tenant for any improvements which the tenant made on the property. Every little pretext by which rent might be increased was seized upon by the rapacious landlords, until the Irishman lost all interest in the cultivation of the soil or improvement of the property, but in spite of all these trials and oppressions which had been continued for seven centuries, the Irish people never once faltered in their patriotism; they were Irish and could not be made English. This was the great mistake of English statesmen; they never recognized the Irish were a distinct people and could never be otherwise, but tried to make them English poople by making their country English territory.

Mr. Towle quoted from John Bright, member of the British Cabinet, who said, "Ireland must have Independence or equal union." Grattan, Davitt, Parnell, and other Irish patriots were spoken of in warm terms of praise, and the purpose of the land league explained. Mr. Towle was occasionally applauded by those present whose sympathies were directly interested.

If any of our readers have in mind the purchasing of a book for a Christmas or New Year's present, we can think of none more appropriate than the work, entitled "Beautiful Wild Flowers of America," published by our townsman, Mr. S. Edson Cassino, with descriptive text by Rev. A. B. Hervey, formerly pastor of the Universalist Church in Peabody, and now settled in Taunton, Mass. The size of the book is 10x12, with covers beautifully and appropriately embellished. It is printed on fine cream-laid paper, gilt edge, and contains 156 pages of the choicest of reading matter, and fourteen superbly colored, life-sized plates of the most attractive of our American ferns, drawn, after nature, by Isaac Sprague. The poetical selections include extracts from Longfellow, Whittier, Bryant, Holmes, and others. The price of the book is $6, and it is well worth the money.

PRESIDENT Arthur is to be highly commended for his good judgment in the Cabinet appointments thus far made by him. One of the last appointments, to the bench of the Supreme Court, of Judge Gray, of Massachusetts, is one of the best that could be made. Judge Gray has a reputation as an able jurist, and one who will bring a long and valued experience to the Supreme bench. If our President keeps on as he has begun, he will speedily silence all growlers who would throw mud at the new administration.

Mr. A. C. Kendall, the energetic and popular passenger agent of the New York and New England railroad, remains in his position, notwithstanding the change in the directory of the road. This will be good news to his friends, and there is no man in Boston who has more of them than Mr. A. C. Kendall.

The second meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was held on Friday evening, Dec. 9th. The President, Mr. J. E. Herrick, presided. The meeting was opened by a song from the quartette. The subject of discussion for the evening was "Commercial Fertilizers, opened by Mr. Jas. P. King, who detailed minutely his experience with the different kinds of fertilizers, in some instances proving a failure, in others good results. For want of space we cannot give his remarks in full, as he spoke full an hour, and was followed by Mr. A. T. Newhall. The meeting was largely attended by ladies.

The third meeting was held on Friday evening, Dec. 16th. The President being absent, Vice President B. H. Taylor presided. The subject for discussion was opened by Mr. Jos. S. Needman, viz: "Results of Farming during the past year in Products and the Marketing of Them." At the conclusion of Mr. N's remarks the discussion was participated in by A. T. Newhall, Rev. Mr. Spaulding, E. C. Farwell and others, all the speakers agreeing that there had been a scarcity in quantity of vegetation, but the high prices had brought as much general income to the farmers generally as in former years; and in some instances many had made a better season's business than for many a year. The songs rendered by the quartette from the new glee books help to enliven the interest in the club very much. Several new members have joined the present season. E. C. F.

LYNNFIELD.—The scholars connected with the So. A WORD IN SEASON.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

ALMY, BIGELOW & WEBBER.

Our Regular Annual January Sale
OF
LADIES' COTTON UNDERWEAR
To Commence Monday, January 2d.
NO LIMITATION.

Owing to our rapidly increasing business in this department, and the lessons taught us in our very successful Sale in August last, of these Goods, we shall in this sale devote double the area that we have ever before occupied for a Cotton Underwear Sale. This year we shall show the whole stock on First Floor, and occupy almost the entire eastern side of our store. All the goods now occupying the space will be removed immediately after Christmas to the basement, now being occupied exclusively for Christmas goods. The entire Cotton Department, Print Department, Gingham and Skirt Departments will give way for at least two weeks, to accommodate this sale, which we are determined shall eclipse anything we have ever recorded. In short there is No limitation to our endeavor to provide every facility for the speedy and proper execution of this Sale, which every lady with the experience of past seasons must realize the importance of, as at no other season of the year can Cotton Underwear be afforded at such advantageous rates as in mid-winter, when all business is at a low ebb, and manufacturers seek an outlet for the productions of the long dull season for this class of Goods, and when retailers can best spare the extra room, which is peremptorily demanded when goods are offered at prices which barely cover the cost of materials and an extremely small allowance for labor—all these considerations making the Sale of Ladies Cotton Underwear in January fully equal to any six months in year.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Supreme Judicial Court, November term, '81.
Essex, ss.
Elmira Abbie Dow, Libt., vs. Sidney Jerome Dow.
Divorce.

In the above-entitled libel for divorce, it is now ordered, that a decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony be entered in favor of the said ELMIRA ABBIE DOW for the cause of the extreme cruelty of the said SIDNEY JEROME DOW to be made absolute on application of either party to the Clerk of the Court after the expiration of six months from the entry of this decree, upon compliance with the terms thereof, unless the Court has for sufficient cause, on application of any party interested, otherwise ordered.

And the libellant is required to publish, as soon as may be, an attested copy of this order in the Peabody Press, a newspaper printed in Peabody, in said county of Essex, once a week for six successive weeks; that all persons interested may, within said six months, show cause, if any they have, why said decree should not be made absolute.

THE TIDAL WAVE !

Sweeping Mark-Down Sale.

CLOTHING for the RICH and POOR.

$800,000.

EIGHT HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN

MEN'S, YOUTH'S, BOY'S AND CHILDREN'S CLOTHING.

To be Sold before January 1st, by our Great Combination Stores.

THE LARGEST SALE OF CLOTHING ON RECORD.

The immense wholesale stock has been distributed among the Retail branches with positive orders to sell, and as our store, the Naumkeag, is one of the largest of the retail stores, our share of the stock will be immense. These goods we must dispose of to our regular retail trade, and in order to do this, we have, with the consent of the proprietors, marked the goods at simply unheard of prices.

We shall make the prices so low that it will shake the foundations of the Clothing Trade from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

NOTE THE PRICES OF A FEW BARGAINS.

Men's heavy Oxford mixed Overcoats, well made and trimmed, price $2.50. Other dealers advertise to sell for $5.00, and call them great bargains.

Men's heavy diagonal worsted Overcoats, thoroughly made and trimmed, velvet collar, and bound with a fine mohair braid. The same garments are being sold by other dealers for $8 and $10. We shall close the lot at retail for $4, which is less than the actual cost of the material.

Men's heavy chinchilla Overcoats, handsomely made and trimmed, would be called remarkably cheap at $8 and $10. We shall close the lot at retail for $5.

Men's heavy all wool double breasted fancy mixed Scotch wool Overcoats, thoroughly made and trimmed, price $7.50, marked down from $10; a handsome, stylish garment, cut by our latest patterns and perfect in fit.

Men's heavy, strictly all wool black beaver Overcoats, thoroughly made and trimmed, velvet collar, and lined with a heavy serge, all sized, price $7, marked down from $12. This is the lowest price ever named for an all wool beaver Overcoat.

Men's heavy, dark, fancy mixed, strictly all wool, double breasted Overcoats, made and trimmed in first class style, a handsome stylish garment marked down from $16.50 to only $9. A garment good enough for anybody.

Men's heavy plain and fancy mixed strictly all wool Overcoats and Ulsterettes, thoroughly made and trimmed, marked down from $15 and 16.50 to only $10 and 12.

Men's heavy seal brown strictly all wool chinchilla Overcoats, made and trimmed in first-class style, with silk velvet collars and lined with a fine heavy all wool plaid cassimere; a superior garment in every respect marked down from $20 to only 13. A wonderful bargain.

Men's heavy, plain and fancy mixed, fine strictly all wool Overcoats and Ulsterettes made and trimmed equal to custom work, marked down from $18 and 20 to $15. For the quality of goods and trimmings it is the greatest bargain ever offered for first class clothing. This lot represents 20 different styles.

Men's heavy, plain and fancy mixed Overcoats, manufactured from foreign and the finest domestic goods, made and trimmed equal to the best custom, marked down from $24 and 25 to $18 and 20; these are bargains unsurpassed.

Men's heavy and medium weight extra fine Overcoats, made and trimmed in the best possible manner by journeymen tailors from English and French goods, marked down from $30 and 32 to 25. Same garments made to order would cost nearly double.

Men's heavy, dark colored cassimere suits, handsomely made and trimmed, marked down from $9 to 5.

Men's heavy all wool dark colored suits, thoroughly made and trimmed, marked down from $10 and 12 to $6 and 8 per suit, which is less than the actual cost of material.

175 PAIRS MEN'S heavy dark colored PANTALOONS, well made and trimmed, 75 per cent. wool, marked down to $1.50 per pair.

375 Pairs Men's heavy all wool fancy mixed cassimere Pantaloons, thoroughly made and trimmed, marked down from $3 and 4 to $2 and 2.50 per pair.

350 Pairs Men's plain and fancy mixed, all wool Pantaloons, handsomely made and trimmed, marked down from $4 and 4.50 to 3 and 3.50 per pair.

700 Pairs Men's extra fine all wool heavy and medium weight plain and fancy cassimere and cheviot goods marked down from $6.50 and 7 to 5 and 5.50 per pair. The same goods made to order would cost nearly double.

500 Pairs Men's heavy extra fine all wool Pantaloons, made and trimmed equal to custom, marked down from $5.50 and 6 to 4.00 and 4.50 per pair, just half the cost of same goods made to order. A bargain unheard of

BOYS' AND CHILDREN'S SPECIAL DEPARTMENT. USEFUL HOLIDAY PRESENTS.

January 1st, 1882, we shall transfer our Boys' and Children's department to the adjoining store which we are about to connect with ours. Previous to that time we shall offer our enormous stock of Boys' and Children's Clothing at the lowest prices ever named for good, reliable clothing.

PLEASE READ PRICE LIST.

25 Boys' heavy diagonal worsted Overcoats, handsomely made and trimmed, with velvet collar and a fine mohair braid; a neat stylish Overcoat, price 2.50, marked down from 5.00. They were considered a great bargain when sold for 5.00.

235 Boys' heavy, plain and fancy mixed Overcoats, thoroughly made and trimmed, prices $3, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 12, 14 and 15, marked down from 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 12, 16 and 18.

150 Boys' heavy, plain and fancy mixed cassimere suits, handsomely made and trimmed, ages 12 to 16 years, marked down from $5, 6, 7, 8, 10 and 12 to 3.50, 4.50, 5, 6, 7 and 8.

175 Boys' heavy fine all wool, plain and fancy mixed cassimere suits thoroughly made and trimmed, ages from 12 to 16 years, marked down from 10.00 and 12.00 to 6.00 and 9.00 per suit. These are extraordinary bargains.

75 Children's fine all wool fancy mixed cassimere suits, made and trimmed in first class style, marked down from 6.00 to only 3.00, which is less than the actual cost of material. Every garment is guaranteed to be correct in style and fit.

275 Children's heavy and medium weight Overcoats, handsomely made and trimmed, prices 1.50, 2, 2.50, 3, 3.50, 4.50, 5, 6, 7 and 8, marked down from 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 10 and 12.

700 Children's heavy and medium weight, plain and fancy mixed cassimere and cheviot suits, thoroughly made and trimmed, marked down from 5, 6, 7, 8 and 10 to 2.50, 3.50, 4.50, 5, and 5.50. These are bargains never before offered in this country.

REMEMBER! The above goods are only a few of our many bargains. We have a large stock of Extra Fine Overcoats, Ulsters, Suits and Pantaloons which are made and trimmed equal to first-class custom work and will be sold as low in proportion as the above goods. They have all been manufactured within the last six months, and are guaranteed to be correct in every respect.

All Goods Marked in Plain Figures. Strictly One Price.

MESSRS. ELY BROS., Druggists, Oswego, N. Y.—It gives me great satisfaction to say your Cream Balm (recommended to me by a friend) has completely cured me of Catarrh, of which I have been afflicted for over ten years, after trying almost every remedy recommended, none having proved so effective and thorough as your Cream Balm in its work. Very truly, etc., S. J. Aiken, Wholesale Dealer in Boots and Shoes, 143 Federal St., Boston, Mass. Feb. 5, 1881.

MESSRS ELY BROS., Druggists, Oswego, N. Y.—I have been handling your Cream Balm and find it takes well. Some very old cases of Catarrh are said to have been cured by it in this vicinity. S. S. Detrick, Druggist, East Stroudsburg, Pa. Price 50 cents.

An elderly gentleman says to a little miss of seven: "Say, May, will you marry me?" The child, taking the proposition gravely shuts her lips as if considering the subject. "Come, May, will you marry the gentleman?" said her mother. "Yes,'m but—(aside)—ma,, I'd like a newer husband."

I wish to say to you that I have been suffering for the last five years with a severe itching all over. I have heard of Hop Bitters and have tried it. I have used up four bottles, and it has done me more good than all the doctors and medicine they could use on or with me. I am old and poor, but feel to bless you for such a relief by your medicine and from torments of the doctors. I have had fifteen doctors at me. One gave me seven ounces of solution of arsenic: another took four quarts of of blood from me. All they could tell was that it was skin sickness. Now, after using these four bottles of your medicine, my skin is well, clean and smooth as ever.

Taking time by the forelock. A story is told of a German shoemaker, who, having made a pair of boots for a gentleman of whose financial integrity he had considerable doubt, made the following reply to him when he called for the articles: "Der poots is not quite done, but der beel is made out."

A bear story is not necessarily the naked truth.

Alexander established the order of the "Sleepless Ones." They were a community of three hundred monks, separated, for the purposes of service, into sets of fifty. Their business was to employ all the time in praising God. There was to be no moment, night nor day, when one of these sets was not to be at His praise. Let us be sure that, while it is a good thing to praise God in the sanctuary on the Sabbath, yet if this be all, we do little more than mock Him. It is written after one of the Psalms, "The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended," but the prayers were praises, too, and praise never ends.

A pale face and a soft hand are not always marks of superior saintliness.—They are sometimes signs of spiritual consumption. There is a good kind of "muscular Christianity." We want more blood in our religion. The cardinals found fault with Raphael because he painted Peter and Paul in high colors, but his conception was right.—Give us more high colors.

We want, not our own poor fire, but rather that which comes from God's altar. The trouble is we are trying, by the use of church candles, to get a little light and heat. We must bring fire from God's altar, and set our own natures ablaze, and then light the church candles. The candles must get their fire from us, and not we ours from them.

The State should be God's Commonwealth, and the Church should be a recruiting camp of the "Salvation Army."

We are bound together under a system of common dependence. The strength of individuals lies often in their co-ordination with others of their kind, while the strength of the co-ordination depends upon the position of the individuals. So long as each man kept his place, the old Macedonian phalanx was invincible. In life's battle keep your place. Victory may depend on you.

The street corners unite the beautiful and useful in one. Besides, they are excellent places for young ladies and gentlemen to "happen to meet" at, to whom it would not be so convenient to happen to meet elsewhere.

BAKED MACARONI.—Break half a pound of macaroni into inch pieces and put in a saucepan of boiling water and boil twenty minutes, or until soft, but not broken; add a little salt while boiling; drain and put into a well-buttered dish a layer at a time, with plenty of grated cheese sprinkled over each layer, with pepper to your taste and bits of butter. When the dish is full, pour over half a cup of good milk, or better still, cream. Bake half an hour and serve in the dish it is baked in.

The trial of the Malley boys will begin in New Haven at the criminal term of the superior court, which opens in that city on the 3d of January. Judge Hitchcock will preside during the term. Both sides claims to have discovered since the West Haven trial important evidence, and, among other things, it is said that the state has positive proof that Jennie Cramer was alive on Friday night, Aug. 5, which was the night before her dead body was found on the beach. The defence has claimed that her death must have occurred Thursday night.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE. This work is before us, and those who send 10 cts. to James Vick, Rochester, N. KEEP YOUR SCALP CLEAN.

The best thing out for removing Dandruff is

HEYLINGBERG'S

EUREKA DANDRUFF REMOVER.

It has been thoroughly tested by hundreds of gentlemen, Ladies, and Children, and we have plenty of testimonials of its good results. It is cooling, removes Dandruff, invigorates the roots of the hair, and will quickly produce a strong and beautiful growth in all cases where the roots of the hair are not fully dead, and will stop this unpleasant itching; in fact it is the best hair dressing in use. It is not greasy or sticky, and is warranted free of all oils, and poisins, and will prove the cleanest, safest and most economical Hair Dressing to be found.

Peabody, Mass., Nov. 18, 1881.

Mr. J. J. Heylingberg, Dear Sir:—Both myself and wife have used your Eureka Dandruff Remover for some time, with the most satisfactory results, and recommend it as being indispensable for the toilet. Yours truly,

FRANK A. BRAGDON.

Many more testimonials furnished if desired.

Persons suffering from diseases of the scalp will be attended at the house when desired.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Last Thursday evening, Gen. Stephenson delivered a lecture on the "Battle of Gettysburg," under the auspices of Post 50, G. A. R., for the benefit of the Soldiers' Home. The lecture was well patronized, and quite a sum was realized for the object. The speaker presented plans and illustrations of the battle, and previous marches, showing the movements of the different corps, and complimenting in a high manner Gen. Meade, and also Gen. Hancock, for the part taken by them in bringing victory to our arms in the severe contest. Gen. Stephenson is an easy speaker, was at home in his subject, having been engaged and wounded in this very battle, and the interest which he seemed to feel in its description was shared by the audience. One more entertainment will be given for this object on Thursday, Dec. 29th, by Louise Farrand, who has won the reputation of the "Star of the West," assisted by M'lle Jessie Peppierre, also well and favorably known there. We think, from the notices we have seen in Western papers of the success of the company, that our people have a rich treat in store for them.

The third entertainment of the Odd Fellows Course will be given in Peabody Institute to-morrow evening, by the De Mont Concert Co. The Company consists of M'lle De Mont, pianist, soloist, zylophonist, chrystal chimes and zither, Mr. Frank Reynolds, humorist, Prof. John A. Hill, violinist, Mr. W. J. Maynard, the blind pianist and baritone, and Prof. Wallach, the well-known solo performer on the harmonica. The programme is a fine one, as arranged, and there should be a large attendance on that evening. Single tickets, 25 and 35 cents, can be had at the door on the evening of the Concert.

We desire to call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of F. A. Wendell, plumber, in Salem. Mr. Wendell has done in a very satisfactory manner the work in his line on the new houses of Leverett Poor and William P. Clark, and has proved himself to be a skillful workman. All jobs in the plumbing line will be promptly attended to by him, and at reasonable prices, and it is probable that, by the desire of his friends in Peabody, he will very soon open a branch establishment in this town.

The Spiritualists in Ashland Hall have made arrangements to purchase a new organ for use in their hall, and an entertainment to obtain funds for the same will be given by the choir, who have volunteered their services for the occasion. A choice programme of vocal music has been arranged, which will be interspersed with select readings by Mr. G. C. Farrington. The entertainment will take place Monday evening, Dec. 26th, and the price of tickets will be only 15 cents.

A piece of petrified wood, an Indian implement or something of that sort, was found by a man while digging for the stand pipe, on Buxton's hill, sometime ago, and now he don't know what to do with it. We would suggest that if it can't be palmed off onto the Peabody Academy of Science, that it be made into a paper weight and sent to some friend, that being a happy way some people have of disposing of more or less old junk that comes in their possession.

The winter season is here and doubtless many of our readers will, on account of comfort or convenience, occupy sleeping rooms in which coal fires are kept burning all night. If the stove is in any way defective or the room close, great discomfort is often felt from the coal gas which escapes. This may be somewhat remedied by exposing a little liquid ammonia in a saucer or plate in the room before retiring.

Next Monday evening occurs the second of the parlor concerts given by the Essex Institute, in Plummer Hall, under the direction of J. Phippen, Jr. We call attention again to the fact that not merely for enjoyment, but in the way of education in musical taste and style, the opportunity afforded by these concerts should not be neglected.

We met a commercial traveler in Salem Monday, who, in speaking of the Essex House in that city, said: "Davis & Fay keep one of the best hotels in New England, and Fay is one of the best hotel men yet discovered, and if they make a fortune they are just the ones that know how to enjoy it."

There are many incidents that come under the observation of the Police which never get into print. One occurred the past week. At a late hour on Friday night, a woman was arrested in an intoxicated state and taken to the station house. During the night she complained of being unwell and a physician was sent for, who pronounced the woman in a delicate condition.—Hurriedly the doctor helped the woman into his buggy and drove rapidly to the Alms House, where the startled inmates were aroused, and the woman was soon comfortably in bed. After waiting a short time the doctor went home, promising to notify the town physician. At an early hour the next morning, the woman, who had rapidly recovered after a few hours sleep, went out the back way and started for the square, where she was re-arrested, and, as our police notes will show, was sentenced to twelve months in the House of Correction.

We cannot believe that the small attendance at a meeting called last week by the directors of the Peabody High School Association is an index of the amount of interest felt in the association. There must be some cause for the seeming apathy among the members of the graduating classes of the High School. We hope that steps will be taken towards the organization of a new association, by the alumni of the school. Our town should not be behind others in this respect. A flourishing alumni association should support our high school, and their social re-unions each year should be the event of the season. It is not necessary that sumptuous banquets or elaborate and costly music should be provided, in order to assure the success or pleasure of the re-unions. But it is desirable to have a harmonious, enthusiastic association; and this we believe the alumni of this town are capable of forming.

Two of our young citizens, one with musical education and the other with supposed musical inclination, arranged Saturday to visit the Catholic church at Peabody, last Sunday morning, to hear the singing. Sunday morning was bitter cold, and the man of "inclination" was strongly inclined to lie back on his agreement and not turn out at 5 A. M. and drive half way to Middleton by the south road for the man of "education," but he went, and in the darkness they together got on the Andover turnpike and finally into Peabody, and to the Catholic Church. After waiting a half hour or more to hear the thing tune up, upon inquiry they were informed that they were attending "low mass," at which there would be no music. Our friends came home, and on the way resolved not to tell of their experience—but it leaked out.—Danvers Mirror.

A man about 45 years of age made his appearance at the G. A. R. headquarters one night last week, and represented himself as a soldier in destitute circumstances. He was taken in charge by the charity committee of the Post, who took him to Hotel Donnell and secured him a lodging and breakfast. Later in the evening he turned up in one of our churches as an evangelist (again in destitute circumstances) and a good brother kindly offered to procure him lodgings for the night. He was taken again to the same hotel, where he was recognized as the man who had already been provided for. A stammering explanation was made, and the stranger took his bundle, which he had previously left there, and departed with the brother—each to go his own way. We have since learned that his name was Hughs and he belongs in Boston, and is a first-class religious fraud.

At a meeting held Monday, Dec. 19, the Knights of Honor elected the following officers: Dic. — F. B. Copeland; Vice Dic. — A. McKean; A. D. — Geo. F. Barnes; Rep. — Geo. Randall; F. R. — D. P. Grosvenor, Jr.; Treas. — P. L. Winchester, Jr.; Guide W. H. Hall; Chap.-R. E. Smith; Guar.-W. F. Wiley; Sur. — Lewis Elliott; Trustees — Geo. F. Barnes, W. H. Hall, A. McKean; Auditing Com. — George Clerk, George H. Davis, Jas. N. Ham.

The third entertainment in the So. Peabody Chapel Course occurs next Monday evening. Rev. W. Barrows, D.D., of Reading, Mass., will give his popular lecture, "Out West, Where and What." This lecture is illustrated by a large map and is full of humorous incidents, etc.

On account of Christmas day falling on Sunday this year, Mr. Bragdon will not bake beans and brown bread on Saturday night of this week. Our readers who do not wish to be deprived of their beans on Sunday morning will make a note of this and bake them at home.

Mrs. Hannah Ingalls, over 90 years of age, was out on the street yesterday in company with her son, inspecting holiday goods in the store windows. She has an excellent memory and can read the print of the Boston Herald without glasses.

Rev. G. M. Harmon and Rev. J. W. Hudson exchanged Sunday, as did also Rev. W. G. Sperry and Rev. E. S. Atwood of Salem.

ANCIENT AND MODERN PROPOSALS.

NEW STYLE.

Her eyes shone a beautiful, joyous light when he leaned forward and said:

"Julia, I have something confidential to tell you."

"What is it, Augustus?" she asked, in a low, silvery voice—a kind of German silvery voice.

"Well Julia, to be frank with you, I think,"—and then he seemed to be thinking. "I think," he said, "that under some circumstances I might love you. Now, do you love me?"

"Yes, Augustus, I do love you—you know I do," and she flung her alabaster arms around his neck.

"I am very glad, Julia," he said, "for I like to be loved."

"We, Augustus?"

But Augustus never said another word. Fashionable fellows never say more than that nowadays.

They were never married.

OLD STYLE.

"May I call you Paula" he asked, modestly.

"Yes," she said, faintly.

"Dear Paula, may I call you that?"

"I suppose so."

"Do you know I love you?"

"Yes."

"And shall I love you always?"

"If you wish to."

"And will you love me?"

Paula did not reply.

"Will you, Paula?" he repeated.

"You may love me," she said, again.

"But don't you love me in return?"

"I love you to love me."

"Won't you say anything more explicit?"

"I would rather not."

They were married and happy within three months.

MORAL.—Girls, never tell a fellow that you love him till he has asked you to be his wife.—N. Y. Sun.

THE MAN WITH THE CRAYON.

Shortly after dinner yesterday a man who was coming down Jefferson avenue with a framed crayon under his arm was met by an acquaintance, who said:

"Ah! ha! Been to the auction rooms, eh? Crayon of a female, eh? Who the duse is it? Looks like the head cook in a lumber camp. Going to hang it in the barn, I suppose? Well, so long."

Half a block further down he met another man, who began:

"Whew! but I didn't know as you cared for pictures. Let's see it. Well, I'll be hanged!"

"What's the matter?"

"Matter! Why, it's the worst-looking picture I ever saw. If you bought that you must have wanted the frame pretty bad. Say, it's a bad give away on you to carry such a picture as that around."

The next man who halted him was more quiet.

"Picture, eh?"

"Yes."

"Crayon—I see. It isn't a picture of your grandmother?"

"Oh no."

"Well, then, I am free to say that it is one of the ugliest faces I ever saw worked up by an artist. Good day, my friend."

The owner of the picture was plodding along with a serious look in his eyes when some one called him, and he halted:

"What ye got?" asked the man, as he came up.

"A crayon."

"Let's see. There—hold it there. Say, old fellow——"

"I wish to observe," said the owner of the picture, "that this is a crayon of my wife."

"Your wife—ah—yes—alters the case—tra la!" and he went off at a trot, while the other hired a boy for twenty-five cents to carry the picture the rest of the way home. —Detroit Free Press.

KING AND COURTIERS.

When he arrived, Sekhomo would keep on shaking my hand, while his factotum, who could speak Dutch, would be perpetually begging for something in his master's name. The King at other times would stand with his arms akimbo, his myrmidons squatting around him in a semi-circle and imitating everything he did; if he laughed, they laughed; if he gaped, they gaped; if he yawned, they yawned, and one day when his Majesty burned his mouth with some tea that was too hot, they all puckered up their faces as if they likewise were experiencing the pain; when he turned to go home, they rose and followed him in single file like a flock of geese.—Holub's Seven Years in Africa.

ORDER OF CHARLES I.

"That no person [in Newfoundland] do set up any tavern for selling of wine, beer, or strong waters, cyder, or tobacco to entertain the fishermen; because it is found that by such means they are debauched, neglecting their labour, and poor ill-governed men not only spend most of their shares before they come home upon which the life and maintenance of their wives and children depend, but are likewise hurtful in divers other ways, as, by neglecting and making themselves unfit for their labour, by purloining and stealing from their owners, and making unlawful shifts to supply their disorders, which disorders they frequently follow since these occasions have presented themselves."

The heart is a loom and it may weave whatever it pleases. It may make life a continual progress toward triumph.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 22, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO., Gentlemen: I have taken Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and have derived great benefit from it. I have been troubled for about eight years with Kidney Disease and Gravel. I never suffered particularly from it until last fall. I was then afflicted with excruciating pain that rose from my right kidney to my bladder. I was also greatly troubled with making my water. I could not retain it, and was obliged to go to the urinal a number of times a day. I tried a great many different remedies and took quantities of medicine without any seeming benefit or relief. I grew worse and I suffered distressing pains across my right kidney, and it was with great difficulty that I walked. Finally, about three weeks ago, I was induced to try your remedy. The first I took of it seemed to make me feel worse, but I continued, notwithstanding, and in a short time I began to improve. I have now taken a bottle of it, and am going to continue it. I have been wonderfully benefited. The pains have left me and I am not troubled with my water, and altogether I am feeling a different person. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has done it all.

Charles F. Kinsman

Essex street.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 21, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.—Gentlemen: About 10 years ago my first trouble began with a falling and retrocession of the womb, and the tortures I underwent are beyond description. I was attended by two of the most eminent physicians in the country and underwent a number of operations for tumors; but all that science and skill could do was ineffectual. I grew worse and worse year after year until my sufferings, from a complication of diseases, turned into Bright's disease, and all hopes of recovery, even by my physicians, were given up. However, I recovered for a time from this spell; at times being better and at times being worse. An analysis of my water showed large quantities of albumen. I had excruciating pains in my kidneys and across my abdomen towards the bladder, which compelled me to lie on my right for so long a time that at last large bed sores formed. I tried different remedies which were said to be good for Bright's disease, but they were ineffectual and made me worse. Cold chills would creep over me, up my spine, and through my head. My appetite was entirely gone, and I was so thoroughly emaciated and in such a frightful condition that my living at all was a mystery, even to my physician. Finally, last January, my husband purchased 10 bottles of your remedy and prevailed upon me to use it; and although from my previous experience with proprietary medicine, I had little or no faith in them, yet I had read so much about Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure that I began taking it, and did not experience any benefit from it until I had taken the third bottle, when I began to improve. I persevered in taking your remedy, and before long I was able to be up and around. My appetite returned and I began steadily to gain flesh. I have taken altogether 27 bottles and still continue its use, and my friends and neighbors look upon me in astonishment. I would also say that before taking your remedy I suffered dreadfully with painful incusstinations and great flowing and had convulsions, and I was also affected with hemorrhoids. It seemed as if I were to be a martyr to all the pains and ills that flesh is heir to. But thanks to Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, I am now entirely free from any sufferings in that respect I feel, as it were, like a new being. It is at times hard for me to realize the wonderful change; I am endowed with new life, all owing to your magnificent remedy. It has saved my life, and my gratitude to you is unbounded. My case is so prominent here that any one who desires to know more about it can write to Beverly, and they can receive the desired information. I make this reference because those living away from here sometimes doubt such statements as I have made. Your remedy is a blessing.

Carrie L. Wallis

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 21, '81.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.,—Gentlemen: The statement of my wife does not begin to express the suffering she underwent. We did not think it possible for her to live. Your remedy has no doubt saved her life. It is a grand thing, and you cannot think how thankful I am for it.

Henry B. Wallis

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where hope was abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in all diseases of the kidneys, liver or urinary organs. If any one who reads this has any physical trouble, remember the great danger of delay. nov 30—4w

A GREETING TO OLD AND NEW FRIENDS.

The Boston WEEKLY JOURNAL has long enjoyed the deserved reputation of being the representative newspaper of its class in the New England States. It has a constituency second to none in numbers or intelligence, and is each year commanding a wider field of influence. Its success among the reading classes of New England has been due to the liberal policy of its management, to the care and skill employed in its preparation, to its extensive sources of information, to the variety and timeliness of its contents, and to the acknowledged honesty of its views. These qualities, upon which every newspaper must rely for permanent or worthy success, will characterize it in the future as they have in the past, and it is the confident expectation of its managers that the year to come will witness a better development of it than ever before. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in all respects a newspaper WHICH NO MAN IN ANY DEGREE REMOVED FROM THE GREAT CENTRES OF INFORMATION CAN AFFORD TO DO WITHOUT.

THE ADVANTAGES TO THE READER.

It has never been so well equipped as now for the securing and effective presentation of the facts and discussion of the tendencies of the times. With the growth of the country, and the increasing prosperity which may reasonably be expected to accompany it, a good newspaper becomes indispensable to the man who would keep himself informed upon whatever is interesting the world at large. A well conducted journal of the times gives men better knowledge, broader views and keener sympathies, and draws them out of the demands of their individual lives upon a higher plane of thought and feeling.

ITS PECULIAR CHARACTERISTICS.

THE WEEKLY JOURNAL aims to furnish those who have not much time for reading with a full and comprehensive digest of the events of the day. Its purposes are to inform men upon the courses of government, politics and business, to present the news of the day and show its tendencies, and to give instructive facts and desirable information. With every resource known to modern journalism at its command, it unhesitatingly asserts its ability to do this, and invites an examination of its claims.

A YEAR OF GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST.

The coming year bids fair to be one of exceptional interest. All citizens will look upon the condition of political affairs with intentness, and watch their development with care. Some of the most important questions of the day are awaiting discussion and solution, and in the close balancing of political parties in Congress a more than ordinary concern in national affairs will be excited. The course of the new Administration will also attract much attention, since a remarkable interest attaches to President Arthur in view of the melancholy fate of his predecessor, whose chair he was so suddenly called to fill. Washington, therefore, will for many months be a centre of gaze for Americans, and all will desire a full and intelligent account of what transpires in it.—THE WEEKLY JOURNAL, through its skillful and well-known correspondents, "Perley" and "Webb," will be supplied with the most exhaustive and careful accounts of affairs, while the dispatches of the Associated Press will supplement their labors. "Perley's" accounts of social life in Washington, which are admitted to be among the best furnished to the press from the Capital, will also, as heretofore, be a feature of the paper. In the field of general news, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will display a greater energy than ever before. The general press dispatches will be supported by SPECIAL ACCOUNTS OF MATTERS OF WIDE INTEREST,

And, especially, much space will be given to the material interests of the country. As the paper has a large support among the farming community, particular attention will be given

TO AGRICULTURAL AFFAIRS.

Special articles by the "Young Farmer" will be a marked feature of the coming year, and the markets for produce in this city, together with the condition of the crops in all parts of the country, will be fully reported from time to time.

ITS POLITICAL CHARACTER.

Politically, THE JOURNAL will remain in earnest support of the Republican party and its principles, criticising measures freely irrespective of party lines when occasion demands, but holding to the processes and theories of government which for the past twenty years have steadily improved their claims to popular confidence. The paper will support the principles of the freedom and integrity of the ballot, the maintenance of the national credit, the protection of American industries, a practical Civil Service system and a sound finance, believing that thus only can the dignity and power of the Government be upheld, or the prosperity upon which the country has entered be made permanent.

THE WORLD ABROAD.

THE JOURNAL will also continue the valuable and instructive discussion of foreign men and affairs which Mr. Edward King has so long and so ably carried on. He is admitted to be the best of European correspondents, and none other is so much quoted and commended. Other special features will be "The Kennebecker's" entertaining descriptions of sea life and strange countries, "M. E. B.'s" "Rambling Talks" and other papers of literary merit, besides which a wide and careful selection will be made of the best current reading of the day. Great attention will also be given to New England affairs, and matters of interest in which the paper circulates will be given special prominence. Correspondents from all important points will contribute information, to which the telegraphic dispatches and the exchanges of THE JOURNAL will add as occasion requires. Altogether, THE WEEKLY JOURNAL will be better than ever before, and will commend itself to the intelligence and taste of the reading public of New England. Each issue of THE WEEKLY JOURNAL contains THIRTY-SIX LONG COLUMNS

THE SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL,

Published on Tuesdays and Fridays, is a paper of especial value to persons engaged in commercial pursuits outside the large cities. It contains, in addition to all the news of the day, the fullest possible market, commercial and marine reports, besides a large amount of valuable reading matter of a miscellaneous character. THE BOSTON SEMI-WEEKLY JOURNAL is a paper which no man actively engaged in trade and watching the course of mercantile affairs can afford to be without

CATARRH

DIRECTIONS
For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c, insert with little finger a particle of the balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane.

For Deafness.
Apply a particle into the ear, rubbing in thoroughly.

HAY FEVER
—A fair trial will convince the most skeptical.—
ELY'S CREAM BALM
EFFECTUALLY
cleanses the nasal passages of Catarrhal virus causing healthy secretions, allays inflammation and irritation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head and snuffles it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information.

Messrs. Seabury & Johnson, Manufacturing Chemists, 21 Platt St., New York:

Gentlemen:—For the past few years we have sold various brands of Porous Plasters. Physicians and the Public prefer Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster to all others. We consider them one of the very few reliable household remedies worthy of confidence. They are superior to all other Porous Plasters or Liniments for external use.

Benson's Capcine Plaster is a genuine Parmaceutical product, of the highest order of merit, and so recognized by physicians and druggists.

When other remedies fail get a Benson's Capcine Plaster.

You will be disappointed if you use cheap Plasters, Liniments, Pads or Electrical Magnetic toys.

A SURE REMEDY AT LAST. Price 25cts. A MEAD'S Medicated CORN and BUNION PLASTER.

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

THE PEABODY PRESS.

Miscellaneous.

"CUTTING UP" THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.

An Indian Rajah, who was pleasantly disposed toward the English, and had learned their language after a fashion, frequently visited, some years ago, the Viceroy of Calcutta, and on one occasion borrowed of the latter a copy of the Edinburgh Review, which he happened to see lying on the table. When he returned the magazine, the Viceroy asked him if he had found anything interesting in it.

"Oh, yes," he replied, "many beautiful things, but also many disconnected articles."

"How so?" asked the Viceroy.

"See here," answered the Rajah, "this begins with 'Hunting the Ourang-outang,' does it not? And now turn over the page, and here you have the 'History of Mary Stuart.'"

The Viceroy laughed. He perceived that the Rajah had attempted to read the book without cutting the leaves. He accordingly took from his table a beautiful ivory paper-cutter, explained its use to his visitor, and made him a present of it. The Rajah was puzzled as to how the leaves of the book could be printed before they were cut open, but this also was explained to him. About a year after this occurrence, the Viceroy saw a gay company entering the Court, and in the centre of it the Rajah seated on a young elephant. No sooner did he see the Viceroy than he cried:

"Do you happen to have an uncut copy of the Edinburgh Review? If so, please toss it to me?"

The Viceroy threw out the magazine. It was caught by the elephant, who placed it between his tusks, which had been wrought into elegant paper-cutters, even including carved handles, and quickly cut open the leaves, after which the knowing animal passed the Review back to the surprised Viceroy. The Rajah then dismounted and said to the Viceroy, as he pointed to the elephant:

"He is yours! I return you the paper-cutter alive."

CONFIDENTIAL.

The other morning, when Mr. Jones entered his family drug store to have a prescription put up, he found a new clerk in attendance. Mr. Jones has considerable curiosity, and while he waited he began:

"Been here long?"

"Only two days."

"Going to stay?"

"I think so."

"Old clerk gone for good?"

"Yes."

"Come from New York?"

"No. I came from St. Louis."

"Don't like the town, I suppose."

"Oh, fairly."

"Got a better offer here, I presume?"

"Well, not much better."

"Druggist related to you?"

"No."

"Going to marry his daughter?"

"Haven't thought of it."

There was a brief pause until the clerk had finished his labors, and then he beckoned Mr. Jones into the back room and said:

"You look like a person who can be depended on, and I'll tell you in confidence why I came here. I liked St. Louis, and I had good wages, but I happened to kill three or four persons by putting up wrong prescriptions, and I thought a change of location would relieve my sorrow. This is on the square, you know, and nothing is to be said unless I lay out two or three of your leading citizens, in which case I shall give up the drug business altogther and go to sailing a sand-barge."

Jones went out feeling of his left ear and looking into vacancy, and his sore throat got well without the help of the gargle.—Detroit Free Press.

WAR MATERIAL IN THE BRAIN.

The death of a soldier who had carried a bullet in his brain for sixty-five years was reported recently. The wound was received at the battle of Waterloo. The bullet entered at the right eye, destroying it, of course, and, traversing the brain, lodged in the back of the head. After the outer wound was closed he suffered no special inconvenience from the presence of the bullet, although always, when turning himself in bed, he could feel that the ball dropped into a different position. He was unusually healthy and he died of old age.

Another remarkable coincidence is cited. A young military officer was carelessly manipulating a musket, when the barrel burst in his hand. The pieces fractured his skull so frightfully that fragments of the skull had to be removed, and even a part of the begrimed brain substance was amputated, but the terrible wound soon ceased to trouble him, and he lived for several years. Dying at last of a fever, an examination of the brain was made, and it was discovered that almost the entire lock of the gun had been imbedded for years in the base of the skull. It is said that no impairment whatever of the mental faculties had been observed.

The Missouri Legislature has killed a bill to restrict the practice of medicine to the possessors of medical diplomas. The argument which defeated the measure was that a good doctor is known by his cures, and that a bad one is not improved by a certificate.

Have the courage to acknowledge your ignorance, rather than to seek credit for knowledge under false pretences.

It costs more to avenge wrongs than to bear them.

THE INDEPENDENT.

The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—THE REV. JOSEPH COOK.

ESTABLISHED in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics. THE INDEPENDENT at once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight Mormonism, for Civil-Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, more poetry and stories than popular monthlies, and gives more information than an anual cyclopædia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what THE INDEPENDENT is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of THE INDEPENDENT. Besides the space set aside for these writers and for editorials, there are twenty-two distinct departments, edited by twenty-two specialists, which include Biblical Research, Sanitary, Legal, Fine Arts, Music, Science, Pebbles, Personalities, Ministerial Register, Hymn Notes, School and College, Literature, Religious Intelligence, Missions, Sunday school, News of the week, Finance, Commerce, Insurance, Stories, Puzzles and Agriculture. 32 Pages in all.

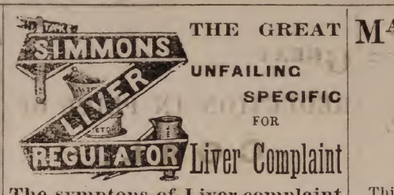
INFIDEL ATTACKS.—"Answer a fool according to his folly," is one of the pithy sayings of the Bible, for says the Saviour, "cast not your pearls before swine, lest they turn and rend you." There is no spirit more imperative than that of candor and fairness in the consideration of the tenets of Christianity as they lie mainly beyond the bounds of human reason, and are sure to be misjudged if contemplated through the mists of prejudice and passion. But the skeptic is sure to look at the religion of Jesus through the blinding atmosphere of passion. Logic is not his forte. He relies on invectives and abuse. His motive is notoriety. Hence it is not wonderful that things which are clear to the candid and dispassionate, are confused and unintelligible to the mind that is misled by its prejudices and darkened by its selfishness. It betrays its malignity at one by scurrilous and indecent blasphemy. But it is to be regretted that periodicals that have enjoyed the confidence of the community, should demean themselves by giving currency to such blasphemies.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.



Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Ellsworth, of Port Ewen, Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth. His disease involved the whole of his thigh bone and the sufferihg man looked forward,-not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consultnd, held a different opinion, and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Ellsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottld. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY. Rondout, N. Y.

THE SUN.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.

THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN'S political course.

THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like THE SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a perfect Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

We ask you to read the advertisement of Darby's Prophylactic Fluid, which appears in our issue of to-day. It is a wonderful healing remedy, a most powerful disinfectant, and is perfectly safe even in the hands of the most inexperienced. It is highly recommended by eminent physicians and chemists, and endorsed by hundreds of others who have used it and know its valuable properties. It costs but a trifle, and will save much suffering, time and money. Darby's Fluid has long been recognized as a household article for universal family use. Prepared by J. H. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM

Certainly Cures Consumption!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
ALWAYS CURES NIGHT SWEATS

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM
CURES DYSPEPSIA.

READ THE PROOF:

Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.

The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.

The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.

This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.

TESTIMONIALS from well known people near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible disease, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.

We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.

J. W. Manning the Veteran Nurseryman, says: Having over-exerted myself in my nursery giving me a weakness of the Stomach and Kidneys, I used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam—which has given me an appetite and proves better than any bitters, and is the most pleasant preparation to the taste that I have ever used.
Jacob W. Manning.

We have used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam and Liniment in our family with charming success, and most cheerfully recommend them to the public. Mrs. R. M. Ames, April 1, 1881.

FAITH WHITCOMB.

"It Cured Mother."
Winchester, Mass., July 12, 1881.
My mother came very near dying from pneumonia last winter, and her lungs were left in a weak condition. Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has stopped the cough and has cured her dizziness. It is the only medicine that would help her. Yours truly, B F Holbrook.

A Boston Merchant's Testimonial.
No 27 Court street, Boston, March 13, 1881.
My daughter was prostrated with a terrible cough, after other remedies had failed, and my daughter had become so much worse that we were all completely discouraged, she commenced the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam and after using it less than one month she is well. Shall be glad to answer all enquiries. B A Clark.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.
Pine street, Swampscott, Sept. 15.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

"Almost at Death's Door."
114 Shawmut street, Chelsea, March 1, '81.
I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy. Faith Whitcomb's Balsam is strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.

Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs. N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times recalling with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.

Write or call upon Mrs. Russell, and also upon her family Physician for further particulars.

It Cures the Shop Girls.
Last summer I was obliged to give up my work on account of severe cough; three physicians said I was going in quick consumption, but after using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam my cough is better, I gained in flesh and have a good appetite.

It gives the best satisfaction of any cough remedy I ever sold. Ira P. Jefts, Druggist,

Memorial Hall, Boston, March 24, 1881.
Having suffered all winter from a distressing cough, I was induced to try Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using all of two bottles I find myself entirely cured and can truthfully recommend it as the best remedy I have ever used.
G. N. Veeder.

Saved! Saved! Saved!
I am happy to say that Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has cured my cough, of which I had despaired of ever being cured. I can now sleep without coughing at all, all of which I owe to Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. I only now need strength.
Mrs. Charles G. Gardner.

PEABODY LIBRARY, 1852. PEABODY, MASS.

A WORK OF THRILLING INTEREST. Messrs. Douglas Brothers, of Philadelphia, have just published one of the most interesting and attractive books of the day, bearing the above title. It is comprised in one large octavo volume of 640 pages: is illustrated with over 100 fine, new engravings on wood of famous localities, scenes, and incidents of life in New York; is clearly printed on fine paper, and is elegantly and tastefully bound. The book is from the pen of James D. McCabe, the well-known author, whose long residence in New York, and intimate knowledge of the life and ways of that city have fully qualified him to make this, his latest production, a brilliant and vivid picture of the Great American Metropolis.

The book is as fascinating as a novel, and fully attests the oft-quoted saying that "Truth is stranger than fiction." He introduces us to all kinds of people; the high and the low, the good and the bad. He presents to us the world of fashion, lays bare the follies and frivolities of Fifth avenue and the Upper Ten, and by a change of scene conducts us through the slums of Baxter street and the Five Points, and the dark dens of Water street. In the brilliant pages of this remarkable book we are brought face to face with every phase of New York life. We are made acquainted with the ways of the Bulls and Bears of Wall street; the tricks of the sharpers and swindlers who flourish in the Metropolis; the terrible lives of the Lost Sisterhood; the devious devices of thieves, river pirates, gamblers, tramps and adventurers; the police and fire departments, detectives, pawnbrokers, politicians, merchants, clergymen, actors and actresses, editors, public men, and all the various people who make up the most remarkable phase of our civilization. The splendors and attractions of the great city are glowingly described. Its marble palaces, great houses of trade, swift, rushing, elevated railroad trains, stately churches, grand streets, gorgeous theatres, and terrible prisons appear before us in life. And the darker side of the city; its vile dens, low haunts, resorts of crime and vice, gaudy dance halls, and sources of temptation and danger, are sketched with equal fidelity.

The work, covering so wide a field, and abounding in such sharp and startling contrasts, cannot fail to be deeply interesting to all classes of readers. It is full of useful and valuable information, and abounds in eloquent warnings against the dangers which are alluring to strangers. It is, in short, New York in miniature, and offers to the reader an opportunity of obtaining a better acquaintance with the great city than could be gained by anything short of a long residence in it. The low price at which the book is issued brings it within the reach of all, and no one who wants to knew New York as it really is should fail to buy it. It is sold by subscription only, and offers agents a rare chance to make money rapidly. See advertisement in another column.

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association will be held in the English and Latin High School Building, Boston, Dec. 29, 30 and 31. Among other interesting exercises and papers, we notice a paper on "Phonetic method of teaching readings," will be read by Prof. Hagar, of the Salem Normal School. Teachers and all friends of education are invited to be present.

POLICE NOTES.—Dec. 15, Edward Roberts, for being drunk, $5.85.

17. Sarah Toomy, third drunk, 12 months in the House of Correction. Appealed, and was sent to Salem Jail.

19. Jeremiah J. Sullivan was drunk and fined $5.85.

Michael A. Shea was also drunk about $5.85 cents worth.

Mary Dorgan, charged with assault, was discharged.

20. Thomas Farley of Gloucester, was drunk and fined $5.85. He is now repenting in Salem Jail.

A lady and daughter were waiting in Snow's drug store for a horse-car to convey them to New Bedford, when the elder lady observed a package of paper marked "Pequot Mills," and asked the druggist how many sheets there were in the package. Our druggist answered that he believed there were 1000 sheets, and amid the blushes of the younger lady, the elder one asked, "And are there envelopes to go with the paper?" The druggist disappeared into his back room.—Fairhaven Star.

MR. EDITOR,—Might it not be much more agreeable to the audience in the Institute during the lectures, if the lamps on the platform in the rear, were not lighted? It does not seem quite the thing to have the lights behind the speaker, and surely it is not at all pleasant or comfortable for the eyes to be forced to look at them continually. Therefore it would, no doubt, be the unanimous desire of the people that they should remain unlighted, and will not the Committee so instruct the Janitor? SUFFERER.

At a recent meeting of the engineers of the fire department, it was unanimously voted to indefinitely postpone the project of putting in the telephone fire alarm.

Several of our stores have put on a decidedly holiday dress. S. W. King has his store neatly trimmed with evergreen. Fernald & Sawyer's windows are very finely arranged, and well worth a visit of inspection. A very pleasing feature is a Christmas tree loaded with presents, while a little child (doll) stands, with outstretched hands, gazing in admiration at the tree. Mr. George Stevens has a number of Christmas wreaths and trees, while the window is full of toys.

A meeting of the directors of the Central National Bank, in Boston, was held Thursday last, when it was voted to levy an assessment of 100 per cent. on the stockholders of the bank. A detailed statement of its financial condition was given by Mr. Henry D. Hyde, one of the directors.

The plate glass windows for the addition to L. R. Power's store were put in on Tuesday, December 13. The lights to the front windows are seventy-eight inches square, and with those on the side weigh fifteen hundred pounds. Essex Statesman.

WEST NEWBURY.—The members of the Farmers' Club, with their ladies and invited guests, met at the town hall, Thursday evening, Dec. 15, and celebrated the 25th anniversary of the Club, the President, Hon. Hayden Brown, presiding. The exercises consisted of a bountiful supper, the reading of a beautiful poem prepared to the occasion, a historic sketch of the Club since its formation, and some elegant selections of music by the West Newbury band; speeches appropriate for the occasion were made by Rev. O. S. Butler of Georgetown, Col. John S. Russell, Sec'y of the State Board of Agriculture, and others, at the conclusion of which the hall was cleared of tables, settees, etc., to make room for dancing, which was indulged in by a happy company until a late hour.

This week our collector came in and laid down his book with an air of pride, and we immediately detected the absence of two warped, wrinkled, dog-eared and forlorn looking bills that have been traveling around with him ever since last January, and have been several thousand miles over this town during their transit. The cash we got in from them amounted to some three dollars and ninety cents, and we immediately sat down and wrote a half column editorial on "the return of business prosperity," when — suddenly discovering that an elegant diamond pin we gave him for collecting a bill from a magnetic doctor that advertised with us was missing, we tore up the editorial when we found that being tired of lugging the bills around he had pawned the pin to get the money to turn in for them. And such is life in the newspaper business.

President Arthur is disappointing a large number of rural Congressmen, because he has instituted new rules for governing the Executive Mansion.—For over twenty years this establishment has been occupied by men who had acquired their ideas of living in the back settlements of the West. General Arthur is a city-bred man, who lived like a gentleman at his home in New York, and he proposes to continue the practice in Washington. He does not breakfast at 7 o'clock, take dinner at 1 and tea at 6, and allow every office broker who wants to see him to call at any hour in the day or night. He dines in the evening, and receives no business callers after the cloth is laid. For "a man of low and vulgar tastes and associations," as some æsthetic Boston papers stated last summer, the new President seems to develop rare qualities as a gentleman, not to mention his achievements as a statesman and a scholar.—Boston Globe.

A unique Christmas gift was presented each member of Congress one morning recently, which is calculated to remind them that they have a duty before them in regard to suppressing polygamy in Utah. The gift was a handsomely engraved menu card bearing on one of the inner folds that part of President Arthur's message in which Mormonism is considered, printed in gold letters.—On another fold were the words of Geo. Q. Cannon, protesting that what is said in the message is not relevant to the issue. The whole is dedicated to the Forty-seventh Congress by the Women's National Anti-Polygamy Society of Utah.

Dr. William A. Hammond of New York, says that smoking is very injurious to boys, but that moderate smoking of cigars is very good for adult men, preventing the waste of the tissues, making food go farther, enabling men to bear trouble with complacency, and preventing depressing emotions.

It wouldn't be a bad idea for some of our young men to organize a debating club with which to beguile the long winter evenings. We don't mean those parties who have organized and suspended what clubs we have already had of that nature, but let us have a new deal and new hands to take hold of the work.

The reader at the Institute last evening was greatly annoyed by three young ladies who sat directly in front of him and who kept up a continual "giggling" etc.; in fact their conduct was unbecoming any lady. Out of regard for their parents, we withhold their names. But should it occur again the speaker, himself, will save us the trouble.

The entertainment at the Institute last Wednesday evening, by the Norfolk Jubilee Singers, was attended by a fair sized audience. The programme included Jubilee and Camp meeting songs, which seemed to be enjoyed by the audience, as nearly everything was encored. The concert lasted till after ten o'clock.

What might have been a serious affair occurred at Hotel Donnell last Thursday morning. A common kerosene lamp, which was left burning on the dining room table, exploded, scattering the oil about and setting fire to the table and cloth. The noise awoke the cook, who gave the alarm, and the boarders rushed in and put out the fire with blankets.

The choir of the Spiritualist Society gave a very pleasant and successful concert at Ashland hall, last Monday evening. The attendance was very good and netted the society some $10, which goes toward paying for their new and beautiful organ. They were ably assisted by Mr. George C. Farrington in select readings.

'Twas a young printer's devil who asked for a kiss, but she quickly replied did this pert little miss, "You look inky and black, though your head may be level, but I'll never consent to be kissed by the devil." Years passed and the miss became an old maid, with frizzles and curls, false teeth and pomade. Then sadly she thought to recall the old issue; but the printer replied, "The devil won't kiss you."

A prominent dry goods dealer on Main street, Wakefield, arranged his windows very tastefully for Christmas, placing, among other articles in the window, a handsome doll, rather thinly clad, in a conspicuous place. The chief of police ordered the doll removed, whereupon the dealer dressed it in a warm winter suit, and it has since been allowed to remain.

A little boy in Belfast, Maine, attended church last Sunday for the first time. On returning home, he was asked what was done at church, to which he replied: "First they sang, then prayed, and then passed round a corn-popper."

"Will you tell me," asked an old gentleman of a lady, "what Mrs.——'s maiden name was?" "Why, her maiden aim was to get married, of course," exclaimed the lady.

Poet's Corner.

Happy Memories.

A reunion of some forty or more ladies and gentlemen who passed the summer at the Glen Ellis House, Jackson, N. H., was held in Boston, Dec. 1st, at the hall No. 17 Tremont street. Music, speeches, and singing, together with one of Tufts' collations, filled up the evening. A number of people from this town were guests of this house last summer, and a poem read on the occasion above referred to, and written by Mr. Geo. Tapley, of Danvers, will be of interest to them, as well as to our readers:

Can I ever forget the Glen Ellis Hotel,
And the pleasant happenings that there befel,
And the charming people there we met?
How sweet are the memories that dwell with us yet!
Can I ever forget them? oh ever—ever?
Can I ever forget them? no, never, never!

The view from the mountain, the rest in the wood,
The fall of the Wildcat's on-rushing flood,
The bridge of the Ellis, the cool Sunset Hill,
Can I ever forget them? etc.

Of our host I bethink me, so portly and bland,
As he holds his six greys so nicely in hand,
And can never tell which to him are most dear,
His fleet deers in front, or sweet dears in the rear.
Can I ever forget him? etc.

Can I ever forget how just over the way,
The Littlefields ever were playing croquet,
And how with them we went through the the wildwood so still,
To enjoy the grand prospect as seen from Green Hill?
Can I ever forget them? etc.

Miss Chapelle so queenly, Mrs. Hendricks so fond,
And the two Misses Poor, the brunette and the blonde;
Mr. Rideout and wife, and their well-behaved boys;
Mr. Monroe and spouse, and a brace of Joys.
Can I ever forget them? etc.

Miss Towne, a model of maidenly grace;
Miss Linnell, so lovely, of innocent face;
The Woodmans, Miss Dickson, the Hales and Miss Ware;
The Tarbells and Taintor, and Gilmore were there.
Can I ever forget them? etc.

That jolly Mr. Robinson and his accomplished wife,
Of all our entertainments the very light and life;
And little Bessie Porter, her father and mother,
And Chester T., the aforesaid Bessie's little brother.
Can I ever forget them? etc.

Moore, Appleton, Wiswell, and many others, too,
Bring hosts of sweet fancies to memory's view;
And with pleasure we'll think of the Glen Ellis cheer,
Till we meet there again in September next year.
Can we ever forget the Glen Ellis, ever?
Can we ever forget it? no, never! never!

The Lost Chord.

Seated one day at the organ,
I was weary and ill at ease,
And my fingers wandered idly
Over the noisy keys.

I know not what I was playing,
Or what I was dreaming then;
But I struck one chord of music
Like the sound of a great Amen!

It flooded the crimson twilight,
Like the close of an angel's psalm,
And it lay on my fevered spirit
With a touch of infinite calm.

It quieted pain and sorrow,
Like love overcoming strife;
It seemed the harmonious echo
From our discordant life.

It linked all perplexed meanings
Into one perfect peace,
And trembled away into silence,
As if it were loth to cease.

I have sought, but I seek it vainly,
That one last chord divine,
That came from the soul of the organ,
And entered into mine.

It may be that Death's bright angel
Will speak in that chord again;
It may be that only in heaven
I shall hear that grand Amen.

Selected Story.

An Insignificant, Ugly Girl.

"I don't know what to do with her," Mrs. Mersham said, pettishly, looking after a retreating figure, and speaking to her niece, Miss Della Crosswell.—"She is the most insignificant-looking girl I ever saw."

"Downright ugly, I call her," said Miss Della, complacently, fully conscious of the fact that no one could apply the term to herself.

"She might be that and yet look like somebody. But she has no style at all. Anybody would think she had been raised in the backwoods."

Now all this, far from complimentary conversation was distinctly audible to Bertha Merritt, as, seated in her own room, she tried to rest from a long, wearisome journey and the shock of her cool reception. She smiled and sighed, but presently she heard:

"Poor, too. Her guardian wrote me that any expense her board might be her father's income would meet, and she will have that; but the whole tone of his letter proved that she was of no importance in his eyes, so, of course, she is poor."

"Certainly my aunt must know all these windows are open," Bertha thought, raising her head languidly from the cushion of her chair. "But really from a person who has style, who is somebody, and who was not raised in the backwoods, one would scarcely expect remarks so personal."

She did not get angry, though a red spot burned upon each cheek, but she did wish her father had not made it one of his last requests that she should seek a home with his sister. She had obeyed him while he lived, and obedience became a sacred duty when he died, so she had written from Paris (in France, be it understood, not one of the numerous backwoods towns of that name) and her guardian had arranged matters for her at Elmglade.

Miss Crosswell, who considered herself an heiress in the possession of ten thousand dollars, had long occupied the place of a daughter at Elmglade, but was a niece of the late Mr. Mersham. She was by no means rejoiced at the prospect of a rival, but comforted herself when Bertha appeared. Herself of the blonde type, tall, commanding in figure, she might have been fearful of a brunette, or another fair-haired beauty. But Bertha, with a short, slender figure, a crop of brown curls, a fair but colorless complexion, and ordinary features, was not to be dreaded.

"A good foil," Miss Crosswell decided, when the luncheon bell summoned Bertha, and she came in languidly, her black dress unrelieved by any spot of white, her face expressing only weariness. Her first remark was embarrassing, for coolly, and without any appearance of being annoyed, she said:

"Aunt Alice, perhaps you have forgotten that the room you have given me is directly over your sitting-room, and any conversation can be distinctly heard, now that the windows are open. I mention it, in case you wish to discuss any private matters. Can I help you to some of this salad?"

"Thanks!" was the reply, the opening for giving no reply to the first part of her sentence being quietly accepted.

"Let me show your cook some day how to prepare a French salad dressing that my father was fond of. I think you will like it."

"So she had to cook for her father," thought Miss Crosswell. "I hope she will not forget," for the young lady was by no means unwilling to take her share of the good things of this life.

"Were you long abroad?" she asked, presently.

"Just nineteen years, all my life! I was born in Italy, and my mother's health prevented her from quitting that climate. She died when I was only five years old. Since then we have lived in Germany and England, but for the last four years in Paris. My father was weary then of travel."

"It is a great opportunity for culture," said Miss Crosswell, with the accent of one imparting valuable information.

"Indeed!" Bertha replied, rather too gravely, from the effort it cost her not to laugh outright.

"Yes! You speak German, French and Italian, then?"

"And English!" said Bertha, gravely. "My father kept his native language for home use. Aunt Alice, can I pass you anything from this end of the table? Your raspberries are delicions."

It was apparent, before the day was over, that, "insignificant" as she might be in appearance, Miss Bertha could hold her own place in the household with quiet dignity. She showed her aunt some new stitches in Art Embroidery, that lady's last infatuation, and gave a few touches to an evening dress Miss Crosswell was altering that gave the garment a grace entirely new to it.

"But Alfred admires blondes," Miss Crosswell thought, as a tall, masculine figure appeared at the end of the avenue leading to the house.

"Mr. Cameron is coming," she said aloud; "if you do not wish to see strangers, Miss Merritt—"

"Alfred Cameron is no stranger," said Mrs. Mersham, who was perplexed by the last new stitch; "he almost lives here, Bertha, so you will have to meet him, sooner or later."

"Yes," said Bertha, indifferently, and presently courteously acknowledged the introduction without rising and merely lifting her eyes from her aunt's work.

But the eyes were large, soft, brown, velvety and expressive.

"Dear me!" thought Miss Crosswell, "her eyes were glorious, and I never noticed it."

She noticed something else before long. She noticed that Miss Bertha Merritt, without effort, without gesture keeping that Art Embroidery well in the foreground, could converse as no lady of her acquaintance was capable of doing. She ignored herself, the letter "I" being conspicuously absent, even in giving descriptions drawn from actual observations. She had read current literature without slighting standard reading; without ever quoting, could show perfect familiarity with her favorite authors. She made no effort to engross the guest's attention, tossing the ball of small talk to and fro to make a general conversation; and yet Alfred Cameron found himself wondering he had never discovered how shallow Miss Crosswell was before.

After a late dinner they deserted the sitting-room, and Della opened the grand piano. She was a brilliant performer, with a clear soprano voice fairly cultivated. Song after song, brilliant show pieces, and an entirely new fantasia filled an hour or two, and then Miss Crosswell sauntered across the piazza into the garden, and Mr. Cameron followed, leaving Bertha conversing in a low tone with her aunt at the end of the long room.

"Can you sing?" Mrs. Mersham asked, presently. "I hate musical rockets. Della fairly sets my teeth on edge; and yet her master was very proud of her."

"She is a credit to her music master," said Bertha, with a sarcasm so quiet that her aunt wondered if she knew it was there.

She sang, then, a German love song; low, sweet, caressing, and so simple that only a true artist could sing it well. Her voice, pure and penetrating, was yet so rich and full-toned, that it reached the heart at once. There was a sob in Mrs. Mersham's voice as she said:

"Another song, dear, and not so sad a one."

Then she sang an operatic aria, full of musical rockets, that yet were sent aloft upon such sweet thrilling notes that Mrs. Mersham fairly held her breath to listen.

"How can you go so high and never shriek?" she asked.

"It is a matter of culture. I was taught to undertake no note I had to strain after."

Then there came softly on the silence a ripple of music like a brook's babbling, a soft rush of wind through trees, a tinkling of rain drops, the twitter of birds, and a few grand chords to close all.

"What is that?"

"Only a fancy! A forest walk, if you will, or a song of spring. It will probably never come again."

"You do not mean to say you improvise?"

"That's rather a grand name for it, but you may call it so if you will."

"Mr. Cameron has gone," Della announced, entering the low French window, but she did not repeat his parting speech.

"I am going home before that music ceases to echo in my ears," and he narrowly escaped saying "in my heart," only the proprieties reined him up in time.

Miss Crosswell retired as cross as a well-trained young lady ever allows herself to be. She could not even have the satisfaction of accusing Bertha of trying to attract Mr. Cameron's attention, for Bertha had devoted herself entirely to her aunt. It was some comfort to think she was trying to wheedle herself into the good graces of the wealthy old lady, but even there justice suggested that there was no wheedling done.

Finding Mrs. Mersham delighted at the prospect, Bertha spent the morning in the pantry instructing a good-natured cook, whose heart she won at the start, by saying:

"Of course, I shall not pretend to know half as much about real cooking as you do, Maggie, but there are some foreign dishes I fancy my aunt may like, and you can use the receipts wherever you are."

The result was a salad and a fruit tart that sent Della Crosswell into a spasm of envy and delight, and Maggie, having wit enough to appreciate the value of her own information, gave Miss Bertha glad welcome whenever she appeared at the pantry door.

"Though it beats me," she said, "how a young lady, with your little white hands, ever learned how to cook."

"My father was an invalid for many years," was the gentle reply, "and I learned to prepare any dish I saw he liked. I am afraid you would not find me able to get much of a real dinner, Maggie."

"You'd soon find out what you don't know now," was the reply.

Without malice, yet certainly with intention, Bertha set herself to the task of winning her aunt's affection. She sang for her, taught her fancy work learned in a French convent, made her two collars of lace that could not be purchased, wrought all her favorite food into marvelous new combinations, and left Della Crosswell free to win Mr. Cameron. Mrs. Mersham had intimated that it was a very desirable match, within Miss Crosswell's grasp, and Bertha effaced herself in all practicable ways whenever Mr. Cameron called.

She was herself unconscious of how she filled every place where she appeared. She declined all invitations, being in close mourning, but made no effort to seclude herself, and joined in all the home social gatherings.

She took no part in charades or tableaux, and yet there was not a performer who did not draw inspiration from her quiet suggestions. She never played to show off her music, but her dancing tunes made the feet quiver, and not a singer sang once to her accompaniment who did not plead for it again. It was ever subordinate to the voice, and yet sustained it perfectly.

"Can't you teach me that little ripple?" one young lady asked. "I never heard it before."

"Nor will again. It is gone," was the reply, "but it suited your song."

Miss Crosswell was driven to desperation and most unwisely undertook open warfare. She sneered at Bertha's plain dresses, until Mrs. Mersham asked if she admired the vulgarity of "dressy" mourning; she ridiculed her music, satirized the quiet gentleness of her manner, and spoke of her to Alfred Cameron in words that roused that gentleman's chivalry.

"If she is a beggar," he said, proudly, "she is one a king might be proud to win!"

Appalled at this result, Miss Crosswell hastily patched the rents she had tried to make, and had the satisfaction of knowing that Mr. Cameron requested Mrs. Mersham's permission to pay his addresses to Miss Merritt, and Miss Merritt declined the honor.

"It did not seem necessary to mention it, Aunt Alice," she said, "but I am engaged to Senator G——. We met him in Paris, and as soon as a year of mourning is over, we are to be married."

When Miss Crosswell heard this she unmasked another battery and openly accused Bertha of trying to win Mrs. Mersham's fortune by cringing and flattery.

"But, Della, she neither flatters nor cringes. She is the sweetest girl I ever saw, and, since I learned to love her face, it has become beautiful to me. It is the most expressive face! As for my fortune, she knows quite well that the most of it goes to Mr. Mersham's nephews at my death, and (to be sure she asked me not to mention this, but she will not mind my telling you) her father left an immense fortune. She has given more than one five-hundred dollar check in charity since she came here."

It was a quiet wedding that took Bertha from Mrs. Mersham's some months later, and after some further test of loneliness Mr. Cameron returned to his allegiance.

But Mrs. Della Cameron was once heard to say:

"I married you to get away from Aunt Alice's perpetual song about Bertha Merritt, and you are everlastingly praising her. Let me tell you, sir, that it is not in good taste to quote your lost sweetheart's perfections to your wife, although I would scorn to be jealous of such an insignificant ugly girl."

SMART LAWYER AND CUTE WITNESS.—A young lawyer of the city of Providence tells a story of himself which is good enough to go on record. He was trying a "rum case" at Bristol not long ago, when a witness put on the stand to testify to the reputation of the place in question, replied, "A rum shop." The lawyer inquired, "You say it has the reputation of being a rum shop?" The witness didn't recollect of any one he had heard say so. "What!" said the lawyer, "you have sworn this place has the reputation of being a rum shop, and yet can't tell of any one you ever heard say so?" The witness was staggered for a moment—in the words of the lawyer, "I had him,"—and the lawyer was feeling triumphant, when the witness gathered himself together, and very quietly remarked, addressing the lawyer, "Well, you have the reputation of being a very smart lawyer, but I never heard any one say so."—Providence Journal.

HOCKING VALLEY NEWS.—In the absence of anything startling or terrific,—politics and the exploits of the army worm excepted,—news from this beautiful valley will not prove nerve-tingling. However an item of very great importance to many people is communicated by Mr. F. Harrington, Wholesale and Retail Druggist of Logan, who writes thus: Mr. Alex. McClurg, Union Furnace, states that his wife had been afflicted with rheumatism for the last twenty-five years, being unable to walk without canes or other help the most of that time; has now used two bottles of St. Jacobs Oil and walks not only about the house but also in the fields without any helps.—Logan, (Ohio) Hocking Sentinel.

"Are you feeling very ill?" asked a physician; "let me see your tongue, please." "It's no use, doctor," replied the poor patient; "no tongue can tell how bad I feel."

LADIES' COTTON UNDERWEAR

— WILL BEGIN —

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 30th, 1881.

Our twenty years' experience in selling Ladies' Cotton Underwear, enables us to purchase from the largest manufacturers in America, and at such terms and prices as cannot be excelled by any other house in the country. We would call particular attention to the finish, style and make of these goods, and think it useless to comment largely, but prefer rather that the Goods and Prices speak for themselves.

Our Great Underwear Show will be at our elegant, large and well lighted room, on the second floor, which is the best in the United States.

We will begin with a few prices, which will be only an index of the immense stock which we have on hand, and will receive daily until the contract which we have made is ended.

We extend a cordial invitation to all to visit us and examine our stock, whetner wishing to purchase or not.

We would again impress on the mind of the public that they should examine our stock, the style, material of which they are made, trimmings, finish, and then compare with that of any other house.

REMEMBER,

THE SALE WILL BEGIN

Friday, Dec. 30th.

CONRAD'S.

An Ohio paper says, a young lady who graduated in a calico dress a few years ago, is now married to a railroad superintendent who has an income of half a million a year. This may be taken as a basis for the regulation of graduation dresses hereafter. Had she worn alpaca she might have done even better, and caught the general manager of the road. On the other hand, had she blossomed forth in white Swiss she might have captured the president of the concern, with untold millions; had she worn silk with point-lace and diamonds, she might have scooped in the conductor of a passenger train, and had onyx staircases and alabaster walls to her house, and cut the wives of the officers on the road as society altogether too thin for her style. The thing ought to be a lesson to girl graduates, and a warning to them to patronize their tailors liberally.

HEALTH RULES.

Try popcorn for nausea.
Try cranberries for malaria.
Try a sun bath for rheumatism.
Try ginger ale for stomach cramps.
Try clam broth for a weak stomach.
Try a wet towel to the back of the neck when sleepless.
Try eating fresh radishes and yellow turnips for gravel; eat onions and horse-radish to relieve dropsical swellings.—Foote's Health Monthly.

Notice.—The "Oak Hall Outline Book for Juvenile Artists" is the prettiest Christmas offering we have ever seen. A box of superior Water Colors goes with each book, and prizes are offered to the juvenile artists who return the best-colored books to the publishers before Feb. 1. Four of these books, and four boxes of colors, are sent express paid for $1.00. Read the Oak Hall advertisement.

KNOCKABOUT.—Ever since mother Eve puzzled her brains over what she could make for Cain and Abel that they wouldn't tear into bits in a day's wear, it has been a problem with all mothers as to how they could overcome the destructive tendencies of their irrepressible boys to make way with the garments provided for them. The problem has been happily solved by the enterprising clothiers, Messrs. A. SHUMAN & Co., 440 Washington St., in their patented Knockabout suits for boys, which they advertise today. They are made from double warp and double and twist untearable fabrics, in medium and dark colors, unlikely to soil, and for these reasons the Knockabouts commend themselves to the taste, judgments and pockets of those to whom the amount expended during the year for boy's clothing is quite an item. Save yourself dollars and make the boy happy investing in a Knockabout.—Sat. Eve. Gazette.

Anecdotes.

SUPERSTITIONS.

In many portions of England, the old superstitions are still in vogue. A friend now traveling abroad sends us some instances.

One of his companions, a lady, who was temporarily staying near Penzance, Cornwall, attended a funeral, and noticed that while the clergyman was reading the burial service, a woman forced her way through the pall-bearers to the edge of the grave. When he came to the passage, "Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust," she dropped a white cloth upon the coffin, closed her eyes, and apparently said a prayer.

On making inquiries as to the cause of this proceeding, this lady found that a superstition exists among the peasants in that part, that if a person with a sore be taken secretly to a corpse, the dead hand passed over the sore place, and the bandage afterward dropped upon the coffin during the reading of the burial service, perfect cure will be the result. This woman had a child who had a bad leg, and she had followed this superstition, with a firm belief in its efficacy. The peasants also, to the present day, as we have been informed, wear charms, believing they will protect them from sickness and other evils.

The wife of the clergyman of the parish referred to was very charitable in attending the sick and dispensing medicines, and one day a woman brought her child, having sore eyes, to have them "charmed," having more faith in that remedy than in medicines. She was greatly surprised to find that medicines only were given to her.—Phila. Sat. Night.

ALDERMAN JEROME VISITS ENGLISH RELATIVES.

Mr. Lawrence Jerome, of New York, has a niece who is the wife of Lord Randolph Churchill. Not long since, Uncle Larry, being in London, called at his niece's house, and thereby astonished the stately footman who answered his ring:

"Is Mr. Churchill at home?"

(The footman shivers.)

"Me Lud is in Ireland."

"Humph! What's he doing in Ireland?"

(The footman is silent with horror.)

"Is Mrs. Churchill in?"

(The footman quivers with indignation.)

"Me Lady, sir, is not down stairs yet."

"Not up? Humph! A pretty time of day to be in bed! Well, you just tell Mrs. Churchill—"

(The footman pales and is about to summon assistance to eject the audacious intruder, when—a silvery laugh and a voice float down from over the banisters. "I hear you, Uncle Larry! Come right in!")

The footman, bowing low, "O, sir, me Lud! pardon me. If you please, me Lud, this way."—Youth's Companion.

BRAGGING.

It is natural for man to brag. And frequently the less he has to brag over the more bragging he will do. The most trifling incidents are sufficient to keep some men bragging all their lives. We once knew a man whom Henry Clay kicked out of his way, and the fellow bragged of it all the rest of his days, and he was proud to be introduced as "the man Harry of the West booted." Men brag over things that never happened, though they repeat it so often that they come to believe it themselves. It has been estimated that it would require a vessel like the Great Eastern to carry all the people claiming to have been on Fulton's first steamboat when it made its trial trip. We have ourself shaken hands with twenty eight men, each one of whom boasted that he was the first man to walk across the Niagara suspension bridge. The woods are full of men who are ready to swear they were standing right alongside of Grant when he said he "would fight it out on that line if it took all summer."

WANTED A GOVERNESS.

A rare chance for a governess is offered by a lady who advertises in the London Times. All that is wanted is that the candidate be "of good birth and education," shall "take the entire charge of a sweet little girl two years of age," be "a useful and agreeable companion" to the sweet little girl's mamma, "clever with her needle, active and obliging, of good temper, amiable and unselfish and naturally fond of children, and be able to give the most undeniable references." For these trifles one hundred and twenty-five dollars a year, traveling expenses and washing are offered, with the additional inducement that "conscientious and tender care of the little pet will be warmly appreciated."

POSTAL STATISTICS.

One letter in every three hundred sent is unclaimed in the office to which it goes. One letter in two hundred and eighty-three turns up at the dead-letter office. One letter out of every thirty-one hundred sent is held for postage at the office of mailing, and this amounts to nearly three hundred thousand in a year. More than two hundred thousand letters in a year are insufficiently addressed. Ten thousand letters this year bear no superscription whatever, and these letters often contain remittances of great value. More than two hundred thousand foreign letters fail to reach the persons to whom they are addressed.

Beautiful are the admonitions of him whose life accords with his teachings.—Exchange.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 22, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO., Gentlemen: I have taken Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and have derived great benefit from it. I have been troubled for about eight years with Kidney Disease and Gravel. I never suffered particularly from it until last fall. I was then afflicted with excrutiating pain that rose from my right kidney to my bladder. I was also greatly troubled with making my water. I could not retain it, and was obliged to go to the urinal a number of times a day. I tried a great many different remedies and took quantities of medicine without any seeming benefit or relief. I grew worse and I suffered distressing pains across my right kidney, and it was with great difficulty that I walked. Finally, about three weeks ago, I was induced to try your remedy. The first I took of it seemed to make me feel worse, but I continued, notwithstanding, and in a short time I began to improve. I have now taken a bottle of it, and am going to continue it. I have been wonderfully benefited. The pains have left me and I am not troubled with my water, and altogether I am feeling a different person. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has done it all.

Charles F. Hinsman

Essex street.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 21, 1881.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.—Gentlemen: About 10 years ago my first trouble began with a falling and retrocession of the womb, and the tortures I underwent are beyond description. I was attended by two of the most eminent physicians in the country and underwent a number of operations for tumors; but all that science and skill could do was ineffectual. I grew worse and worse year after year until my sufferings, from a complication of diseases, turned into Bright's disease, and all hopes of recovery, even by my physicians, were given up. However, I recovered for a time from this spell; at times being better and at times being worse. An analysis of my water showed large quantities of albumen. I had excruciating pains in my kidneys and across my abdomen towards the bladder, which compelled me to lie on my right for so long a time that at last large bed sores formed. I tried different remedies which were said to be good for Bright's disease, but they were ineffectual and made me worse. Cold chills would creep over me, up my spine, and through my head. My appetite was entirely gone, and I was so thoroughly emaciated and in such a frightful condition that my living at all was a mystery, even to my physician. Finally, last January, my husband purchased 10 bottles of your remedy and prevailed upon me to use it; and although from my previous experience with proprietary medicine, I had little or no faith in them, yet I had read so much about Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure that I began taking it, and did not experience any benefit from it until I had taken the third bottle, when I began to improve. I persevered in taking your remedy, and before long I was able to be up and around. My appetite returned and I began steadily to gain flesh. I have taken altogether 27 bottles and still continue its use, and my friends and neighbors look upon me in astonishment. I would also say that before taking your remedy I suffered dreadfully with painful incustinations and great flowing and had convulsions, and I was also affected with hemorrhoids. It seemed as if I were to be a martyr to all the pains and ills that flesh is heir to. But thanks to Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, I am now entirely free from any sufferings in that respect. I feel, as it were, like a new being. It is at times hard for me to realize the wonderful change; I am endowed with new life, all owing to your magnificent remedy. It has saved my life, and my gratitude to you is unbounded. My case is so prominent here that any one who desires to know more about it can write to Beverly, and they can receive the desired information. I make this reference because those living away from here sometimes doubt such statements as I have made. Your remedy is a blessing.

Carrie L. Wallis

P. O. Box 398.

BEVERLY, MASS., Sept. 21, '81.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.,—Gentlemen: The statement of my wife does not begin to express the suffering she underwent. We did not think it possible for her to live. Your remedy has no doubt saved her life. It is a grand thing, and you cannot think how thankful I am for it.

Henry B. Wallis

Thousands of equally strong endorsements—many of them in cases where hope was abandoned—have been voluntarily given, showing the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in all diseases of the kidneys, liver or urinary organs. If any one who reads this has any physical trouble, remember the great danger of delay. nov 30—4w

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual intercourse, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty year's successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

Christmas at the Churches.

Christmas was very generally observed in this town, most of the churches being fully attended. The beautiful day, added to the attractions of the special Christmas exercises, brought our church going people out in full numbers. The musical portion of the services was unusually fine at all the churches, the trees were bountifully and liberally supplied, and a happy time among the children was the result. We give below more minutely some of the services.

At the Baptist Church the pastor, Rev. Mr. Wood, preached a very able and instructive Christmas sermon, taking his text from Matthew 1: 21. "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus." The display of flowers was magnificent. On each corner of the pulpit desk was a basket of flowers and a large bouquet in the center. On either side on small tables, were prettily arranged a cross of ferns, flowers and autumn leaves, while a little bird was seen in each. In the front of the desk was a large evergreen wreath, while the whole was connected by smilax, small bouquets, etc. To add to the effect, a pure white dove with spread wings appeared as if caught in the vines.

At the Congregationalist Church Rev. Mr. Sperry preached upon the birth of Christ, and took for his text a part of the 15th verse of the second chapter of the gospel by St. Luke: "Let us now go even into Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known to us." With the exception of a large wreath in front of the pulpit there were no decorations.

At the St. Paul's Episcopal Chapel, the rector, Rev. Mr. Walker, preached an interesting discourse from the words, "There was no room for them in the Inn." This was followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The chapel was neatly trimmed with evergreen which hung in profusion from the top of the room to each side.

At the Methodist Church no special Christmas service was held. Rev. Daniel Griffin, the evangelist, occupied the pulpit.

At St. John's Church Christmas passed off quietly. At High Mass, at 10 o'clock, an eloquent sermon was delivered by Rev. M. J. Masterson from the Gospel of St. John, 1: 1-14, in which he set forth the glorious mission of the Saviour departing from the throne of God, and coming into this world for its redemption. Man knows his neighbor; for his prosperity he can assign a reason, and can see the true inwardness of his misfortune, but no human being can penetrate the mysteries of God, nor understand His being. The world of to-day is even more abandoned than in the time of the Jews. When the Saviour came into the world, He was refused shelter in the City of David, and it was only among the brute beasts of the fields that He received protection from the winter's blast. This may be attributed to the ignorance of the Jews, but to-day, in an enlightened age, men still refuse to harbor him. The singing, both at ten o'clock Mass and at Vespers, was excellent, and reflects credit on Mr. J. J. Carew for the high standing in which he has placed the choir.

At the Unitarian Church, Rev. Mr Hudson's text was Luke 1: 31-32, "He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and of his Kingdom there shall be no end." The sermon was upon the unfolding of the life and purpose of Jesus from his birth down to the time when he announced himself as the Messiah. It consisted of a series of vivid illustrations based upon what is known of the geography, the leading ideas, and the social and political condition of Palestine at the beginning of the Christian era. Mr. Hudson aimed to treat only the earlier and happier portion of Christ's ministry, and he stated that he intended to illustrate in the same manner the later events of the Gospel history at Easter. An important feature of the service was the choice selection of Christmas music, impressively rendered by the usual choir assisted by Misses Nelson and Felt. A large congregation was present. The afternoon service was followed by the Lord's Supper. The church was decorated very tastefully, the four walls, the organ, and the orchestra railing being covered with festoons of evergreen interspersed with appropriate mottoes.

At the Universalist Church, Rev. Mr. Harmon preached from St. Luke 2: 14, "On earth, peace" and Matthew 10: 34, "I came not to send peace, but a sword." His subject was the "advent of peace in history" and the preacher advanced the idea that all advance in either knowledge or goodness has been through strife and struggle, which he illustrated from historical events and persons. The music at this church was excellent, as usual, under the direction of Mr. Clark.

CONCERTS.

A Christmas concert was given at the Universalist Church Sunday evening, which attracted a good number of spectators. The exercises were carried out in an excellent manner, and the singing was especially fine. Superintendent Merrill made a few remarks at the commencement about the significance of Christmas, which was gradually superseding Thanksgiving as a day of festivity. The children spoke clearly and had their pieces well committed. A reading by Miss Ada Hill was finely given. At the close Rev. Mr. Harmon spoke of the observance of Christmas from its earliest date to the present time, and fully explained how it came into such general recognition as a holiday. The pulpit was prettily decorated with evergreen, and the words "Peace on earth, good will to men" hung on each side of a staff, upon which was displayed a star and the words "Of Bethlehem."

The Sabbath School Concert at the South Church, on Sunday evening, was largely attended. The exercises were of an interesting character, consisting of recitations, recital of Scripture passages, and singing. The part of the infant class was especially interesting. There was an evident desire on the part of this class to render their pieces satisfactorily.

The Unitarian Sunday School gave a concert last Sunday evening. It consisted of recitations by the little ones, singing by the School, and select readings by Misses Taylor, Wiley and Worth. The Superintendent made some seasonable remarks to the little ones. A very interesting feature was a map exercise by Rev. Mr. Hudson. A large map of the Holy Land was used and a description of the country, cities and rivers spoken of in Bible history was given. The concert was quite entertaining and showed the thorough work that had been done.

CHRISTMAS TREES.

The children and adults connected with the Cong. Sunday School assembled in the vestry last Saturday afternoon to enjoy a Christmas tree. The tree was very prettily arranged in the ladies' room on the right. After a prayer by Rev. Mr. Sperry, the company marched around the vestry and the folding doors that hid the tree from view were opened and the distribution of presents commenced. Among the presents was an illustrated book, "Beautiful Wild Flowers," for Mrs. Sperry from her class, also a beautiful bouquet of flowers from Mr. J. M. Ward. Mrs. Benj. Upton received a handsome photograph album from the school. Mr. Samuel Trask, who retires from the school as assistant superintendent, was presented with a fine steel engraving, "The parable of the sword." The afternoon Bible class gave Mr. and Mrs. Sperry an elegant ice pitcher. Several of the teachers were remembered as well as other adult members of the school.

At the Methodist Vestry a Christmas tree was the attraction on Saturday evening. Two large trees were well filled with presents, which were quickly distributed among those for whom they were intended. Mrs. Isaac Knowlton, the organist, received a fine steel engraving in heavy gilt frame, "The return from the mountain," besides a very pretty toilet set. Mr. Walter C. Bancroft, superintendent of the Sunday school, was given a large wool mat.

Saturday evening the Unitarian Sunday school had its usual Christmas festival in the church parlors, which were gaily illuminated with Chinese lanterns. The large tree was filled with gifts provided for the Sunday school by the society, and arranged by a committee of ladies, and every scholar and teacher was remembered.

The Baptist Sunday school held their Christmas tree on Monday evening.—There was a supper for the little ones early in the evening; later there was singing by the choir and a recitation by Miss Sadie Pierce. The little Thomas girls, Fannie and Nellie, sang, and Miss Addie Nevers read a selection after which the trees were relieved of their numerous presents. Every scholar received one, and Mr. French gave each in his class a book of poems. Mrs. Wood received a fine silk dress.

GOV. LONG'S CANE—The writer, having occasion to see Gov. Long recently, that gentleman, as he was about to depart, asked him to look at a bright-looking and apparently new walking cane, and test how heavy it was. As a matter-of-fact, however, the cane was an exceedingly light one for its size.—"That is a cottonwood cane," said the Governor, "and was presented to me by a southern gentleman during my visit to Yorktown. I met him on a steamer, and he told me he had been in Boston. He said that he was a private in a North Carolina regiment during the war of the Rebellion, and was taken prisoner, and went to Boston. From what he had heard of our State and people, he expected nothing but torture when he arrived at his quarters in one of our forts; but as a matter of fact, he said, he experienced nothing but good treatment, and desired me to accept this cane as a token of his remembrance of the kindness shown him by the people of Boston while a prisoner-of-war there, and I accepted it in the spirit in which it was offered." The Governor, it may be added, is evidently very much pleased with his cottonwood cane, and will never part with it, at least not this side of the other Styx.—Boston Herald.

TWO SAMPLES—"Kissing goes by favor," the world over says the New England Farmer, and adds that the Homestead tells of a South Hadley farmer who exhibited at an county fair two samples of grain, taken from the same bin entering one in his own name and the other in the name of a "fancy farmer" of the neighborhood. When the premiums came to be announced, the sample marked with the name of the fancy farmer took the first prize, while the other lot identically the same in every respect except that it had not so big a name behind it, was not even noticed. All of which goes to show that the judges at agricultural fairs are sometimes influenced by other motives than those of substantial justice.

Patience at the Boston Museum having closed its run there, owing to previous engagements, Mr. Dion Boucicault has entered on an engagement in the "Colleen Bawn," supported by Mr. Shiel Barry as "Danny Mann," and the Museum company. Under the management of Mr. Page, the company played "Patience" in Montreal on Monday evening to a crowded house. There were encores for all the principal scenes in which the "aesthetic sham" appears, and Mr. Wilson was recalled after every act. The opera fairly captured Montreal.

Our neighbor says that in replying to his query we do so "in the low and vulgar language of the blackguard." Here it is: "beneath the dignity of a high toned, moral, religious, and strictly truthful editor like himself." The above language according to our neighbor is that of a blackguard. It is more: the explanations above, as he states are—"some false, some absurd and all boyish."

"High toned." Is this absurd?
"Moral." Is this false?
"Religious." Is this boyish?
"Strictly truthful." Which is this?

Our neighbor is too modest. He should have a better opinion of himself.

The liquor dealers are appealing their cases. There is a reason for this proceeding. We don't want to say anything about it, only in a confidential way, so don't you tell of it. But the little racket is this: they say they will appeal and wait until Court sits, then if there happens to be a sprinkling of liquor sellers on the jury, they will stand trial; but if the juries look as though they had no sympathy for rum-sellers, they propose to hurry down here to Judge Cate's and settle up, which they say they can just as well do then. —Amesbury News.

With the close of the holiday trade Messrs. ALMY, BIGELOW & WEBBER announce an extensive sale of Cotton Underwear. They have purchased a large lot of these goods at a very low price, and are prepared to inaugurate the new year with some surprising bargains in this department. Read their advertisement in another column, and remember that the early purchasers will get the best selections.

We cordially recommend all lovers of music, interested in cabinet organs, to examine the quality of tone and power of action of the new organ recently purchased by the Ladies' Aid Society of Ashland Hall. It was made by the New England Organ Co., and we have no hesitation in pronouncing it a first-class instrument and the equal in every respect of any we have seen in this town. Their organs are made in the best manner, and in the fair of the Massachusetts Charitable Association in 1878 they were awarded a first gold medal, after a severe competition. The committee was composed of such men as Dexter Smith and J. B. Sharland and in regard to the result the New York Music Trade Review said: "We do not think we err if we state that the great majority were strongly in favor of the New England Organ Co." And this judgment was in consonance with the opinions and predictions of the Boston press, daily expressed during the continuance of the Fair. The triumph gives to the New England Organ Co. the unprecedented honor of having acheived three first gold medals in fourteen months, a succession of rapid victories which no other company ever before achieved in America.

If any of our readers desire a fine organ at a low price, we advise them to visit the warerooms, 1299 Washington St., Boston, or call at this office and see catalogues and prices.

At a recent banquet in Chicago, one toast was as follows: "Woman—without her, man is a brute." The toast-master read it as follows: "Woman—without her man, is a brute." The joke of it was that the man who was to respond to the toast had supposed the former reading of it was correct, and had prepared a speech complimenting women, but when he heard the toast as read, he pocketed his written speech and made an impromptu speech in which he glorified man as all that was angelic, and showed what great influence they had over woman, and how "without her man," women would be pretty tough. To make it right the papers are going to print both speeches. It makes all the difference in the world how you punctuate a toast.

D. CONRAD advertises in another column his annual sale of Cotton Underwear, which commences on Friday of this week. He has divided his stock into different lots as described in his advertisement, and our readers will do well to carefully peruse his announcement.

An inspection department has been created by Gov. Long upon his staff, and Col. Schaff has been appointed inspector general, with rank of brigadier general. He has also appointed Samuel Dalton, of Salem, commander of the Second Corps of Cadets, inspector of ordnance, with rank of Colonel.

THE NAUMKEAG CLOTHING CO., of Salem, still continue to show to their customers some remarkable bargains in clothing. In overcoats, suits, pants, boy's clothing, and everything in their stock they have made sweeping reductions in price. Don't forget them.

The second concert in the Essex Institute course, of Salem, was given Monday evening by Messrs. Arthur Foote, C. N. Allen, Wulf Fries, and Miss S. C. Fisher.

SPECIAL BARGAINS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.—Gents' Waltham Watches in silver cases, $10; Ladies' Gold Waltham Watches from $22 upward; Gents' Gold Waltham Watches, $24.50. Our new $18 Silver Watch is giving the best of satisfaction. Every watch fully warranted. DANIEL LOW'S, corner Essex and Washington sts., Salem.

Mr. Samuel Welch, a former resident of this town, and well known here, died in Salem this morning.

A WORD IN SEASON.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

ALMY, BIGELOW & WEBBER.

Our Regular Annual January Sale
OF
LADIES' COTTON UNDERWEAR
To Commence Monday, January 2d.
NO LIMITATION.

Owing to our rapidly increasing business in this department, and the lessons taught us in our very successful Sale in August last, of these Goods, we shall in this sale devote double the area that we have ever before occupied for a Cotton Underwear Sale. This year we shall show the whole stock on First Floor, and occupy almost the entire eastern side of our store. All the goods now occupying the space will be removed immediately after Christmas to the basement, now being occupied exclusively for Christmas goods. The entire Cotton Department, Print Department, Gingham and Skirt Departments will give way for at least two weeks, to accommodate this sale, which we are determined shall eclipse anything we have ever recorded. In short there is No limitation to our endeavor to provide every facility for the speedy and proper execution of this Sale, which every lady with the experience of past seasons must realize the importance of, as at no other season of the year can Cotton Underwear be afforded at such advantageous rates as in mid winter, when all business is at a low ebb, and manufacturers seek an outlet for the productions of the long dull season for this class of Goods, and when retailers can best spare the extra room, which is peremptorily demanded when goods are offered at prices which barely cover the cost of materials and an extremely small allowance for labor—all these considerations making the Sale of Ladies Cotton Underwear in January fully equal to any six months in year.

Supreme Judicial Court, November term, '81. Essex, ss.

Elmira Abbie Dow, Libt., vs. Sidney Jerome Dow. Divorce.

In the above-entitled libel for divorce, it is now ordered, that a decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony be entered in favor of the said ELMIRA ABBIE DOW for the cause of the extreme cruelty of the said SIDNEY JEROME DOW to be made absolute on application of either party to the Clerk of the Court after the expiration of six months from the entry of this decree, upon compliance with the terms thereof, unless the Court has for sufficient cause, on application of any party interested, otherwise ordered.

And the libellant is required to publish, as soon as may be, an attested copy of this order in the Peabody Press, a newspaper printed in Peabody, in said county of Essex, once a week for six successive weeks; that all persons interested may, within said six months, show cause, if any they have, why said decree should not be made absolute.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The years have linings, just as goblets do;
The old year is the lining of the new;—
Filled with the wine of precious memories,
The golden Was doth line the silver Is.

The third entertainment for the benefit of the Soldiers' Home will take place to-morrow (Thursday) evening. The talented reader and character artist from the West, Miss Louise Farrand, will appear, and will be assisted by M'lle Jessie Peppierre, as vocalist. The readings of Miss Farrand are in appropriate costume, and she has been greeted with full houses wherever she has appeared. We clip the following from a Chicago paper:

Miss Farrand stands second to no other actress in this country, not even to Mrs. Scott Siddons, and has been pronounced the peer of each and all.

Another paper of the same city says:

Miss Louise Farrand, who is the principal attraction, is a charming elocutionist. Her power over an audience is wonderful. With a bright, intelligent, and expressive face, admirably adapted to dramatic delineations, she throws into her recitals a magnetic influence that controls every human emotion and passion. Her pictures of the tragic and heroic are heightened by her remarkable sympathetic quality of voice and temperament, and are characterized with artistic skill and fidelity.

It is to be hoped that our people will turn out in good numbers and give the "Star of the West" a hearty welcome.

The third entertainment of the Odd Fellows' Course was given at the Institute last Thursday evening. The committee were advised at a late hour on Wednesday that Mr. J. W. Maynard, pianist, and Prof. John A. Hill, violinist, would not fulfill their engagements, but the committee did the best they could in the limited time and secured Monsieur De Seve as violinist. The concert was not as good as the preceding ones, but gave fair satisfaction, as was attested by the vigorous applause and several encores which were given M'lle DeMont, in her Zylophone solo, was very fine. Prof. M. Wallach, although old, is ever new in his harmonica solos and variations. Mr. Frank Reynolds, as a humorist, did not seem to take a Peabody audience by storm. Mons. De Seve's violin solos were well received and repeatedly encored. The next entertainment in the course will be given Thursday evening, Jan. 5, by the Ruggles Street Church male Quartette.

The following officers of Fitch Poole Council, American Legion of Honor, were elected, Monday evening, for the ensuing term:

Commander—F. S. Worcester.
Past Commander—H. C. Torr.
Vice Commander—R. H. Wilkinson.
Chaplain—George Randall.
Orator—G. M. Foster.
Treasurer—Otis Brown.
Secretary—J. N. Ham.
Collector—C. D. Howard.
Guide—W. H. Wing.
Warden—J. S. Paul.
Sentry—Israel Ferguson.
Trustees—Cyrus T. Batchelder, N. M. Quint, G. M. Frost.
Rep. to Grand Council—W.F. Wiley.
Alternate—H. C. Torr.

The officers will be installed at the next regular meeting, Jan. 9, 1882.

The following complimentary notice is from the Kansas City Evening Star. The ladies are well-known in this vicinity:

A store designed exclusively for the wants of ladies is that which the Evening Star man found at 713 Main St. Miss Helen L. Osborn and Miss Frances E. Mihan are the proprietors, and being ladies of intelligence and uncommon business ability, are well-known to the ladies of Kansas City. Coming from the East about a year ago, they located in one-half of a small store, but their business has so much increased that their present large and beautiful store is almost too small for them with their constantly increasing trade.

A man was in town Monday who has invented a railroad switch entirely different from anything heretofore known. It is operated by levers, controlled by the engineer in the cab of the locomotive, which, striking a balance wheel between the rails opposite the switch, throws it open or closes it as the case may be, shifting the rails to one side or the other as the engineer pleases. The inventor claims that the switch can be operated successfully where a train is going at the rate of 60 miles an hour, and thinks it is destined to create a revolution in the system of rail-shifting.

A bold attempt was made last Friday morning to wreck a train on the track between Peabody and Salem. The night watchman at Peter Sim's factory discovered three young men putting the butt of a spile across the track below Grove street, Salem. An alarm was given, but the would-be wreckers made their escape.

Dr. Bolles, of Salem, has been induced to offer to our citizens, in the hall of the Peabody Institute, a course of six lectures from his famous Lowell Institute Course in Boston last winter. This course was of twelve lectures on Historic London, and was received by a densely crowded audience with the utmost enthusiasm. A writer to the Boston Advertiser, Feb. 10, 1881, says: "The course of Lectures on London by Dr. E. C. Bolles before the Lowell Institute, now drawing to a close, may be regarded as the literary event of the season. Not for many years has there been given in this city a course of lectures at once so instructive and so popular." These lectures have been repeated in Portland and Salem with great success. The list proposed for Peabody is as follows:

1. Early London.
2. Plantagenet London.
3. Tudor London.
4. Early Stuart London.
5. London of the Restoration.
6. London of Queen Anne.

These lectures are profusely illustrated with stereopticon views, most of which have been expressly made by Dr. Bolles, and for this purpose. The pictures are of ruins, antiquarian relics, maps, portraits, historic scenes, copies of old and rare engravings, celebrated manuscripts, monuments, ideal restorations—in short, whatever the lecturer, by repeated visits to London and by long study, has been able to secure as materials for illustration. The lectures are historic studies, and are intended to present in the clearest and most striking manner the story of the growth and glory of the greatest city in the world—a story in which all Americans should be interested, from its connection with the life of our own land.

The course will be opened the last of January, and the tickets will be sold at a very low figure.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather last evening, a fair sized audience was present in the Institute to listen to the readings given by Mr. J. J. Hayes, the seventh of the free course. The programme consisted of Willis' "Leper," "Our Guide in Genoa and Rome," "Biddy McGinnis at the Photographer's," "The Grave Digger's Scene in Hamlet," "Darius Green and his Flying-Machine," "Brother Anderson's Sermon," "Samantha Allen's Description of the Fourth of July Celebration in Jonesville." Mr. Hayes is possessed of excellent natural gifts for a reader and delineator; in fact, he is almost beyond criticism. His Irish brogue in "Biddy McGinnis" was perfect, the well known peculiarity of accent and manner of speaking of that race being imitated to the life. He also rendered the scene from Hamlet magnificently. In the Jonesville celebration he showed his ability to assume voices and styles of speaking widely different, and convulsed the audience with laughter. All who heard him last evening bestow upon him much praise.

Experienced journalists always look with pity and disgust on the silly antics of youthful fledglings, who imagine they are reporters. In one of our churches, last Sunday evening, a lad, who is the personification of unadulterated "freshness," made himself both conspicuous and ridiculous by flourishing a notebook around, mimicking the speaking and gesticulation of the preacher and carrying on a loud-mouthed conversation with some giggling girls. Somebody should send him a bag of salt.

A 17 months' old daughter of William McCarthy, living on Liberty street, was fearfully scalded last Sunday night by her mother's letting fall a tea kettle of hot water. The child was at play on the floor, and received the contents of the vessel. The skin was peeled from the side of the face, back, breast and arms in a frightful manner. Dr. Worcester was called and did all in his power to relieve the little sufferer. It is reported that both parents were under the influence of liquor at the time.

Shortly after 12 o'clock last Friday noon, an alarm was given caused by a fire at the residence of Mrs. Isaac Elliott, on Main street. The department rallied promptly and confined the fire to the attic and roof. The damage by water is probably more than by fire. The building was fully insured with C. S. Nichols of Salem, and the furniture with O. B. Chadwick & Co. Miss Jacobs, a school teacher and boarder with Mrs. Elliott, had her wardrobe badly damaged by water.

Holten Lodge, I.O.O.F., elected officers last evening, as follows:

N. G.—George E. Lewis.
V. G.—N. C. Patterson.
Rec. Sec'y—Irvin Besse.
Per. Sec'y—Chas. A. Sanger.
Treasurer—George F. Sanger.
Trustees—W. F. Walker, D. S. Littlefield, Chas. E. Teague.

The elected and appointed officers will probably be installed one week from next Tuesday night.

The M'lle DeMont Concert Co., in the Boston Sunday Herald, advertise themselves to the public on the strength of "great success in Peabody Institute." If their success is measured by the slim performance here, their engagements must indeed be numerous.

Card.

We desire to acknowledge the liberal manner in which our friends and patrons have appreciated our efforts in their behalf during the past year, and especially during the holiday season. THE SWEEPING MARK-DOWN SALE

— BY THE —

MANUFACTURERS,

— HAS PROVED AN —

Unparalleled

Success!

Continuation of the Greatest Mark-Down Sale of Clothing on Record.

TALK ABOUT GREAT BARGAINS!
TALK ABOUT SLAUGHTERING SALES!
TALK ABOUT LOW PRICES!

This Great Sale has placed them all far back in the Shade.

Our great success in this mark down sale has proved to us and our patrons that the quality of our goods and the low prices have placed our reputation for selling good reliable clothing beyond the reach of all our competitors.

The question is asked from every town and village: How is it possible for the Naumkeag Clothing Co. to sell Clothing at such low prices? Call at our headquarters, 403 Washington street, Boston, and we will prove to you how it is done. We manufacture by the thousands, we wholesale by the thousands, and we retail by the thousands: therefore the great success.

SQUARE DEALING, LARGE SALES AND SMALL PROFITS.

Look at our prices! Who ever heard of such a price for a man's overcoat—90 cents, which is less than the lining's cost? Boston and New York dealers sell them for $1.50, and claim it to be the lowest price ever named for a Man's Overcoat.—Naumkeag holds the fort, and sells them for 90 cents.

Country dealers could make money by selecting their goods from our stock at retail prices. Never was such a time known to buy good clothing at half its value.

GREAT BARGAINS IN OVERCOATS.

COOL LAW SUIT.—A few months ago a storekeeper added a large refrigerator to his stock in store, and upon giving up his store a short time ago was about to take away the refrigerator when the owner of the building refused to allow him to do so. The owner claims that under the law anything built into or against the building becomes a part of the building itself, hence his refusal to allow the refrigerator to be taken away. Meanwhile both sides have engaged counsel and a cool lawsuit is in prospect.

More cases of sick head-ache, biliousness, constipation, &c., can be cured in less time, with less medicine, and for less money, by using Carter's Little Liver Pills, than by any other means.

The mayor of Newburyport has a majority of 329. Somehow, those figures have a familiar look, and we see them shimmering on the landscape 1000 miles from Newburyport.

A Virginia editor was asked by a stranger if it was possible that little town kept up four newspapers, and the reply was, "No, it takes four newspapers to keep up the town."

If you are nervous or dyspeptic try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. Dyspepsia makes you nervous, and nervousness makes you dyspectic; either one renders you miserable, and these little pills cures both.

Every man tells about striking the nail on the head, but when it happens to be his finger nail, his enthusiasm becomes wild and incoherent.

A young lady being asked what business her lover was in, and not liking to say he bottled soda, answered; "He is a fizzician."

Mr. George Schick informs our reporter that he had been suffering with rheumatism in his feet so badly that for weeks at a time he would be unable to leave his bed. He tried various remedies without relief, and concluded to use St. Jacobs Oil. It acted like magic. In two days he was entirely cured. —Saginaw Daily News.

A GOSPEL CAR.—The New York Hour thus humorously comments upon the proposition of a conductor to attach a gospel car to railroad trains:

By all means let the experiment be tried. It is doubtful, indeed, if, as this good conductor alleges, any considerable number of commercial travellers, or "drummers," as they are familiarly known, are clamoring for this saintly innovation. As a rule, the average "drummer" knows vastly more about poker than he does about St. Paul; is less familiar with "The Old Hundreth" than seven up, and has more faith in the virtues of one Reina Victoria or two fingers of Bourbon, as a lure for possible customers, than any number of hymns. It is not clear, moreover, that the jolting and rumbling and rattling of the train, diversified by the occasional ringing of bells or the tooting of whistles, would add any particular degree of melody to the intoning of "Coronation" or "The Old Hundreth" while the most impressive prayer or sermon would lose something of its effect if the preacher was suddenly and violently bounced into the lap of his next neighbor. Then, again, trouble is to be apprehended from the claims of conflicting denominations. Methodists and Baptists might come into conflict on the subject of immersion; Episcopalians and Unitarians could scarcely be expected to harmonize on the subject of the Trinity; Presbyterians and Universalists might with difficulty be restrained from blows on the question of eternal punishment; Roman Catholic and Lutherans would certainly fall to wigging each other over the infallibility of the Pope. And then suppose a Mormon elder were to appear and try to proclaim her gospel? It would hardly be feasable to have a separate gospel car for the members of each persuasion; and failing this, some confusion would be inevitable. But all differences could be smoothed over by time and patience, and then there can be no doubt that the gospel car would be a pyramidal success. The directors and presidents of the various roads would of course be the first to avail themselves of its spiritual comforts. How edifying would be the sight of that sanctified person Jay Gould leading in prayer, the venerable William H. Vanderbilt giving out the hymn, or the saintly Russell Sage preaching on the virtues of frugality and watered stock. And, if in class meeting these gentlemen could be prevailed on to relate their experiences, the popularity of their respective roads would take a "boom." All Wall street would crowd their gospel cars, and every stockbroker would find a sudden "call" to repentance and be "put" on the road of righteousness at once. The only danger is, that the churches of every creed would be deserted and nothing but gospel trains would be running from Boston to San Francisco.

That poor bedridden, invalid wife, sister, mother or daughter can be made the picture of health by a few bottles of Hop Bitters. Will you let them suffer? when so easily cured.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Ellsworth, of Port Ewen, Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth. His disease involved the whole of his thigh bone and the sufferihg man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N Y., who was consultnd, held a different opinion, and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Ellsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR e bottld. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY. KEEP YOUR SCALP CLEAN.

The best thing out for removing Dandruff is

HEYLINGBERG'S

EUREKA DANDRUFF REMOVER.

It has been thoroughly tested by hundreds of gentlemen, Ladies, and Children, and we have plenty of testimonials of its good results. It is cooling, removes Dandruff, invigorates the roots of the hair, and will quickly produce a strong and beautiful growth in all cases where the roots of the hair are not fully dead, and will stop this unpleasent itching; in fact it is the best hair dressing in use. It is not greasy or sticky, and is warranted free of all oils, and poisins, and will prove the cleanest, safest and most economical Hair Dressing to be found.

Peabody, Mass., Nov. 18, 1881.

Mr. J. J. Heylingberg, Dear Sir:—Both myself and wife have used your Eureka Dandruff Remover for some time, with the most satisfactory results, and recommend it as being indispensable for the toilet. Yours truly,

SHORTS AND MIDDLINGS.—20 tons heavy White Wheat Shorts and Middlings. For sale by CHARLES A. ROPES, 41 to 47 Central street.

THE SUN.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining, as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discardad many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It effected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.

THE SUN of 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN'S political course.

THE WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete THE WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like THE SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a perfect Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and infinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

It our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for THE SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

LEXICONIC ORTHOGRAPHY.

The Great Literary Prize Contest.

Appropriately Dedicated, By L. Lum Smith, with Mrs. Jas. A. Garfield's Express Permission, to the Memory of Our Late Illustrious President.

OPEN TO ALL. | GARFIELD | Grandest Feature of the Age.

It offers cash for every hour's work, and is as simple as A B C. Any boy or girl can compete as readily and successfully as the most illustrious professor of English letters. It is a field of Pleasure, and if the competitor so chooses, "a new way to pay old debts."

The AWARDS from $500 to $1 will be paid in gold. To edit the contest with all due care, we have engaged Mr. Emerson Bennett, the distinguished author, and Mr. W. R. Balch, compiler of "Garfield's Words," and late managing editor of the American, who will be assisted by a sufficient corps of aids. In the hands of these gentlemen Lexiconic Orthography will become an affair of national moment, arousing the liveliest interest wherever the English language is spoken, and call into active play the best talents and the most commendable abilities of our people.

THE LATEST NOVELTY IN THE WORLD OF LETTERS.

Every contestant will be quite as much astonished at the result as those who have never before considered the wonders of our language; and the superficial egotist, who would have scornfully scouted the idea of not understanding his mother tongue, will be taught a beneficial, even though a humiliating, lesson.

Never was any plan proposed that offered to railroad travellers a more fascinating way of occupying the dull hours in the railroad train. It is impossible to read when the car is shaking, but, with a pencil and paper, Lexiconic Orthography can be most advantageously followed, to both profit and delight. Try it on your next journey.

Seven degrees of honor and seven classes of awards are equally open to all who choose to avail themselves of the privilege. Who shall win? Is it not as likely to be the toiling mechanic as the wealthy merchant? the modest pupil as the learned professor? the humble workwoman as the lady of fashion? Both sexes, all classes, all ranks, all ages, will contend for the honor and glory of winning, even if caring naught for the pecuniary reward: but who among the multitude shall be the immortal seven to place their names within the laurel wreath on the Garfield Lexiconic Acrostic Souvenirs, surrounding the beloved brow of him who has gone down the dark valley amid the mournful weepings, not only of a nation, but of a world?

In the editing of Lexiconic Orthography we pledge ourselves to be governed by conscientious impartiality, and to decide with unbiased judgment between each and all, and award to merit what to merit is due, "without fear, favor, affection, or the hope of reward."

A prize is hereby offered for the best eight-line poem or acrostic, or the two combined, on the name Garfield, to be inserted on the Garfield Souvenirs.

For explanations, rules of both contests, date of closing, sample copy of the HERALD, etc., send 10 cents. (Positively no free copies.)

THE ORIENTAL CASKET.

The initial number will be published January 1, 1882, and will be a first-class, high-toned, independent literary monthly, printed on the very best quality of cream-tinted paper, and be filled with choicest gems from the greatest living writers, and be under the editorial management of EMERSON BENNETT, the popular Novelist and Author. Premiums to subscribers $1,000 in GOLD. Honorable life subscription to one inhabitant of each of the 49 States and Territories.

$2 Per Annum. Single Copies 25c.

It is our intention to start still another paper, just as soon as the Oriental Casket is firmly established and so continue to do until we have a first-class publication representing every branch of industry, art, and science that can be profitably represented in this country.

THE AGENTS' HERALD.

Voluntarily appeared before Magistrate of Court No. 8, L. Lum Smith, who doth swear that the circulation of the November (1881) HERALD will exceed 200,000 copies.

L. LUM SMITH.

Subscribed before me this second day of November, 1881.

ROBERT R. SMITH.

I will trust any Man, Woman, and Child in North America for a year's subscription if asked during next 30 days.

GARFIELD ACROSTIC SOUVENIRS.

Application for United States Letters Patent was made on November 2, 1881. The prices will be 25c. 35c. 50c. 75c. $1.00, $2.50, and $5.00. The larger size will be in color, and will be beautiful works of art. Orders may be sent in now, to be filled at the earliest possible moment, in the order received.

IMITATION STAINED GLASS.

Consists of thin, tough sheets of a brilliantly colored medium (made expressly for this purpose). Presents a new, neat and fascinating occupation for ladies and gentlemen, beautifying their homes, places of business, etc. Fills a vacancy long felt in the ornamentation of common window panes. Diploma awarded by American Institute, and Pennsylvania State Fairs.

Samples, Testimonials, etc., by Mail, 25c.

SMITHOGRAPHY.

The art of drawing portraits, etc., with pen, pencil, or crayon from small photos, etc., to life size, in so easy that a successful knowledge may be acquired from simply reading the printed instructions. Over 100,000 were sold during the Centennial. It is the best drawing teacher known. Highly recommended by artists and teachers. Can be learned in five minutes.

Price by Mail, 25c., $1.25 and $2.50.

CO-OPERATIVE ADVERTISING AGENCY AND CIRCULATING NEWSPAPER LIBRARY.

This enterprise will require a large building and is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible and I hope will be thoroughly organized by March 1, 1882. I cannot give particulars until then.

In order to avoid confusion with a daily average of several thousand letters, and therefore a possible delay of several days in the answering of your application, address me exactly as below, and it will be attended to within five minutes.

Worldly Trifles.

The intelligent compositor left out the letter d in a paragraph about a beautiful actress, and informed the public that crows flocked to see her wherever she went.

We ask you to read the advertisement of Darby's Prophylactic Fluid, which appears in our issue of to-day. It is a wonderful healing remedy, a most powerful disinfectant, and a positive germ destroyer, and is perfectly safe even in the hands of the most inexperienced. It is highly recommended by eminent physicians and chemists, and endorsed by hundreds of others who have used it and know its valuable properties. It costs but a trifle, and will save much suffering, time and money. Darby's Fluid has long been recognized as a household article for universal family use. Prepared by J. H. ZELIN & Co., Manufacturing Chemists, Sole Proprietors.

A will contest now in progress in New York is brought by relatives on the ground that the dead man's wife used undue influence to gain his estate! Well! where is this will-contesting business to stop? Is not a man free to leave his property to his own wife?

Many miserable people drag themselves about with failing strength, feel that they are sinking into their graves when Parker's Ginger Tonic would begin with the first dose, to bring vitality and strength back to them.—Sun.

A boy in a country school was reading the following sentence, "The light-house is a landmark by day and a beacon by night," and he rendered it thus, "The light-house is a landlord by day and a deacon by night."

A youthful female lawyer would feel insulted at being called a bar maid, and yet that's just what she is.

GORHAM, N. H., July 14, 1879.
GENTS—Whoever you are, I don't know; but I thank the Lord and feel grateful to you to know that in this world of adulterated medicines there is one compound that proves and does all it advertises to do, and more. Four years ago I had a slight shock of palsy, which unnerved me to such an extent that the least excitement would make me shake like the ague. Last May I was induced to try Hop Bitters. I used one bottle, but did not see any change; another did so change my nerves that they are now as steady as they ever were. I used to take both hands to write, but now my good right hand writes this. Now, if you continue to manufacture as honest and good an article as you do, you will accumulate an honest fortune and confer the greatest blessing on your fellow-men that was ever conferred on mankind.
TIM BURCH.

A New York paper says Patti is fat, dumpy, a little lame, her teeth are irregular, her mouth large, her eyes wary, and she shows signs of age. Well that in thunder are they paying fabulous prices to go and see her for, then? If we forgot her voice. Of course they go to hear her sing. It don't make any difference about the looks, as long as the voice is there. And yet, if she was handsome, had a gait that would take your breath away, and had beautiful blue eyes that sparkled like diamonds and could speak whether her mouth or coat did or not, and lips red ripe and tidy to pick, and teeth that looked as though they would help a smile along amazing, and a heart that was the boss, she could feel more like going a long distance to hear her sing "Darling, you are Growing Bald."

The symptoms of Itching Piles are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, most at night, seems as if pin worms were crawling in or about the rectum. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.
For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.
I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him: his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.
My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.
The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.
I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.
I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston
Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.
Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.
Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

READ THE PROOF:
Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.
The great Family Medicine for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Consumption, General Debility, Faintness at the Stomach, Nervousness, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum and the effects of overwork.
The best and surest purifier of the blood, containing nothing but pure Roots and Herbs. Warranted to contain no injurious ingredients.
This Balsam has actually cured Consumption after Tubercles had formed upon the lungs.
TESTIMONIALS from well known people near home who can be seen and these statements verified. If you are threatened with any throat or lung trouble, as you value your life, do not procrastinate. If you have catarrh, a hacking cough, tickling in the throat, or any symptom which may indicate the approach of that terrible disease, consumption, commence using FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM now, to-day. A 50 cent bottle to start with, but if you have faith in it, a dollar bottle holding three times as much, is cheaper. Six bottles can be bought for $5 of any druggist or at any country store.
We tell you in deep earnestness that this Shaker medicine is almost miraculous in its effects Read the Proof.

FAITH WHITCOMB.
"It Cured Mother."
Winchester, Mass., July 12, 1881.
My mother came very near dying from pneumonia last winter, and her lungs were left in a weak condition. Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has stopped the cough and has cured her dizziness. It is the only medicine that would help her. Yours truly, B. F. Holorook.

A Boston Merchant's Testimonial.
No 27 Court street, Boston, March 13, 1881.
My daughter was prostrated with a terrible cough, after other remedies had failed, and my daughter had become so much worse that we were all completely discouraged, she commenced the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam and after using it less than one month she is well. Shall be glad to answer all enquiries. B. A. Clark.

Fact Stranger than Fiction.
The Herald has the following wonderful case: The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell, wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:
To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the sick a favor by publishing my statement in full. Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fever, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased, and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-five pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.
Respectfully yours,
Mrs. E. N. Wardwell.
Pine street, Swampscott, Sept. 15.

Cured after her Physician gave her up.
South Boston, Mass., Jan. 30, 1881.
Editor Boston Herald:
My niece has been under medical treatment for a dangerous cough for one year and a half, the physician expressing the opinion that she could not live six months. She has used less than one bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, yet it cured her cough; she is gaining fast; she breathes freely and feels like a new woman. Do recommend this Balsam to consumptives and you will do a world of good. Mrs. M. F. Gardner.

"Almost at Death's Door."
134 Shawmut street, Chelsea, March 1, '81.
I was almost at death's door with a cough.—Nothing would help me until I learned of the great Shaker Remedy, Faith Whitcomb's Balsam is strange as it may seem a 50 cent bottle has removed the soreness from my chest and my cough is nearly gone. I feel that another bottle will effect a complete cure. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott.

Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cures Cancerous Humors.
Mrs N. G. Russell of Upton, who had been under medical treatment for heart disease, at times breathing with difficulty and suffering exceedingly from a swelling or tumor which appeared upon her side in the region of the heart, used Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using one bottle the swelling had subsided, but to her surprise and dismay an eruption resembling erysipelas had appeared upon her hands. With much anxiety she summoned her physician who inquired what she had been taking. Mrs. Russell replied: "Nothing but Faith Whitcomb's Balsam; what shall I do, doctor?" "Do?" replied the family physician, "Keep on taking the Shaker medicine, for it is driving out the humor and will cure you." This occurred three weeks ago, and to-day Mrs. Russell is nearly well, through the persistent use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Balsam.—Boston Herald, Aug. 20, 1881.
Write or call upon Mrs. Russell, and also upon her family Physician for further particulars.

It Cures the Shop Girls.
Last summer I was obliged to give up my work on account of severe cough; three physicians said was going in quick consumption, but after using Faith Whitcomb's Balsam my cough is better, I gained in flesh and have a good appetite.

Having suffered all winter from a distressing cough, I was induced to try Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, and before using all of two bottles I find myself entirely cured and can truthfully recommend it as the best remedy I have ever used.
G. N. Veeder.

Saved! Saved! Saved!
I am happy to say that Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has cured my cough, of which I had despaired of ever being cured. I can now sleep without coughing at all, all of which I owe to Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. I only now need strength.

EASTERN RAILROAD.—The annual meeting of the stockholders and holders of certificates of indebtedness of the Eastern Railroad was held at the Meionaon, Boston, recently, President E. B. Phillips presiding for the former and W. P. Phillips for the latter.

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and accepted, the election of six directors by the certificate holders and of three by the stock holders, for the ensuing year was then proceeded to. The following-named gentlemen were elected certificate holders: Elijah B. Phillips of Boston, Jacob C. Rogers of Peabody, George P. King of Boston, George S. Morrison of New York, Richard Olney of Boston, Alfred P. Rockwell of Boston. Stockholders, John Cummings of Woburn, Samuel C. Lawrence of Medford, and Charles Houghton of Boston.

In the choice of the above, 6955 certificates of indebtedness, and 34,280 shares of stock were voted on, and the ballot in both cases was, with a single exception, unanimous.

Contrary to the expectation of a portion of the stockholders, no action was taken toward assessing the stock, with the object in view of reducing the bonded indebtedness; nor indeed would such action, it is said, be in any way possible or legal. The newly-elected directors organized by the election of E. B. Phillips as President, and F. I. Amory Clerk.

The annual report of the Directors for the year ending Sept. 30, 1881, shows both the largest gross and net earnings of any year in the history of the road. The gross earnings show an increase of $189,217.63, and the net of $139,672.93 over those of the preceding year. The value of the property has been fully maintained by the amount charged to operating expenses. By the sale of securities held by the company and the use of $100,266.64 of the net earnings of the year, the remainder of the floating debt outstanding at the time of the reorganization has been paid. The year upon which the road has just entered opens with as large an increase as was shown in the year covered by this report. The board also expresses its appreciation of the fidelity to the interests of the corporation shown by the heads of the departments, as well as the employes generally.

One of the most disgusting things at the theatres is the "encore" fiend, who claps his hands that are hard as leather until a singer repeats. This fiend is more trouble at a variety performance where girls sing. In many cases the girls are to blame themselves. They come out and sing some song that the majority of the audience has heard a hundred times, and don't want to hear, and before they leave the stage look around at a few "gillies" as much as to say, "For heaven's sake call me out again, or I shall lose my situation," and then the three or four idiots begin to clap their hands and kick the floor. Nine-tenths of the audience is bored and they look around at the clacquers as though they would like to eat them raw, but the clappers keep it up until the dizzy songstress comes out, all smiles, as though she had been unanimously chosen to sing again. Some day a bored audience will get up and go out bodily, and leave the half dozen clacquers to witness the triumph of the songster, and that will put a stop to encores.—This practice on cheap singers does an injury to first-class artists, because they are expected to respond to an encore, and many times they do so to the detriment of their voices.

The incorrect and highly sensational manner in which items from Peabody are given in the Salem News is thus happily described by the Salem Gazette, in referring to an account of the fire at the residence of the late Mr. Isaac Elliott: "Some of us could not help smiling at the sensational way in which this event was served up under the enterprising dispensation of the period.—The headings of one daily paper were, "The Fire Fiend," "Disastrous Conflagration in Peabody" and "as we go to press the flames are raging furiously, the house being totally enveloped in flames." And then this magnificent and thrilling description wound up with the modest statement that the flames were "under control, and the damage will be mostly by smoke and water."

At the recent Methodist conference at Cincinnati Bishop Wiley told the clergymen they must not kiss women as it was a dangerous practice. Well, the churches will keep on until there won't be any fun left. The Presbyterians won't let people dance, the Methodists kick on smoking and kissing, and all the churches prevent something. It will get so after a while that all we can do will be to join the Baptists and go in swimming. The Baptists will never go back on a fellows going in swimming.

A subscription paper was once circulated with the following charitable object in view:—"We agree to give the sums set against our names to pay the organist and a boy to blow the same."

Our neighbor is again evasive in regard to Johnson's Encyclopædia. We have asked in all fairness, and as civilly as we know how, that our neighbor would back up his story that this book could be bought FREELY in Boston of more than one dealer, at twenty per cent. less than rates, by giving the name or names of any publisher other than Estes & Lauriat. This he has refused to do. His proposition to furnish us the name of the dealer if we wish to present him with a set, is only a blind. We don't think the information is of as much value as that. We have denied the statement as given by our neighbor. Until he proves to the contrary, we shall continue to do so. When he gives the name of any publisher other than the one mentioned, and we are satisfied that he is right, we will frankly acknowledge ourselves in error. Will our neighbor accept our challenge?

NOTICE

We publish to day 50,000 copies of the "OAK HALL OUTLINE BOOK FOR JUVENILE ARTISTS," —a superior box of water colors goes with each book. The book contains 50 original designs by our best artists. Prizes of $20 and $10 are offered for the best colored books returned to us before Feb. 1. A single book and box of water colors costs 2 cents; but as the boxes are not mailable we shall not take single orders except from those who call for them. But we will send four copies, with boxes, for $1.00, and prepay the express to any address. This is the cheapest and prettiest gift for children in the market, and to secure any, it will be necessary to order immediately. Address
